Now, I am assuming that the condition of a beggar is not a desirable one. It is evident that the man mentioned in the antique story was not forced to beg through lack of wit. Therefore, his environment, or his education, or his training, (they all mean the same), as wrong. If he had been trained to habits of thrift, his state would not have been one of beggary.

In spite of Jefferson, all men are not created equal. Life is one great handicap. Some men were born with the instinct to save their money. They are the "tight-wads," and the saving idea has become a mania, a Why are we, the nine-tenths of the people. This article is not addressed to them, but to the other nine-tenths Why are we, the nine-tenths of the people, always in a condition of financial decrepitude? It is because we have lacked the hereditary qualities leading to a life of thrift, and our environment has not corrected the deficiency. The earning power varies with the individual. The secret of thrift is to make the savings proportionate to the income. Everybody knows this, but everybody does not act upon it. Why not? Because everybody has not been trained. If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men's cottages had been princes' palaces.

Then the thing to do is to make this idea of saving some money a habit, to change the thought into executive power, to convert the dream into saving grace. There are only two places where this can be done, and only one time of life. The places are the home and the school, and the time of life is early youth. And organized attempt on the part of the community to control the home environment and customs of children is probably a long way off, but then acts in school can in a great measure be controlled without interfering with individual liberty. With this in view banking institutions have extended their operations into our public schools, and offered the children the opportunity of investing their pennies in a bank account, which becomes an asset. (Of course, the dime-theatre, the merry-go-round, the nickel-in-the slot, the confectioner, and the dentist will suffer some loss from this.)

With the consent and co-operation of the Board of Education, the Molsons Bank has established a savings branch in the public schools of the town of Simcoe, Each pupil is supplied with a small pass-book, and the deposit ledger is kept by the Principal of the school. The bank keeps a special school savings account, and sends a messenger to the school for the money once a week, and the accounts are regularly audited. Sums of five cents or any multiple thereof may be deposited. The system is similar to that adopted by the Bank of British North America in the Hamilton public schools, and is working perfectly. It was installed in the Simcoe schools three weeks before the summer holidays of 1909, and during the three weeks the deposits amounted to $75. The deposits have been quite spontaneous, and at the present time (April, 1910), the amount shows a balance of between $400 and $500 to the credit of the children.

Withdrawals may be made at any time. Families may make small deposits during the prosperous season through their children without the inconvenience of going to the bank Touching instances of the availability of these accounts in times of stress, have been revealed by teachers in the cities where the system is in vogue. Many cases where there would have been no asset had these accounts not been maintained.

The only time taken up in the school in attending to the work is a few minutes once a week—and suppose it took up one hour, with arithmetic lesson could be of greater value?

The possibilities of this system are almost endless, and the opportunity of inculcating habits of thrift among the children should lead every parent to give the scheme his hearty co-operation and encouragement. Let your children take their five and ten-cent pieces to school, and you will find that in a year or two the whole amount, with interest at the current rate, is immediately available, if necessary, and that the boy or girl who deposits the money will have developed habits of thrift that time cannot eradicate.

I am certain, gentlemen, you all appreciate the far-reaching nature and the gravity of the course indicated. I have no object in writing, except that I am deeply interested in the boys of the town. I therefore respectfully request that a committee of representative members of the Board be appointed to look into the whole matter. Of one thing I am certain, namely, that scores of parents in town will be deeply grateful to you for introducing a system whose result will be to help them to teach their children to be thrifty, even though cheap allurements around town have to go out of business. But who will care if they do, as long as the boys are saved "For God and Home and Native Land."

HOURS OF LABOUR CUT FOR 600 EMPLOYEES

McCormick Mfg. Co. Make a Popular Move—No Reduction in Wages

(London Advertiser, June 13th, '10.)

The following notice was posted in the factory of the McCormick Manufacturing Company on Saturday:

"Hereafter, the girls will commence work at 7:30 a.m., and quit at 5:30 p.m., making a nine hour day, in place of ten, as it has been all along. The men will commence at 7 a.m., and quit at 5:30, in place of 6 o'clock."

Perhaps the most pleasant feature of the announcement was that although there will be a reduction in hours, there will be no reduction in pay. This will mean from 5 to 10 per cent. increase in wages, and will amount to a very large sum to the firm annually.

An Advertiser representative called on Mr. T. P. McCormick, vice-president of the company, this morning, who confirmed the above, and said that the reason the firm made this move was that after a close study of conditions they felt that they would get more efficient service from their employees, and that a reduction in hours would be mutually profitable to all.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

DELANEY WANTS TO MAKE A FOURTH CHAMPION

NEW YORK, Sept 17 It seems that Billy Delaney has rescinded his decision and will not withdraw from the fighting game until he see the crown torn from the dusky brow of Jack Johnson and Al. Kaufman of California seated in the King pugilist's chair. Delaney admits at this stage of the game that Jack Johnson is the greatest fighter in the world but—wait a little while.

Delaney has made three champions. After he makes the fourth he will retire so he says. But with Delaney retiring is something like the rich man's promise to cease making money. He always wants a little bit more.

Speaking in an unbiased vein recently Delaney said he was ready to give credit where credit is due. He declared that at this time Johnson stands at the head of the heavyweight division by right of clean and straightforward conquest. However, Delaney knows as well as every other follower of fighting that all champions must end their fighting days.

Here is Delaney's present opinion of the black champion:

"Jack Johnson has everything on the books. He is fast, clever, and never let any one tell you that he cannot hit. Johnson can finish his man with either hand and he can swing, hook, jab, uppercut, shift or drive it home with an ever-hand motion. No heavyweight ever had all that except the Texan.

"He can box like Corbett, hit like Fitz and he is able to use his strength skilfully enough to make it amount to as much as Jeff's. Jack can stand and stall all day if he wants to and let the other fellow do all the fighting. He is as great at long range as at infighting. There is no situation in the ring that Jack Johnson is not the master of, and he has, with care, several years of service before Father Time bows him in defeat."

IT IS THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT IN BASEBALL GAMES

It's the little things which count in baseball, things which escape the average fan's eye but which are more frequently termed "luck." There's a whole lot of gamble to it. John "Muggsy" McGraw's old theory is that playing for the percentage of chances in a baseball game is the secret of success. It was exemplified by him last Tuesday when a little device to Wiltse in the second inning of the second game put the Giants on the road to a victory, which afterwards developed into a slaughter, and put the Pirates off their feet.

There were three on base and two out and Leifield had given Wiltse three balls and one strike. It was pretty certain that Leifield would put the next one over and Wiltse looked at McGraw inquiringly.

"Shall I hit the first good one?" Wiltse asked.

"Let it go," shouted McGraw. "Get yourself in the two-three hole."

By that McGraw meant that the batter would be better off with two strikes and three balls on him than one strike and three balls. Wiltse let the pretty strike go by with regret, but a minute later he saw the idea. McGraw ordered all the runners to start with the pitch. If Wiltse got a base on balls the ywould all be safe anyway, and if he struck out it made no difference. They had all to gain and nothing to lose. They were all off as Leifield drew back his arm.

Wiltse smacked a little grounder toward Wagner, but the hoofbeats of so many runners confused the mighty Hans and he fumbled the ball just long enough for Wiltse to be safe at first. On account of the flying start two runners crossed the plate and that started New York on the road to victory. If Wiltse had hit at the ball when he only had one strike on him it would have been impossible to score more than one run, as the runners could not have taken a flying start. Again, but for the flying start Wagner could have thrown one of the runners out at second.

"A little thing like one strike or a ball may not seem like much," said McGraw, after the runs had been scored, "but you can see that it pays to keep your eyes open for just such chances. By getting Wiltse in the two-three hole we had all to gain and nothing to lose. That according to my way of thinking, is the time to take chances."

Jimmy Archer Represents Canada in World's Series

Canada persists in breaking into the baseball limelight of theworld's series. It is now a practical certainty that the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics will be the contenders for the world's championships next month. Last year Catcher "Mooney" Gibson, of London, represented the land of the maple leaf behind the bat for the Pittsburg Pirates when they beat the Detroit Tigers. This year another catcher upholds Canada's end. Jimmy Archer, who learned ti play the game on the corner lots around Toronto with Bill O'Hara and contemporary players, is regarded as the mainstay of the Cubs' catching department. The presence of Archer with the National league champions lends additional interest to Canada to the world's series, as did Gibson's great work with the Pirates last season.

Jimmy Archer has had all the luck the able, conscientious ball player deserves and then some. Some five or six years ago Archer was an outfielder on the Atalanta Southern league team. He was all right in the field, but not a marvel at the bat unless it was negatively. One day the manager ordered him to go behind the bat. "Never caught a game in my life," replied Archer. "Try it," returned the manager. He did—and made good.

He was tried by a big league club soon after, but turned back almost at once. Then Detroit looked him over, sized him up as a fair catcher, but a "flat-footed thrower" who couldn't be taught to take the usual step towards the base, and sent him to Buffalo. In the fall of 1908 Chicago drafted him.

Chance let him throw naturally—often pegging them down in perfect form while squatting behind the plate—something impossible for other catchers to attempt—and King's disaffection gave him the chance he needed. It is said that the reason Archer can throw so speedily and accurately from a crouch is that a scar on the arm from an old burn has affected the muscles in such a way that he gets power and control impossible for other catchers.

Archer is 2 7years of age, weighs 276 pounds and is 5 feet 10 inches tall. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and his home now is in Toronto. Beginning to play professional ball at Fargo, in 1904, he was with Atlanta in 1905. Pittsburg drafted him, but shipped him off to a minor league club from which Detroit took him for a mere look-over before sending him to Buffalo, from which club the Cubs secured him in 1908.

Archer is now accused of wanting to try his hand at pitching by one exchange. He is credited with being the handiest utility man in the National league, not even Artie Hofman being able to cope with him now. Jimmie has been of great service as an ubstitute first-base man during the recent crippled rendition of the Chicago team, and deserves everything he can get in the way of praise.

Twelve Players Largely Responsible For Winning Over 500 Games

Twelve baseball players have done most of the work which resulted in the Chicago Cubs winning over 500 games in the past consecutive five years. Through the fluctuations and changes of a big league lineup, these men have remained with the local team and have had wonderful success.

Those 500 and more victories are a baseball record. Therefort there is going to be a club which at present is proposed under the name of the Five Hundred Club, and will enroll on its membership the following players: Frank L. Chance, manager and first baseman; Joseph B. Tinker, shortstop; John J. Evers, second baseman; Harry Steinfeldt, third baseman; James T. Sheckard, left field; Arthur F. Hoffman, centre field; Frank Schulte, right field; John G. Kling, catcher; Mordecai Brown, pitcher; Orvall Overhall, pitcher; Edward M. Reulbach, pitcher; and John Pfeister, pitcher.

At present the Club team is practically the same as the one which won the pennant in 1906. John Kling is the only man who has not played the full five years, but since he was technically and legally a member during the 1909 season, he is to be one of the club. There will be no dissenting murmurs in the baseball world.

The purest record to the 500 mark is the one made by the New York Giants, who won in five seasons, 1904-1908, inclusive, 487 games.

MADE 6,000 BASE HITS

It seems quite likely that the Cubs will reach a total of 526 in five years before this season closes. Several other records of theirs have been computed, namely: During that time the 500 Club had been at bat nearly 24,000 times and has made over 6,000 base hits and almost 3,000 runs. Such a record would give the team a batting average of .253 for the entire five seasons. Almost 20,000 put outs have been made during the five years, and nearly 10,000 assists. But 1,000 errors are recorded, with the total chances reaching 30,319. Its fielding average for the five campaigns would be .965. Manager Chance leads the five-year batting average with .290 and Jack Pfester foots the list with an even .100. Harry Steinfeldt has played in 697 games, and would have had a larger record but for a three-week lay-off in the last Eastern trip due to illness. Brown has pitched over 200 games. Sheckard has scored 362 runs, leading Evers but one for the entire decade. Steinfeldt has a record of 600 base hits.

Manager Chance is quoted with the opinion that the Club's success this season has been mainly due to their batting. He was asked, according to the tale, how he succeeded in keeping the team in the lead for the National League honours. Chance replied that he was not responsible for the success of the culb, and that the team deserved all the credit.

DOES NOT DRIVE THEM

"I do not drive my men," Chance is said to have explained. "I ask them to give me their best, which they have been doing, and you see the result." Chance also mentioned that good physical condition was an important factor in the Club's showing, but he had misfortune with his pitchers. Ed. Reulbach fell ill. Overall was knocked out and Brown developed slowly.

"Pfeister was slow in developing," said Chance, "and then broke his hand. Now, had all these men remained in shape, I believe that we would have won the pennant by this time, judging by the manner in which we have increased our lead under the handicap.

"The Cubs all hit well an dtruly," he concluded. "Schulte is coming as I expected, and Hofman is up to his ability, and Evers and Tinker are smashing out all hits when they are needed, which counts in a ball game. They have been doing that practically all season and are responsible for the many series we took from the Eastern and Western clubs."

When Foot Runners Took Big Chances

BY LOU E. MARSH
In the Toronto Star Weekly

Stories of professional foot runners being shot at for winning and shot at for losing races are usually reminiscent of the good old days of twenty years ago, when the country was flooded with crooked sprinters and half-milers. The other day Walter R. Knox, the famous Orillia athlete, dropped into town and the conversation rounded to gun-play over foot races. Now, Knox is a pile fellow. He has by hard experience learned the wisdom of keeping his mouth shut and his ears open. Therefore when he rounded to and commenced to talk about his adventures in that line, I was more than surprised that he should loosen up. However, it is a cinch he never considered for a second that his tales of tight quarters would ever reach the calcium of public print. Even at that the stories were only revealed after much adroit questioning or polite silence at the proper time.

"Down in Mexico I bucked up marked Walter. "I had to give a runner down there a three-yard start for a big belt. The night before an ugly-looking greaser came to my room and said: 'I know you won't win this race to-morrow.'

"'Why won't I?' I asked.

"'I know you won't,' he said, producing a 'Gat,' with a bore as big as a military rifle. 'I'll be 75 yards down the course, and if you're ahead there I'll bore you and if you win, half a dozen Mexicans will be at the tape to carve you up. The chief of police was a friend of mine, so I told him. He said: 'You run and win and I'll look after you.'

"When the gun cracked for the race I drew level with my man early, and then dropped back and watched for the greaser at the 75-yard mark. He was there. When I got by I shot to the front and won. Then I trotted back by the greaser, and when he made for me the chief made for him and there was no trouble.

CARRIED A GUN HIMSELF

"Up in British Columbia the night before a race I received a message to meet a certain man. I told my backers, and they told me to meet him and see what was afoot.

"Before I went I threw on my raincoat, and, putting an automatic pistol in the side pocket, I met the man. He took me a quarter of a mile out of town, where two other chaps met us. Then he said: "You————, if you win that race to-morrow I'll kill you!' and he poked the gun into my ribs hard enough to hurt. I had my hand in my pocket with the gun trained on his heart. I knew if he pulled the trigger the clutch of my fingers would give him his receipt."

"Did you win?"

"Yes, I did."

"What happened?"

"Well, this chap's friends were at the tape when Ibroke it, but they made their sneak. When I left the crowd to get my clothes the chap who poked me with the "Gat." started after me. He was a bad one, too, but my backer, a crippled hotelman, watched for him and when he poked his head through the crowd my way, knocked him senseless with his cane or crutch. He went down like a poleaxed steer, I thought he was killed.

"They've had the gun on me more than once, but they have four-flushed so often about getting me that I am more afraid of some disappointed bettor potting me without saying a word than I am about these chaps who show guns and knives and tell you what they are going to do.

DRUGGED IN SEATTLE

"They got me once in Seattle, but they drugged me. They gave me colourless iodine before the race. I was dizzy all days in spells. When the race came I never started away so fast in all my life. I went like a bullet and was in a deadly terror lest one of those staggering dizzy spells would hit me and I would lose.

Knox has a couple of bullet scars, but he did not receive the mover feet races. Those who know know Knox will say he is the gamest, coolest athlete who ever stood in spikes, and claim that he could if he cared he the all-around champion to-day.

He has been clocked a hundred in 9 3-5 seconds by good men and can always beat 10 1-5if hehas to, is a fair 220 man, jumps 23 feet and over all the time, pole valuts well enough to beat Eddie Archibald, puts the shot 44 feet, the discus 124, and can high jump 5 feet 10 inches. Knox is only a 160 pound man, at that, but he is a good caretaker. He will likely go to England next summer, and if he does he'll beat Postle, Eastman, and that crowd.

NO ODDS ON WORLD'S SERIES

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—New York betters laugh at the odds of 5 to 3 on the Cubs, demanded in the early offer of wagers from the supporters of the Athletics in the coming series for the world's baseball chagpionship.

Probably a majority of New York fans pick the Cubs to win the series, but it is doubtful whether they will offer the slightest odds on the Chicagoans.

The thing that keeps the Cubs from being a big favorite is the recognized strength of "Jack" Pitchers, and the fear that stand Chance's men on their heads.

From a betting standpoint, the coming series is attracting almost as much attention locally as at either Chicago or Philadelphia

CHURCH NOTES

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH NOTICES

The announcements for the week are as follows:

The regular midweek service will be held on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. The Pew Committee will be in the church at the close of the prayer meeting, to allocate sittings to those desiring them.

The regular monthly meeting of the Faithful Workers' Mission Band will be held on Thursday afternoon at 4.15.

The people of St. Paul's are looking forward to the services of the coming Sabbath with interest. The day is being observed in most of the churches of the land as "Rally Day." The Pastor will preach in the morning on some subject relating to the religious education of the young. In the evening he will preach a sermon specially to men. Mr. George McKay, a friend of Mr. Pogue's, while in Philadelphia, and a member of his church there, will address a mass meeting of men in St. Paul's Church at the close of the evening service. This meeting is being held under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Paul.

FAMOUS EVANGELIST

Will be Here for Services in St. James and Mark St. Churches

Arrangements have been made for evangelistic services this fall, in both St. James' and Mark Street Methodist churches. Rev. R. H. Whiteside, a minister of the Montreal Conference and a well-known evangelist, will assist in this campaign, beginning in St. James' Church on Nov. 6, and in Mark Street church on Nov. 20.

PALE, ANAEMIC GIRLS

The languid, semi-invalid girl is no longer popular. Firm flesh, rounded form and a healthy glow to the complexion are the results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Mrs. Goodson, 104 Sebastopol Street, Montreal, Que., writes: "My daughter's appetite was bad and she was pale and bloodless. Since using Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food there is a marked change in her condition. She is stronger and healthier in every way."

ELECTED OFFICERS

The regular business meeting of St. Andrew's Y.P.S.C.E. was held last evening in the school hall, when a large number of the young people were present. After the devotional exercises the officers were elected as follows:

President—Mr. Edson Wegg.
Vice-President — Mr. Will Armstrong.
Recording Secretary—Miss Margaret Reid.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Ella Mathieson.
Treasurer—Miss Jennie Richardson.
Assistant Treasurer—Miss Marguret Rae.
Organist—Mr. Drysdale.
Assistant Organist — Miss Lizzie Shearer.

The following committees were appointed:

Prayer Meeting Committee—Miss E. Martin, convenor; Misses Eva Rae, and Jean Girven.
Missionary Com.—Miss Roma Langford, convenor; Miss Mae Lees, and Messrs. J. Sharpe and Fred Roune.
Lookout Com.—Mr. Norman Rae, convenor; Messrs. E. Curry, E. Reid and Misses Margaret Rae, Annie Girven and Ethel Richardson.
Social Committee—Miss Georgina Mowat, convenor; Misses Margaret Eaton, Ella Gerrard, Annie Reid. Messrs. Frank Gillespie, Murray Miller, J. Evans and Gordon Carter.
Music Com.—Miss Lizzie Shearer, convenor; Mr. Drysdale, Miss Helen Henry and Mr. Will Miller.

The meeting then closed in the usual way.

PLEASED WITH TRIP

The London Teachers' Association, with a membership of 16,500, arranged for a trip to Canada during the summer vacation this year. The party visited Quebec, Montreal, McDonald College, St. Anne de Bellevue, Ottawa, Algonquin National Park, Muskoka Lake, Toronto, Niagara Falls, and returned through Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Rapids to Montreal. In the September number of the "London Teachers" an account of the trip is given, and it shows how thoroughly the party enjoyed their trip The originator, Mr. Thos. Gautrey has written to the European Traffic Manager of the Grand Trunk System, through whom the trip was arranged, expressing gratification at the admirable way in which all the arrangements were carried out and intimating that the party was most enthusiastic, and that the trip, which covered the most attractive portions of Quebec and Ontario, will certainly be repeated next year.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Does it ever occur to you when something very unpleasant happens, that it isn't as bad as if it were twice as bad?

Among my friends I have one incurable optimist.

From every unkind blow that fate deals him—and it has dealt him several very harsh ones—he recovers himself with a smile.

And it isn't by any means the silly grin of the cheerful idiot — who doesn't know enough to be down in the mouth, either. It is the rainbow smile of "— the man worth while,

The man who can smile,
When everything goes dead wrong."

In sheer amazement at his refusal to appear in the least disconcerted, just after a knock-down blow that would have made most men go about looking like walking tombstones, I insisted one day that he explain himhimself, and he gave me the first sentence as the key to his optimism:

"When I was a little boy and anything I didn't like happened, I always tried to comfort myself with that 'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad.'

"No matter what the trouble was—whether I broke my leg or one of my pet rabbits died, or it rained the day of the Sunday School picnic, or I didn't get the skates I wanted for Christmas, I'd always cheer myself up with that 'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad.'

"And I still do."

A funny little notion, isn't it?

But isn't there a whole philosophy of life in it?

There are two points of view from which to look on life, and I am more and more coming to think that the question of happiness and unhappiness depends far more on which point of view you take than on the circumstances of your lie.

Seems to me as if all the world might be divided into two classes—the people who dwell on the mountain top of "'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad," and the people who dwell in the valley of "It's never as good as if it were better."

The people on the mountain are always looking compassionately down and seeing folks less fortunate than they.

The people in the valley are always looking enviously up and seeing folks who have much more than they.

The people on the mountain top have a way of always looking at the good things they possess.

The people in the valley never seem to see anything but the desirable things they lack.

There was an epigrab in Life theother day to this effect:

"The feminine pessimist worries because she is not as young as she once was; the optimist rejoices that she is not as old as she will be."

The first, you see, lived in the valley of "It's never as good as if it were better," and the second on the mountain of "'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad."

Of course they're both right. They both see things as they are.

The only difference is that the mountain dwellers are happy and the valley dwellers are not.

Which class do you belong to?

Or are you apt, like me, to migrate from one to the other?

If you are, why don't you do as I think I shall—have the motto of the mountain dwellers printed and hung where I can daily see it and daily be reminded into optimism by it:

"'Tisn't as bad as if it were twice as bad."

Complaints are being made of a considerable amount of poultry being stolen a few miles north of Keene.

Mr. G. T. Gall is spending his holidays in Ottawa.

Mrs. Sharpe visited friends in Belleville Friday.

DISAPPOINTED AT FAILURE OF EXCURSION TO LAND

Mr. Dan. Whetung, Sr., of Chemong, has received the following letter from Chief C. B. Canoe, of Georgina Island. In explanation, it might be said that on the recent excursion of the Chemong Athletic Club to Lake Simcoe it was found impossible to call at Georgina Island as advertised owing to a heavy gale of wind. Hence this letter:

Georgina Island, Sept. 12.

Mr. Dan. Whetung, Chemong—

Dear Sir,—With a very sad disappointment I am writing a few lines to say that if you were in that excursion it would not have been so. We know that you would have filled that bill thta was sent to us in three different mails, and stating in one of the correspondences, that the number would exceed thre or four times the number of your previous visit.

When we got this notice, as well as the bills I called a council and advised my people to make an extra preparation, for we are only a small band in proportion to other bands, so we left our work and made ample preparations for the reception for the visitors. Some say they left their work for one week in order to get all the requirements for the visitors, also making tents outside our homes and furnishing them for the comfort of the visitors. We also went so far as to get the eatables for the strangers and a public table would have been spread for the nourishment of their hunger. Some of the goods that were bought were of the perishable kind, so it was a total loss for us poor people. We also published your coming among our white friends on the mainland and there were hundreds upon hundreds came to Jackson Point to await the incoming of the boat, as advertised. Two or three rigs came from Scugog and got here in good time to see the excursion, also to hear the Alderville brass band. We waited all day Friday, and the wind that was on the lake was of no consequence to stop boats from runing. The government boat passed close to the Island at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and was running against the sea, and it was no trouble for her to go through the lake. The excursion boat would have come with the wind, without trouble, and we had everything ready to take them from the boat to the sand. Now it is useless to say any more to close all this, it is only tom foolery to us. Who is to be blamed?

I will write again one of my own personal letters, as this letter I am writing, voices the feelings of my people in general, for this is twice the the same thing occurred.

IT SAVES YOU WAITING

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call, write, or phone for appointments, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

NO DYSPEPSIA OR UNDIGESTED FOOD

Heartburn, Gas, Headache and All Stomach Distress Vanishes

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odours from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly cures Indigestion and removes such symptoms as Heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water brash, Nausea, Headache, Biliousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin, which will always, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

BEST PICTURES EVER SHOWN IN PETERBOROUGH

Don't fail to see the magnificent film at the Crystal, describing the overthrow of Barbarba ossa, the tyrant of Milan, Italy. Over five hundred actors take part in the cast.

Also, to-day, that grand picture entitled "The Doctor's Perfidy," a serio-comic, up-to-date story of hospital life and love. In addition to these two grand works of art there are two others equally interesting. All for 5c. admission, with the grand orchestra of five pieces additional. These pictures will be fully explained or lectured on, so that all may understand.

The general manager of the Independent Film Co., will be here this week to arrange with Mr. Edwards for a specially good service, and every patron of local moving picture houses knows what the pictures at the Crystal have been in the past.

Important to Ladies.

It is not often an opportunity occurs at your door to see the latest Parisian and New York styles in Hair Goods, yet such is the case, as Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, is visiting this town, and invites your inspection of these goods at his private apartments reserved at the Hotel.

These Hair Goods styles, when properly adjusted protect and ornament the head, soften and beautify the expression of the face, and consequently fone up an aged appearance. Be sure and see them at the Oriental Hotel on Friday, Sept. 23rd.

The Dilatometer.

A delicate instrument known as a dilatometer, devised to measure the expansion of metal used for watch wheels, will register the change in length of a piece of steel raised in temperature to a single degree.

The Crocodile.

The crocodile's lower jaw is not socketed in the skull, as is the case with other animals, but the skull is socketed in the jaw, so that the animal can lift the upper part of its head as upon a hinge and so capture whatever prey may be at hand without going to the trouble of getting upon its legs.

Horseshoeing.

Horseshoeing is very ancient. It is represented on a coin of Tarentum of about 350 B. C. It is said that William the Conqueror brought the first iron horseshoes to England.

Nye on Wagner.

Bill Nye, the humorist, once told Dean Hole that when he met Richard Wagner he said to him, "Your music is beyond my comprehension, but I always feel sure when I hear it that it is really much better than it sounds."

Palladium.

Palladium, which has the smallest coefficient of dilatation, is used for the mounting of astronomical instruments. The standard meter of France is made of palladium.

Flowers In Greece.

In Greece the language of flowers is developed with such detail and is so generally understood that a lover and his sweetheart sometimes carry on an ideal correspondence by means of clusters of loose blossoms.

Leeks In Wales.

In Wales it is considered very lucky to have house leeks grow on the houses, this being supposed to insure all those in the house from disease or disaster.

Vanadium.

Vanadium oxidizes in air with great difficulty, melts at 2,000 degrees and becomes red hot in hydrogen. Neither hydrochloric acid nor nitric acid attacks it. It is used in coloring glass and in making indelible inks.

Animals In Turkey.

In Turkey the partridge is detested because once it betrayed the prophet to his enemies, and its legs are red because they were dipped in the blood of Hassan. If a man kills a panther he is imprisoned for twenty-four hours and then is handsomely rewarded. The crane is respected, and it is a crime to kill it.

Siamese Pottery.

The art of making pottery was introduced into Siam from China in the eleventh century, and the original kilns were located near the ancient city of Swankhalok, and here the work of turning out what is known as Swankhalok ware was apparently continued until the city was destroyed during the Burmese invasions of 1765-1766.

SIRES AND SONS.

Representative Hughes of West Virginia served in both the Kentucky and the West Virginia legislatures before he entered congress.

Van H. Manning of Mississippi has been appointed chief clerk of the new bureau of mines in the interior department at Washington.

Sir William Crookes, the chemist, and Thomas Hardy, the novelist, were recently invested with the Order of Merit by King George at Marlborough House.

James J. Hill began work as a farm hand at 50 cents a day. His income now is estimated at $6,000 a day and his fortune at more than a hundred millions.

For seventy-four years Earl Nelson has been drawing a pension of $25,000 a year from the British government because he happens to be the son of a man who was the nephew of the brother of the victor at Trafalgar.

Gerald Du Maurier, who is coming next autumn to America as a star of the stage, is the son of the late George Du Maurier, famous for his satirical drawings in Punch and as the author of "Peter Ibbetson" and "Trilby."

Francis E. Leupp, newspaper man, biographer of Roosevelt and former commissioner of Indian affairs, whose study of the Indian, called "The Indian and His Problem," was published in the spring, was given the degree of doctor of laws last commencement day by his alma mater, Williams college.

Sir Clements Markham is regarded as the grand old man of British geography and exploring enterprise. His official connection with the Royal Geographical society has lasted for nearly half a century, and when he retired from the presidency in 1905 he had held that post continuously for twelve years.

Town Topics.

Gotham is to have another $3,000,000 hotel to help welcome the coming and bleed the parting guest.—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Boston has started a movement for public laundries. We didn't imagine that dear old cultured Boston had such a thing as dirty linen.—Detroit Free Press.

West Plains is trying hard to get a reputation as the "most rapidly growing dairy center in Missouri." The town is keeping a diary on the dairy.—Kansas City Star.

Considerable demand is reported in St. Louis for ice water tanks on the street corners. Next thing you know Milwaukee will be drinking ice water.—Canton (O.) Repository.

Pen, Chisel and Brush.

Willy Pogany, who illustrates an edition de luxe of "The Ancient Mariner," published recently, illustrated a similar edition of "The Rubaiyat" last year.

Henry Hering and Elsie Ward, both sculptors, pupils of Saint Gaudens in Paris and trusted to carry out the intentions of that great artist in the statues left unfinished at his death, have married.

Francois Coppee is the latest of writers to be honored by a statue in Paris, this effigy in bronze has been fashioned for erection in the Place St. Francois Xavier. It represents him with a cigarette between his fingers.

Birth Taxes In England.

The reign of Henry VIII. should have been a good one for the barbers. Men were then taxed for wearing beards and the tax was graduated according to the social standing of the wearer. A sheriff at Canterbury and three shillings and fourpence for the privilege of wearing whiskers. Queen Elizabeth was even more stringent. She decreed a tax on every beard of over two weeks' growth.

At one time there was a tax levied on births, a sliding scale being adopted. The child of a duke cost its father $150 in 1695, while the tax was only two shillings on the child of a commoner. Widowers and bachelors also were taxed.

His Stock In Trade.

Lady Knill, Lady Mayoress of London, who recently gave a banquet to the archbishops and bishops, is a woman of very religious and charitable sympathies. She is one of the three women in the world who possess the Order of the Holy Sepulchre, given to her for charitable work in the Roman Catholic diocese of Southwark, where she is known as "Queen of the Poor." In connection with her charitable work Lady Knill is rather fond of telling the story of a man to whom she gave a pair of boots. Some days later she met the man again wearing his old ragged pair. "What have you done with the pair I gave you?" she asked him. "Oh," replied the old rascal, unblushingly, "I left them off. These I am wearing are worth 10 shillings a day to me."—Tit-Bits.

Protecting Birds.

Nearly every native bird in New Zealand will be absolutely protected by law this year. The animals protection act provides that 1910 and every third year after that may, at the discretion of the governor in council, be declared a close season for native game. The absence of bird life in New Zealand is already most noticeable. Between Nelson and Hokitika, hardly any bird life at all is to be met with; the imported vermin, especially the stoat and weasel, have done their work of bird destruction only too well. In the region from Dunedin to the south, however, the tui and the pigeon are to be seen making bright the landscape with their presence.

Porto Rico.

The island of Porto Rico is 108 miles long, 38 miles broad and contains about 3,500 square miles, being about three-fourths the size of the state of Connecticut.

HUGH DELINE HAS BEEN ARRESTED ON A CHARGE OF MURDERING HIS WIFE

Taken in Custody by Provincial Detective Reburn and Constable Elias Williams and is Now in Peterborough Gaol—"I Am Innocent" He Said When Arrested.

DETECTIVE IS RETICENT

HAVELOCK, SEPT. 21.—Hugh Deline was arrested here to-night at 4 o'clock for the murder of his wife, Telisa Deline, at their home on the boundary of Belmont and Dummer Township, on Thursday night last. The arrest was made by County Constable Williams. It is believed that the evidence in hand is enough to convict Deline.

Matters looked more interesting this morning when Provincial Detective Reburn appeared on the scene. Williams has been suspicious of Deline since the tragedy, but Detective Reburn wished to have a talk with Deline before taking action. With this end in view, Reburn and Williams left Havelock on Tuesday to visit the Deline home. While they were going out one road, Deline, all unsuspecting, was coming in by a different route that he might make some purchases in town. When he appeared in town he was shadowed by Constable Bennett until the other officers returned.

It is believed that enough evidence has been secured to prove the charge against the man arrested. The case hinges on the fact that clothing belonging to Deline has similar stains on it to that on the clothing his wife wore when the tragedy occurred. It is also known that Deline changed his clothing from the time he left the Buchanan home until he arrived at Mrs. Newel's. It is very strange that if a man found his wife lying dead, he would change his clothing before giving the alarm. At first Deline denied that he had changed his clothing, but it is stated he has admitted the fact since.

The case summed up is that on Thursday night last, Hugh Deline left the home of Jas. Buchanan, with whom he had been working at 8 o'clock. He arrived at his own home, according to his own statement, at 8.30 o'clock. Mrs. Newel states that he did not arrive at her house, which is distant, about fifteen minutes' walk, until ten o'clock. How was the intervening one hour and a half spent? That is a question that Hugh Deline will be called upon to answer.

County Constable Williams has been working hard on the case ever since the tragedy, and when he combined forces with Provincial Detective Reburn, matters were speedily brought to a head. It was feared that Deline might skip out of the country before enough evidence was secured to justify an arrest.

Constable Williams made the arrest to-day, but no resistance was made on Deline's part. He merely said: "All right; but I am innocent."

Up to late on Tuesday night he still kept saying that he was innocent.

Deline is about 27 years of age, light complexion and medium height. He came from Madoc Township, where his parents still reside. He has always seemed a little queer to the neighbours, and it is believed that he is an epileptic. He has, at many different times, shown symptoms of it. He has a lisp in his speech, expectorates often, and it is said that when he is aroused, he will froth at the mouth. Neighbours remember queer actions on his part, one person saying that he would stop in his work in the field and shout, and, apparently, without reason. Last night, when talking to Constable Williams, at his home, he suddenly clutched the officer by the arm and said: "Why, I loved that woman!"

The accused appeared before Magistrate Joyce of Havelock, last night, and was remanded to appear at the inquest on Friday.

Would Say Nothing.

Hugh Deline, when seen last night, would say nothing at all about the tragedy. He talked very cheerfully, and said he might as well be happy. He told the reason he came to town yesterday. "We have had so many visitors lately that we were short of groceries, and I came to town to buy them. I don't know what they will do for supper. There is not a bit of tea in the house. He talked about his mother taking care of the children, and when your correspondent was leaving said: "You are not going away yet, are you?"

He has always been regarded as simple by his neighbours, but Constable Williams said yesterday he was not so simple that he did not know enough to keep his mouth shut about his wife's death.

Deline Here.

Deline was brought to Peterborough on the local C.P.R. train this morning in charge of Constable Elias Williams and Provincial Detective Reburn, and is now lodged in the local gaol, where he will be confined until Friday, when he will be taken to Havelock by High Constable Cochrane.

"It is a sad case," remarked Detective Reburn to the Examiner this morning. "The poor woman was living in a house over a mile from any other habitation, and she had not even a pair of boots. We found one boot around the house and that was all."

Detective Reburn decided to make any statement about Deline's arrest or about the case for publication.

"It is not fair for an officer to say anything about a man before he is brought to trial," he remarked. "Anything he has to say about the prisoner should be kept until he is in the court room so that the accused may have a chance to hear it. For that reason I must decline to go into the case with you, at least for publication."

The officer returned to Havelock at noon with Constable Williams. The inquest is to be resumed there on Friday afternoon and at the same time Deline will apear before Magistrate Joyce. The charge upon which he is arrested is that of having murdered his wife.

DR. CRIPPEN, MISS LE NEVE ARE COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Violent Demonstration Against the Typist This Morning on Her Way to Court--Looked For a While As if She Would be Mobbed---Crippen Got Through Almost Unnoticed

Examiner Special.

LONDON, ENG., SEPT. 21.—Doctor Crippen and Miss Leneve were this afternoon committed for trial by Magistrate DeRutzen, who remarked that the evidence seemed to be quite sufficient to send the case to a Grand Jury. This means that the prisoners will come up in October, Crippen on the murder charge, the girl as an accessory. The faces of both defendants grew pale when the commitment was made. Solicitor Newton said he offered no defence till then.

Only a large police escort prevented Miss Leneve being mobbed this morning while being removed from the Holloway jail to the Bow street police court, where the investigation of the Crippen murder case was continued. A great crowd followed the carriage, hissing and shouting. The unfortunate girl shrank terror-stricken between two officers who guarded her. The demonstration resulted from the evidence of Monday that Miss Leneve told neighbours of the probability of her marriage to Crippen after Mrs. Crippen was divorced. So great was the attention paid Miss Leneve this morning that Crippen was brought along in the 'Black Maria' and slipped in almost unnoticed. The witnesses this morning included an employee of Crippen's, who stated that the doctor never used hycosin in his business.

GRENADIER GUARDS' BAND FAREWELL TO CANADA

Famous Musical Organization Perform a Kindly Act When They Give a Concert for Benefit of Light-house Keepers at Belle Isle---Lonely Islanders "Marconigrammed" Their Thanks.

TORONTO, SEPT. 20.—A marconigram from the S. S. "Royal Edward" eastward bound from Quebec, 750 miles, received in the city yesterday, read:

"The Grenadier Guards Band, homeward bound on board the Royal Edward, paid a unique farewell to Canada from the navigating deck of the 'Royal Edward,' as she passed the Belle Isle light at 3.15 on Saturday.

"Captain Roberts, who, in common with all ocean navigators, appreciates the loneliness of the lighthouse keepers and the worth of their work, had suggested the impromptu concert to Bandmaster Williams as a unique method of bidding farewell to Canada, and at the same time livening the lonliness of the Light-keepers. The entire band had soon assembled on the navigating deck of the steamer.

"As the steamer passed Belle Isle—the isolated first gateway of the first Britain beyond the seas—the conductor's baton rose sharply and the opening bars of 'Rule Britannia' crashed out and were carried by the strong southerly breeze, to the lonely watchers on the cliff. Weather conditions were excellent—a clear sky and calm sea.

"It is doubtful if the band ever played to a more appreciative audience. The passengers' attentions were centred upon the lonely few who could be plainly discerned against the back ground of the little cluster of lime washed buildings which mark the lighthouses and Marconi station perched on a terrace of the beetling cliff. Four numbers were played in all—'Rule Britannia,' 'Highland Laddie,' 'Auld Lang Syne' and 'God Save the King.'

"While the steamer was still within sighting distance of the island the Marconi instrument in the wireless tower of the 'Royal Edward' sputtered out a message of thanks and appreciation from the light keepers. Their message added that they had never before heard a military band in their lonely eyrie and they wished bon voyage to Bandmaster Williams and his band."

Gruesome Find Made by Land Lady in Hamilton Boarding House This Morning—Girl Arrested

Special Wire to The Examiner.

HAMILTON, SEPT. 21. — Jessie aged 22, and pretty, is under arrest in connection with the finding of the body of a fully developed child in a house on John street north, where she boarded some months ago. The body was in a valise in the attic, where she placed it, saying it contained clothing. The landlady discovered it this morning. The girl refuses to make a statement.

A NOTABLE GATHERING.

While the attention of the English-speaking world was fastened on the Crippen case, a really great event passed almost unnoticed. This, the London Advertiser points out, was the Inter-Parliamentary Congress at Brussels. Every parliament in the world was represented, and some of the foremost statesmen of Europe were active participants. The sole purpose of the congress was the promotion of international amity. It dealt in something more than generalities, the delegates addressing themselves to practical questions, such as the crucial one of the "right of capture" at sea. It was a matter of regret to the British representatives, with a single exception, that Great Britain had always refused to abandon the right to seize merchantmen flying the enemy's flag. Successive British governments have taken the position that the unrivalled British fleet must be permitted the fullest exercise of its offensive powers. One of the quickest means of ending a war is to paralyze the enemy's ocean-borne commerce. But this rule works both ways. Great Britain has more merchant ships on the ocean, and is more dependent upon her merchant marine, than any other nation. She would be starved into surrender if she lost the command of ocean highways, and if the enemy could effectively blockade her ports. But if her merchant ships were exempt from seizure and could carry foodstuffs to her shores in time of war, she would be far less vulnerable and would not have the same need of an overwhelming navy.

Lord Weardale, the head of the British delegation, admitted that so long as Great Britain persisted in claiming the right of capture, Germany would be justified in providing battleships to defend her merchant fleet. The inconsistency of the British position is recognized by a growing body of opinion in Great Britain, and a powerful group in the British House of Commons is pledged to press for the removal of the chief cause of ruinous naval expenditure.

FILTRATION OF WATER SUPPLIES.

The quality—good or bad—of water for human consumption depends, respectively, upon the polluting and purifying influences to which it has been subjected before reaching the consumer. It is well known that the general health of a community using a sewage polluted water gradually falls lower and lower and the death rate increases proportionately. Of the diseases most frequently following the use of an impure water, typhoid fever holds, at the present day, the most prominent position in the public eye. It is a curious fact, as yet unexplained, that the change from an impure water to a pure supply diminishes the sickness and death rate, not only from typhoid fever, but also from tuberculosis, pneumonia, and other serious diseases. It is also a fact that in certain cities using a sewage polluted water the death rate from typhoid fever is many times more than that for cities using a filtered water supply taken from the same source.

Generally speaking, there are two methods in use for the filtration of public water supplies: they are known as the "Slow Sand" filtration and "Mechanical" filtration. In the former type, the water filters through beds of sand and gravel at varying rates of from two to five million gallons per acre every twenty-four hours, according to the character of the water. In mechanical filtration, a precipitate is first added to the water, which is then passed through a medium of sand under pressure, the rate of filtration being many times more than in the slow sand filters.

The type of filter best suited for any particular water must be carefully considered before adoption by a municipality, and this can only be done by a competent sanitary engineer. When either system can be used, it resolves itself into a question of primary cost and annual maintenance. The slow sand filters cost, approximately, $30,000 per million gallons of the daily consumption and about ten per cent. of this per annum for operating; while a mechanical filter costs about one-fourth, and, if carefully operated, a high degree of efficiency as regards purification can be obtained. This is well exemplified at Chatham, Ont., where for some years filters of this latter class have been in operation, the water treated being that of the river Thames.

We have an illustration of the affect of impure water in producing typhoid. A visitor from Cobalt is now in a hospital here suffering from typhoid. He came, on a visit to friends, from Cobalt, where the water conditions are notoriously unsanitary. His making this visit may save his life. If he had stayed a day or two longer in Cobalt the disease would have developed there, and with inefficient nursing and care, without the good nursing and treament he is now receiving, he might have died of the disease, instead of doing well, as he is now doing.

As to Peterborough's water supply, that seems to be of a character above reproach, so far as typhoid is concerned. Dr. Macpherson, Medical Health Officer, states that there are several cases of typhoid in the hospitals and in private homes, but careful investigation on his part failed to warrant referring the disease to city water. Not one of the cases can be traced to the use of city water, whilst some few can be traced to the use of water from wells. There are several cases from outside points—from the Cobalt district, from Toronto, and one or two from the United States, the sufferers having contracted the disease in these places and been attacked after arrival in Peterborough, or brought here for treatment in the early stages. It is gratifying to know that our city water affords so little ground for alarm in regard to typhoid. The Health Officer recommended boiling the water for domestic use as a reasonable precaution. The presence of typhoid in other places, due to impure water, suggested the advisability of taking precautions in regard to city water, not from any actual evidence of unsanitary quality, but to make assurance doubly sure. It is best to err in carefulness in regard to what affects our health. "All that a man hath will he give for his life," and health as a condition of life, possesses a corresponding value.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir James Whitney's arrival home will mean dropping with a thud. It will mean, descent from the high heights of the imperial schoolmaster's desk to the wash tub.

The Winnipeg Telegram estimates that the prairie provinces have yielded 231,000,000 bushels of grain this year, worth $166,000,000. A yield like that cannot be called a very serious crop failure.

H. M. S. LION.

(Providence (R. I.) Journal.)

She will be able to manoeuvre all around any German or American ship now in commission, or known to be planned. Indeed, there is no war ship elsewhere in the class with the Lion, and no ship which could claim in advance a fighting superiority in a clash in the open sea. It is said that a dockyard painter scrawled on the Lion's bow, when launching arrangements were completed, "Omnes eeniant," which means "Let 'em all come on." The Latin suggests that the painter's challenge may have been inspired from higher quarters. Only a single ship, the Indefatigable, marks the step from the Invincibles to the pair of Lions, so that these latter may be called "surprise ships." The Mistress of the Seas is still setting the fashion.

The Kaiser's Culmination Of Colossal Arrogance

The "Me and Gott" speech which Kaiser Wilhelm recently delivered has stirred up a great deal of criticism. "He is bringing Christianity into a laughable disdain," writes Harold Begbie in the London Express. "The speech at Konigsberg is the culmination of a colossal arrogance. It is not impious for the Kaiser to regard himself as "the instrument of the Lord," but it is the summit of blasphemy to announce that he perfectly interprets the will of heaven. The Kaiser is overwhelmed by his crown. He justifies more than anybody else now in the world democracy's antagonism to individual power. He is so obsessed by the thought of his sovereignty, so ridden by the idea of his position, so hypnotised by the suggestion of his unique place in the German commonwealth, that he has come to regard himself not merely as the instrument of the Lord, and not only as the vicegerent of celestial Omnipotence, but as an actual incarnation of the divine wisdom and as the infallible expression of the eternal purpose. He speaks; and it is not a voice from Potsdam, but thunder from Sinai. He moves; and it is not a middle-aged gentleman in a garish uniform, but a pillar of fire. He stamps a spurred boot; and it is not the ill-temper of dyspepsia, but the very wrath of Jehovah. The Kaiser is not a man meekly, humbly and fearfully endeavouring to obey the Divine will, but the unquestionable and authoritative Divine will itself. He can do no wrong, utter no folly, make no mistake. His reason has settled the matter in the spirit of the Vatican — is it to be thought that God would anoint a fallible and ordinary man with the oil of German sovereignty? Because he is king, therefore, he is immaculate. Whatsoever he thinks is truth, whatsoever he says is law, whatsoever he does is right. The man is overwhelmed by his crown.

The matter is serious for the two reasons. In the first place, there has never been a time in Europe when it was more urgent for those who follow the light of Christianity and who perceive how civilization is constantly threatened on every side by the night of paganism, to present the idea of God in a rational, non-superstitious, and compelling manner before the gaze of democracy. The Kaiser's continual "I am God" is making this work more difficult and heartbreaking every day. Those who know the tone of Europe's mind concerning religion but even realize how disastrously hoc-violent ejaculations react upon the flippancy, indifference, and moralism of Continental opinion. Instead of inspiring reverence and giving pause to atheism, the Kaiser is shaking the confidence even of those who long to religion and who labour to avert the seething mass of materialistic ideas with the spirit of Christ.

In the second place, these trumpetings and brandishings of a tin Excalibur are fatal, absolutely fatal, to the hope of the chief ideal and noblest aspiration of the twentieth century. They are disastrous to peace. In a period when the peasant in the fields and the artisan in the cities, for the first time in the long history of man, have begun to perceive that the wealth of another nation is not their disadvantage but their advantage, have begun to apprehend that one country cannot suffer without all other countries suffering also, have begun to realize that life to them is laborious and bitter and joyless chiefly because of the military burden under which they stumble and fall—at the time of a European awakening to the conception of a real, vital and practical brotherhood of man, the Kaiser bursts upon the scene in all the romantic folly of mediaevalism, and shouts from lungs of brass the ancient Satanism, "Alone upon our armour does our peace depend." Immediately the heavens, which were blue and tranquil, become dark with clouds of war and democracy, which had begun to feel the light of heaven on its brow, sees again the old darkness before its eyes, and once more becoming conscious of the deadening weight of iron armour on its bowed and weary shoulders, "What is the use?"—men think; "we have only been dreaming!"—and their sons are marched to barracks, their food is taxed, and the anarchist says "What did I tell you? we must kill before we can be free."

There is a photograph of the Kaiser in the uniform of a regiment of Hussars, which has always seemed to me the bitterest irony on his religious pretensions. The bushy, pressed low and threatening over the fierce eyes, is ornamented by a gigantic skull and cross bones—unlovely emblems of slaughter. The lips, absolutely lacking in all sweetness and beneficence, are compressed with the petty sternness of a button-inspecting martinet. The eyes glower with reprimand. The moustache is horned upwards in bombast and truculence. You cannot look at this face and believe that the mind has been touched even on its outwards by the spirit of Christ. Richter said of someone that "in his seventy-second year his face is a thanksgiving for his former life, and a love-letter to all mankind." There you have the universal charity of religion. A love-letter to all mankind will never beam like sunshine from the face of the Kaiser; he has made up his mind to frown upon the earth and his message to mankind is a perpetual summons to an everlasting court-martial.

It would be an immense service to humanity if the religious people of all nations formed a society for the propagation of the Gospel in the palace of the Unter den Linden. The notion of the religion of Christ as a revelation of universal Fatherhood and Catholic Brotherhood has never penetrated those cannon-proof walls or evaded the sentries at those gates of iron. How much less has it been brought to the royal ear that the blessing of heaven is for the meek, the merciful, and the peacemaker, or that the command of God is not to load, present and fire, but to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, visit the sick and the imprisoned, to love our enemies, bless them that curse us, do good for them that hate us and pray for them which despitefully use us and persecute us? Could a man touched even on the fringe of his soul by the thought of a meek and lowly Christ, don skull and cross bones, twirl up his moustache and gallop up and down the world with the shout of "I and God"? It is pitiful, it is ridiculous, it is disastrous. One grows angry and alarmed at these Potsdam "bombinseries."

How can it be brought home to the mind of the Kaiser that he is destroying the chief and purest ideal of the century, and bringing religion into contempt? Only, one thinks, by making him see the moth of Socialism is eating deeply into the purple robe of Prussion sovereignty, and that the rust of anarchy is swiftly corrupting the throne of the Hohenzollerns. He is making himself unsafe.

Does the Kaiser never think of his son?

RACE FOR WORLD TRADE.

(New York Herald.)

The Board of Trade issued yesterday the trade figures for the chief countries of the world during the first six months of the year. They are as follows:

Six months' imports:

| | 1910 | Increase over 1909 |
|---|---|---|
| Un. Kingdom | £279,141,000 | £24,042,000 |
| Un. States | 166,736,000 | 17,153,000 |
| Germany | 209,542,000 | 4,779,000 |
| France | 133,290,000 | 6,974,000 |
| Belgium | 74,946,000 | 6,249,000 |

Six months' exports:

| | 1910 | Increase over 1909 |
|---|---|---|
| Un. Kingdom | £204,586,000 | £27,652,000 |
| Un. States | 163,349,000 | 1,951,000 |
| Germany | 174,077,000 | 24,638,000 |
| France | 119,015,000 | 9,477,000 |
| Belgium | 63,639,000 | 4,633,000 |

In the race for the world's trade, Great Britain is easily first. The Board Trade statistics reproduced above show that the increase in British exports, notwithstanding the high protective policy of most other countries, is far greater than the increase in American export trade. This significant fact should damp the enthusiasm of the English high protective organs, which have been wailing that British commerce is being killed by free trade. Evidently they are "waking the wrong corpse."

AWAKENING OF SCIENCE

TO THE VALUE OF FRUIT

What is "FRUIT-A-TIVES"?

Medical men are just beginning to realize the possibilities of fruit in curing disease. Its action on the liver, kidneys and skin is wonderful. Yet fruit in its raw state is impracticable in treating disease because of the minute quantity of the active or curative principle contained in fruit juice.

A physician in Ottawa, after years of patient work, discovered a process, whereby the medicinal or bitter principle of fruit juice is increased in quantity and thus a more active and more valuable substance is obtained.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit.

Hundreds of prominent people in every section of the Dominion owe their good health to "Fruit-a-tives." Hundreds more are daily becoming stronger and better by taking them. "Fruit-a-tives" is daily proving its inestimable value as a natural cure in all cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Backache and Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney and Skin Troubles.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"The Pillar of Light"

BY LOUIS TRACY

meal. The diet of one hungry meal for eighty-one people gave twenty-seven hungry meals for three. He ought to have taken more, but he set his teeth and refused the ungrateful task.

It is oft-times easy for a man to decide upon a set course, but hard to follow it.

"A week!" he murmured. "Perhaps ten days! That is all. Pity Heaven I may not go mad before they die!"

Pyne, watching the light, knew that Brand had succeeded. The Falcon went; gradually the watch dispersed.

"Where is the board?" asked Pyne, making believe that they were playing some comedy.

"Hidden in the kitchen lockers. I could obtain only distilled water. You must persuade the girls in the morning that something went wrong with the apparatus."

As opportunity offered, Brand transferred the tins to the lockers of the service-room. Pyne, who missed nothing, shook his head when it became evident that the last consignment was safely stored away.

"Not much there," he commented.

"I will take no more!" was the fierce cry.

"You ought to."

"I refuse, I tell you! Don't torture me further."

"Any chance of a row in the morning? The purses and Mr. Emmett mount guard when the store-room is opened."

"I acted my role well. I built up the vacancies with empty tins."

"My sakes!" cried Pyne pityingly, "you deserve to win through."

"I think my heart will break," muttered Brand. But look! The lamp! It needs adjusting."

Indeed, a fresh gale seemed to be springing up. The wind-vane having gone, the index was useless. It was not until a burst drenched the lantern that Brand knew of a change taking place. The wind was backing round towards the north.

The barometer fell slightly. It portended either more wind and dry weather, or less wind accompanied by rain. Who could tell what would happen? Fair or foul, hurricane or calm, all things seemed to be the ungovernable blundering of blind chance.

When the rock was left in peace after the fall of the tide, Pyne promised to keep the light in order if Brand would endeavour to sleep until day-break. Rest was essential to him. He would assuredly break down under the strain if the tension were too long maintained, and a time was coming when he would need all his strength, mental and physical.

"Here have I been snoozing in odd corners ever since I came aboard," urged the American, "and I have nothing to do but starve quietly. It's ridiculous. My funeral is dated; yours isn't. You can't be on deck all the time, you know. Now, just curl up and count sheep jumping over a wall or any old game of the sort until your eyes close of their own accord."

Brand yielded. He lay on the hard boards, with a chair cushion for pillow; all the rugs rescued by Constance were now needed in the hospital. In less than a minute he was sound asleep.

"That was a close call," mused Pyne. "In another hour he would have cracked up. He's a wonder, anyhow."

The lighthouse-keeper slept until long after daybreak. Pyne refused to allow anyone to disturb him.

Soon after seven o'clock the watch reported that two vessels were approaching from the Bay. One was the Falcon, and the sailors soon made out that the other was the Trinity tender from Plymouth.

When they were both nearing the buoy, Brand was aroused.

It was evident that the brief rest had cleared his brain and restored his self-confidence. Instantly he took up the thread of events, and his first words showed how pleased he was that someone of authority in the light house service should be in active communication with him.

Through his glasses he distinguished Stanhope on board the Trinity steamer, standing by the side of the inspecting-officer of the South-Coast lights. Other officials were there, but near Stanhope was a tall elderly man, unknown, and certainly a stranger in Penzance.

The Falcon was now chartered by press-men, so the civilian on the official boat was evidently a person of consequence. Indeed, Brand imagined, long before Pyne was able to verify the impression, that the newcomer was Mr. Cyrus J. Traill, whom he had failed to notice in the poor light of the previous evening.

He knew quite well that the experienced chief of the light house service would appreciate fully the disabilities under which he laboured, with eighty-one mouths to feed from a stock already far below the three months' maximum.

The first telegraphed question betrayed the prevalent anxiety.

"Hope all is well?"

What is he to say? Was it not best to speak boldly and let men know the truth, not alone as to their present desperate plight but revealing the measures he had devised for the protection of the light? He could not make up his mind to launch out into a full explanation that instant.

So he signalled:

"Everyone alive, but many cases of grave collapse."

Stanhope was again the signaller—evidently he had arranged matters with the Admiral at Portsmouth—so Brand expected the prompt reply:

"How are Constance and Enid?"

"Quite well and cheerful."

The tall man near Stanhope bent closer.

"Are Mrs. Vansittart and Pyne all right?"

Brand assumed that the lady was in no worse condition than others. Constance, telling him the state of the sick during a hasty visit, had not mentioned her name.

So he sent the needed assurance, and went on forlornly:

"Suppose no effort can be made to open communication?"

To his great surprise, the answer came:

We are constructing a raft. When the tide falls this afternoon we will try what can be done."

Ah, how glad he was that he had not obeyed his earlier impulse, and horrified the anxious rescuers by a prophecy of lingering death for many, with the prelude, perchance, of murderous excesses committed by men on the verge of madness. If that story had to be told he would not flinch, but it was a grateful thing that the hour of its telling might at least be deferred.

A long message followed, a string of loving words from relatives ashore to those known to be imprisoned on the rock. During the merely perfunctory reading off of the signals his active mind was canvassing the probabilities of success or failure for the venture of the afternoon. It was high water about three o'clock, and, in his judgment, with the wind in its present quarter, about northwest by west, the cross seas, which would sweep the reef and engulf the lighthouse at half-tide would render it wildly impossible for any raft ever built by man's hands to live in the immediate vicinity of the rock.

However, the issue lay with others now. He knew that they would do all that brave men would dare. He was tempted to make known the inspiring news to all hands, but refrained, because he feared ultimate failure. Beneath his feet was a human volcano. Stirred too deeply, it might become active and dangerous.

So the apathetic multitude in his charge, hungrily awaiting a scanty morsel of food which only provoked what it failed to gratify, must rest content with the long statement written out by the purser and read by him at the door of each room.

Pyne took to Mrs. Vansittart the news of his uncle's presence on the steamer.

"If you would like to see him," he said, "I have no doubt Mr. Brand will let you stand on the gallery for a little while."

She declined, excusing herself on the ground of weakness.

"In this high wind," she said, "it will be very cold out there, and any further exposure would make me very ill."

"That's true enough," he agreed, though he wondered why she raised no question concerning the message she wished him to convey to Mr. Traill.

Had she forgotten the urgency of her words over night? He had carried her instructions quite faithfully to Brand and the latter smiled at the fantasy.

"Time enough to think of such things when we are assured of the lady's departure," he said, and they left it at that.

Thinking to interest her, Pyne told her of the crowd on the Falcon.

"Mostly reporters, Brand thinks," he said. "What a story they will build up in the New York papers. It will be more fun than a box of monkeys to get hold of this week's news and read all the flapdoodle they are printing."

But Mrs. Vansittart was not to be roused from her melancholy. She dreaded the least physical suffering. Privation was a new thing in her life. To-day she was inert, timid, a woman who cowered away from the door, and was obviously anxious that he should leave her to the quiet misery of the packed bedroom.

As the day passed, a wearisome iteration of all that had gone before, a new feature in the relations of the crowded community made itself disagreeably apparent. Men drew apart from each other, singly, or in small

Easily Tired Exhausted

DOES THIS DESCRIBE YOUR CASE? — THEN READ THIS LETTER ABOUT

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

The accompanying letter describes so well the condition of a person whose nerves are weak and exhausted that little need be added.

The danger of such a state of health is sometimes overlooked by persons who do not realize that the next step is some form of paralysis which leaves one helpless in mind and body.

Mrs. Edward Schwartz, Ladysmith, Que., writes: "It is a pleasure to let you know how I was benefitted by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was run down and weak, unable to do any housework, was easily tired and exhausted, lacked energy and ambition, was very nervous, easily irritated, could not concentrate the thoughts, hands and feet were cold, I could not sleep, had frequent headaches and dizzy spells and palpitation of the heart.

"Nervous prostration was my trouble, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured it all and I cannot find words to express my thankfulness for this wonderful medicine."

The results achieved by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are often more wonderful than words can tell. In cases such as this patient persistent treatment is necessary, but you are encouraged by steady and natural improvement until the cure is thorough and complete.

There is a satisfaction in knowing that each and every dose is bound to be of at least some benefit in rebuilding the wasted nervous system.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

Extra Mild, Remember

Many people would drink ale, in preference to all other malt beverages, if ale did not make them bilious.

This O'K brew is brewed especially for those people. It is extra mild and extra light, and lets you enjoy the creamy deliciousness of real old English ale without the heaviness and excessive bitterness. In easily—opened seal stoppered bottles. No broken cork or tinfoil in the glass.

HAVE YOUR NEW

AFTERNOON & EVENING GOWNS

MADE ESPECIALLY TO YOUR ORDER

Expert Dressmakers at This Store Who Can Express Individuality in Apparel

Have your new gowns for formal wear smart, original and exclusive. Have them made to your individual order by skilled dressmakers who will adapt the new style to your personal requirements—who will modify and manipulate the new models until you have gowns that are YOUR gowns. Not like somebody's else.

Hall's is the place to obtain such costumes. We have imported a very fine range of dainty fabrics in all the leading shades for afternoon and evening wear. These importations include many novel and exclusive textures which you will find it impossible to duplicate elsewhere.

Connected with our garment section are two skilled dressmakers, well versed in every detail of the new fashions—who can make gowns to please a discriminating taste—make them at prices of pronounced moderation.

Time now to begin preparing for the receptions and formal evening functions which will soon be in order.

KABO CORSETS have no equal. See that you get the correct model to suit your figure.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Once a wearer of the famous KABO Corsets you will have no other. $1.35 to $6.00.

Semi-Ready

Do you carry this label in your clothing every day in the week and Sunday too.

If you do show this label in your inside coat pocket you are invariably classed with the best dressed men of the city—your personal appearance cannot be improved on.

An old adage has it that you are not to judge a man by the clothes he wears, yet how many men you find who are the smartest in the country holding minor positions just because they have not the necessary pride in themselves to appear smartly dressed and thus attract the attention of those who judge a man in this way. First impressions go a long way toward locating good men in first-class jobs—Wear Semi-Ready and be well dressed—not overdressed—neat and in good taste. We're showing the new Fall styles now—Come and inspect—Prices moderate.

GRAND OPERA IN ENGLISH

The Bohemian Girl" Will Be Presented at the Grand by the Aborn Company

Musical authorities in America have noted the rapid increase of interest among the general public in grand opera, especially when sung in English, in all of the larger cities during the past few years, and there is no doubt that this growth of appreciation for the works of the masters has spread to all parts of the United States and Canada. Consequently, Milton and Sargent Aborn, who have presented grand opera in English most successfully every season for a number of years, but only in the very large cities, where long runs were possible, decided to send the present Aborn English Grand Opera Company on a general tour. This organization numbers one hundred persons in its double cast of alternating singers, powerful chorus and large grand opera orchestra, and travels by special train, including three large baggage cars required to carry the scenery, costumes and effects of the various operas of their repertoire.

PAULA BRAENDLE

With the Aborn English Grand Opera Co. coming to "The Grand" next Wednesday, September 28th, in "The Bohemian Girl."

WAS INDUCTED

Rev. J. G. Potter Installed as Pastor of MacVicar Church, Montreal

(Montreal Daily Witness.)

The Rev. J. G. Potter was last evening inducted into the charge of MacVicar Memorial church. There was a large attendance of the congregation, and a hearty welcome assured the new minister. Principal Scrimger, of the Presbyterian College, presided. The Rev. N. H. McGillivray, of Taylor church, preached the sermon, and the induction was conducted by Principal Scrimger. The Rev. A. J. Mowat, D.D., addressed the minister and the Rev. G. A. Maciennan, of Chateauguay, presented the solemn charge to the people.

An interesting feature was the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Waddell, of Peterborough, the former charge of the minister, who had come to Montreal for this occasion.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Do you ever make single basis snap judgments?

Maybe, before you mentally answer, you would like to have me give you a vague idea of what it means.

Well, I'll tell you. It means this:

"No, I don't like him. He wears suspenders and I never in my world could like a man who wore suspenders.

"Well, he certainly must be a joker for fact. He smokes a cigar with the band on."

"Why, my dear, he's impossible!

"and he kept his hat on!"

"Oh, no, he can't really be anybody at all. Why his cards were printed?"

"My dear, no one could possibly like him. He uses a toothpick!"

Perhaps you don't recognize any of your particular prejudices in those, but surely you recognize the general tone.

And don't you think such judgments are very unjust?

Little things, to be sure, show a person's lack of breeding, but I don't think the lack of any one point in breeding justifies the wholesome condemnation that we often give it.

Straws show which way the wind blows, but if one straw points east while all the rest point north, that doesn't show the wind in east even if the east pointing straw does happen to be a particularly large one from your point of view.

One of the very finest women I know, brilliant and talented and thoroughly a lady in every sense of the word, does not keep her nails in good order.

Nice looking nails are the hall mark of a well-bred woman, and yet I certainly do not think anyone would be justified in saying this woman was not a lady and a very high bred lady at that.

Now, don't think I am attempting to justify carelessness about one's nails, or the public use of the toothpick, or any of the other foibles that I have mentioned.

I am not.

I am simply trying to show that no one offence of that sort is sufficient to form the basis of a judgment.

Such judgments are a reflection on those who make them rather than on those who are judged.

In a book of memoirs that was published recently a great lady tells us of how Disraeli proposed to her and what do you think was her chief impression of him—that he was impossible because he had such a bad breath.

Now, of course, it was very much to Disraeli's discredit that he should so offend good taste, but listen to the commentator's opinion of the two—the judge and the condemned:

"There is realism for you. The man who made an ancient queen into an Empress, who subdued and led the ancient aristocracy of England, climbing from a Jewish home and a lawyer's office to the premiership of the greatest of empires — there he stands before us, belittled, shamed and made almost sordid and abhorrent by this cruel and undazzled female observer, as simply a man with a foul breath. It is a stupendous picture of him AND OF HER."

Which goes to show how single basis snap judgments are apt to impress those who hear them.

CAMPAIGN OPENED WITH GREATEST ENTHUSIASM

Y. M. C. A. Young Men Met at Banquet Last Night---Heard Splendid Address From Mr. George Warburton, of Toronto---Begin the Work With the Brightest Prospects

The Y.M.C.A. campaign was opened last night under the most encouraging circumstances. The attendance of over one hundred men of the Association and the spirit of enthusiasm evidenced was sufficient guarantee that the campaign is going to be carried to a successful issue. The speeches were filled with optimism and the remarks of the principal speaker of the evening were followed with the greatest interest, and they could not help but leave an impression that is going to bear fruit during the next ten days. Mr. George Warburton, of Toronto, delivered an address to the campaigners, each word of which was encouraging and an impetus to each one present to go forward and succeed. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. provided an excellent spread for the men at seven o'clock. The tables were prettily arranged, with flowers and a most sumptuous repast was served.

After partaking of the many choice viands the gathering was brought to order by the chairman of the evening, Mr. C. E. Sisson, and after the singing of the Doxology, he made a few opening remarks. The idea of the campaign, he said, was to make a complete census of the men and boys of the city, and to enlist their interest and cooperation in the work of the association. They were going to get after every man and boy in the city. The work was to be divided among committees, and every factory, shop and office would be canvassed. Considerable literature was being circulated among the young men, and it was their aim to get everyone into the work.

Ald. Turner, vice-president of the Association was next called upon for a few remarks. Ald. Turner said that he had no intimation that he was going to be called upon to speak. However, he referred to the vast amount of good the Y.M.C.A. stood for in the community. He wished the committee success, but to achieve success there must be plenty of hard work. "Take off your coat and go at it," he remarked. "Get a good start and on are bound to succeed."

After a prayer by Rev. W. J. Ridiford, Mr. J. A. Johnston outlined the work to be undertaken by his department. Dr. Middleton spoke for the boys' department, Mr. J. J. Thompson, the physical director, gave a review of the work to be undertaken in his department, mentioning the various classes to be formed, and referring to the advantages to be derived from a course in such.

Mr. Warburton's remarks.

The speaker of the evening was next introduced and his remarks were overflowing with enthusiasm all the way through. He said that he was glad he had come to offer any encouragement he could. The physical director, he believed, struck the proper note in his remarks about his department. No tone of apology is needed for the Y.M.C.A. This movement was just a part of a great big movement of an international character. The work of the association extended into Japan and into China. The Y.M.C. represented the rugged Christianity. A Christian was not a weak person, but was one fired with a spirit of bravery. The big men were needed in the work. The right kind of citizenship depended on the character of the boy, and association influences had much to do with the formation of such. Many boys were driven to bad because they were told they were bad. They were too often misinterpreted. If a boy or young man is a straightforward Christian, upright, manly man, it means a great deal to Christian amateur athletics.

If the Y.M.C.A. only provided a place for strange young men, where they could meet Christian associations, it would have accomplished a great deal of good. The speaker referred to the work of Mr. E. R. Wood, of Toronto, and formerly of this city, in the campaign in that city. Mr. Wood sacrificed time and gave to the campaign. Mr. Warburton impressed those present that if they were going to succeed they would have to make some sacrifice. The work will do "you" good, it will help the association financially, and benefit many young men. In conclusion he hoped the campaign would be a great success and that many more than the number aimed at would be obtained.

Secretary Gilchrist next added a few remarks, pointing out that the motive was a desire to help young men, and in doing this they were making strong, virile men for the whole country. There were easily a thousand men in the city who should be identified with the association.

A vote of thanks was then tendered those who took part, Mr. Warburton for his excellent address, Mr. G. W. Mulligan for his vocal number, and the ladies for the excellent supper. Thanks is also due Jordan Bros. for the donation of flowers for the tables.

The evening was closed with the singing of the national anthem.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

The annual Harvest Festival will be held at St. Luke's church to-morrow evening at eight o'clock. Rev. Provost Macklem, of Trinity College will be the special preacher. Provost Macklem is well known in this city and an eloquent sermon is assured those who attend.

Paying Damages

President Hendry In His Address to the Delegates at the Convention In Vancouver Refers to the Recent Reciprocal Trade Treaties, But Reprehends Any Arrangement With the United States.

Vancouver, Sept. 21.—The report of the Parliamentary committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which yesterday convened here for its annual meeting, submits for consideration the very important matter of compensation to workmen. It refers to it as a matter "that will undoubtedly require careful watching," and proceeds:

"While your committee are not in a position to bring in any recommendations, they are inclined to believe that there is a good deal of justice in the contention sometimes put forward that the artisan who works for a wage which is little more than sufficient to support his family, and who, while engaged in his regular occupation, suffers injury through no fault of his own, should be entitled to compensation of some sort without having to fight his case through the courts. They feel, therefore, that the association should be prepared to make some concessions. The tendency, however, on the part of organized labor is to press legislation which will carry things to the other extreme, and, in order to secure for the workman the compensation to which they think he is entitled they would impose upon the employer conditions so arduous as to constitute a very serious tax upon production.

"If the matter could be compromised by relieving from all further claims for compensation those employers who insure their pay roll up to the extent of a year and a half's wages it would seem as though a solution of the difficulty could be reached that would be satisfactory to both sides, for in that event the cost of insurance could be accurately ascertained by the employer beforehand, and provision made for the same, while the employe in the event of an accident would receive the compensation to which he was entitled without having to have recourse to legal process. This arrangement, of course, presupposes that the employe would insure himself for an amount equal to that carried for him by the employer, so that in the event of fatality his family would receive the equivalent of three years' wages, which is generally conceded to be about right."

The committee also notes the establishment in connection with the association of a legal department, in charge of F. W. Wegenast. Its work has already necessitated a considerable addition to the clerical staff. A great deal of attention has been given the British Columbia Companies Act. In addition to the test case before the Supreme Court relative to the federal power for the granting of company charters, steps have also been taken to bring to the attention of the Provincial Governments the vexatious diversity in the laws of the different provinces in a number of subjects affecting the manufacturing and commercial interests of the country generally. These subjects include not only that of company law but also conditional sales, lien notes, bulk sales, assignments and preferences, etc., etc.

The work of the tariff committee for the year has largely related to the administration of the present act. Of Canada's negotiations with the U. S., the report says: "It was perhaps well a compromise was arrived at, but it would have been more satisfactory had it not affected any Canadian industry, or if the tariff rates payable in the United States on the articles in question had been made reciprocal." A large number of complaints of a confidential nature respecting foreign manufacturers dumping their goods into Canada at export prices have been investigated with excellent results.

"This occasion is unique in that it marks the first time in 39 years of activity that the association met in an annual session west of Winnipeg." President Hendry of Vancouver told the delegates. Two special trains brought 300 delegates from the east, while some 200 from all parts of British Columbia joined them here.

President Hendry made a vigorous plea for the continuance of the preferential tariff in favor of the old country and her colonies, and dwelt on the desirability of Canada preserving the right she now exercises of making her own trade treaties. He strongly opposed reciprocity with the United States.

"As an association of Canadian manufacturers, it is our proud boast that we stand first, last and all the time for the inviolability of the British preference," he said, "and while all true Canadians will endorse the Government's attitude toward negotiating our own treaties, the recent convention with France and the removal of the German surtax, together with the concessions to the U. S., diverted a certain volume of trade from imperial channels.

"In this expression of my views I do not wish it to be assumed that I am of the opinion any serious harm has already been done. My object has ever been to call attention to a tendency which seems to be leading up into dangerous paths," he said.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Colin McIvor fell overboard while sailing off Goderich and was drowned.

All of the thirteen balloons that left Indianapolis on Saturday in the great race have been reported.

The schools have been closed at Middletown, Conn., because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Six union bricklayers at Winnipeg have been fined $100 each for "bolting" during the recent strike.

One hundred and fifty persons were injured in a railroad wreck near Oporto, Portugal. None were killed.

Both factions of the Republican party are claiming victory as a result of the primaries in New York State yesterday.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster has returned to Ottawa from New Brunswick. He looks in better health and spirits than during last session of Parliament.

Daniel Gillam, employed at Bently's shipyard, Welland, was struck by a heavy plate of iron about 6 o'clock last evening and almost instantly killed.

Warrants have been issued for a number of candy manufacturers at Philadelphia on charges of using sulphuric acid in the manufacture of marshmallows.

Five men who took part in the production of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures at St. John have been fined $30 each for showing the pictures without a license and committed for trial on the charge of giving an immoral show.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have become weakened, impaired and broken down through indiscretions which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicinal roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For Weak Stomach, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Pain in the Stomach after eating, Heartburn, Bad Breath, Belching of food, Chronic Diarrhea and other Intestinal Derangements, the "Discovery" is a time-proven and most efficient remedy.

The genuine has on its outside wrapper the Signature

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Small, sugar-coated, easy to take as candy.

Might Get The Rabies

Canine Killed at Elk Lake Showed Signs of Having Been In Conflict With Wolves and Veterinary General at Ottawa Says That Danger Exists—Rabid Wolves Will Attack Men—Go Into Camps.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—That danger exists of the epidemic of rabies in Ontario spreading to wolves and other wild animals in the northern part of this province is the statement made by the veterinary-general's department in regard to a report received from Toronto that such a danger was apprehended.

The situation is the latest phase of the rabies question, which, particularly in Western Ontario, has been engaging the attention of the Dominion and provincial authorities for many months.

A particular case which has served to bring the matter prominently to notice, is that of a dog biting a man at Elk Lake which was killed and the head forwarded to the Provincial Health Department for examination. It was found that the dog was rabid. Before the animal was killed there were unmistakable evidences that it had several conflicts with wolves, in the woods from which it came, and the fear is expressed that, once inoculated with the dread disease, wolves and other wild animals will run amuck through the forests of Northern Ontario.

"Wolves are certainly very prone to the disease when exposed to it," said Dr. Tennant, acting veterinary-general, in discussing the affair. Rabid wolves have little fear of man, and have been known to run right into mining camps, biting everyone in sight."

Something Wrong With the Brakes.

Brantford, Sept. 21.—A rear-end collision in front of the Grand Trunk depot at noon yesterday derailed a dozen cars and smashed a number of others. Engineer Connell of Mimico and Fireman Melanson jumped from their engine when they saw the impending crash, both escaping with slight injury.

The Fort Erie way freight stood on the main line track ready to pull out, when a through freight from Sarnia to Mimico came down grade behind it. Engineer Connell was unable to stop his train, something going wrong with the airbrakes. The caboose of the way freight was demolished and a freight car containing Amos Crandell of this city and his horse, Hol B. bound for the Dunnville races, was turned turtle, but the occupants escaped injury.

Companies to Amalgamate.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The truth of the statement that the ticker tells the tale was once more exemplified yesterday, when power ran up to 159, sagging back to 155, and at the conclusion of a meeting of street directors, held later in the day, a statement was given out to the effect that the directors of the Street Railway were of the opinion that an amalgamation of the two companies was necessary, and that a committee of the two had been appointed to discuss details.

Bank President Dies.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The death took place yesterday morning at an early hour of F. X. St. Charles, president of the Bank of Hochelaga, who had been connected with the bank since its foundation thirty-nine years ago.

The succession will probably fall to Hon. J. D. Roland. Robert Bickerdike, M.P., is vice-president, but it is quite likely that he will decline the presidency, thinking that a French-Canadian should have the first place on the directorate.

May Ask Conciliation Board.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen of the Intercolonial are appealing to the Deputy Minister against a refusal by Chief Superintendent Brady to consider their demand for readjustment of their wage schedule. Should this fail of success they will ask for a board under the Lemieux Act.

Acquitted of Bigamy.

Cobourg, Sept. 21.—A. Speirs of Port Hope was tried here yesterday on a charge of bigamy. In Februray, 1873, he married his first wife in New York, and deserted her, leaving seven children. Ten years ago he again married in Cobourg.

Speirs was acquitted on the ground that he had lived seven years without knowing his first wife was still alive.

This being Judge Huycke's first court in his native town, short complimentary addresses were made by H. A. Ward, K.C., and Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C.

Would Remove Police Commissioner.

New York, Sept. 21.—Acting Mayor Mitchell has recommended that Police Commissioner Baker be removed on the ground of unfitness, in permitting gambling to flourish in the city unchecked.

Mr. Mitchell said that Commissioner Baker, in a letter to him, showed insubordination.

Steamers Collide.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 21.—The passenger steamer Lakeland of Port Huron and barge John Smeaton, belonging to the Pittsburg Steamship Co., were badly damaged in a collision in a fog early yesterday in Little Rapids Cut, below this city. The Lakeland was beached and the Smeaton was anchored alongside.

Suffered an Eclipse.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 21.—When The Sun and Star ceased publication six months ago an afternoon paper called The New Star was issued from the office of The Standard, the Conservative morning daily. The Star has now ceased publication.

Summer Hotel Burned.

Ste. Sept. 21.—The Summer Hotel at Camp Sutton, Muskoka, was totally destroyed by fire. Only a few persons were in the building at the time of the fire. The amount of loss is be-

GRATEFUL TO COLONIES.

Lord Brassey Says Britain Has Much to Be Thankful For.

London, Sept. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable)—At the annual conference of the Association of Chambers of Commerce, which has opened at Leeds, in his presidential address, Lord Brassey took what he described as a new venture. He described his recent cruise to Newfoundland and Canada, and after emphasizing their remarkable progress, he dealt with Canada as a market for British goods. He said that in many lines Britain could compete with the United States, but that consignments for Britain far exceeded those from all other countries.

It would be vain to look for admittance through the open door into Canadian markets. The manufacturers of the Dominion gave employment to some 400,000 workers, but were unable, as yet, to compete with the huge factories of the United States and the skilled factory labor of this country. There was, however, a movement in the far west for a reduction of duties, and he pointed out that Sir Wilfrid Laurier on his recent tour said that the Canadian tariff must be gradually reduced.

Britain was grateful to the states of the outer Empire as customers for goods and for supplies of food, but there was another benefit which they conferred, far reaching in its effects, of momentous import in relation to industry and finance, namely; the borrowing of sums for railways and public works, built mainly with British capital.

A resolution in favor of Imperial immigration for land settlement and the desirability of holding an Imperial conference on the subject was carried unanimously.

The Blood Liquefied.

Naples, Sept. 21.—The phenomenon of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius took place Monday after prayers lasting 55 minutes, in the presence of a great multitude. The people interpret the rapidity of the liquefaction as proof that the peril from cholera is over.

In the great church at Naples there are preserved the head and some of the blood of Januarius, Bishop of Benevento, who was beheaded for the faith near Puteoli. The blood, as his acts relate, was gathered from the ground by a poor woman at the time of the martyrdom and placed in two small glass vials. On several occasions, it is recorded, his relics were carried in procession during eruptions of Vesuvius. The standing miracle of the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius consists in bringing the congealed pieces near the head, the vials being placed on the altar, and prayer being made. After a longer or shorter interval the blood is said to become liquid and flow.

Their Motor Boat Run Down.

Brockville, Sept. 21.—Four prominent citizens of Brockville, ex-Mayor Cossitt, H. B. White, Allan Gilmour and W. H. Downey, almost went to the bottom of the St. Lawrence yesterday afternoon by their launch colliding with a log some three miles east of Brockville in mid-stream. The boat, one of the largest and fastest on the river, was going at top speed when the crash came.

The collision not only bent the shaft, putting the engine out of commission but stove a large hole in the keel. The boat quickly swamped, but with life-preservers the quartette succeeded in keeping afloat until assistance came from the shore. The boat sunk just as land was reached.

Will Awake French Sentiment.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Le Temps, the local French daily, publishes a strongly worded criticism of Mgr. Bourne Archbishop of Westminster, for his speech on the English language, delivered at the Eucharistic Congress, and of Bishop Fallon of London, in regard to his dealings with the bilingual schools of his diocese.

"It is under the blows of misfortune that apathy disappears," says the editorial part, "and we say to Mgr. Fallon, very well; continue your work of Anglicization, and you will contribute to the awakening, not only in the French-Canadians of your diocese, but also in all our compatriots in Ontario of the national French sentiment, unfortunately somewhat dormant in some of us."

Who Pays the Piper?

Montreal, Sept. 21.—If a train runs off the track on the uncompleted G.T.P. Railway between Winnipeg and Lake Superior while it is carrying the 1910 grain crop to water, who will pay the piper? That is the question that is agitating the Government, the contractors, the G.T.P., and even the wheat people of the west. The railway refuses to take the risk, claiming that it should rest with the contractors until the road is out of the contractors' hands. At the same time they would like to start earning dividends and to get a share of the western grain crop movement. The track is finished and trains are going over it daily, but they are Contractor McArthur's trains, and not for business traffic.

New Wing to Hospital.

St. Catharines, Sept. 21.—The cornerstone of the new wing being added to the General and Marine Hospital was laid yesterday afternoon, in the presence of a large gathering of prominent citizens, by Robert McLaren, president of the hospital trustee board.

England Takes a Turkish Loan.

Paris, Sept. 21.—According to The Temps, the Turkish loan, over which negotiations have been conducted with France, has been placed with an English group of financiers, headed by Sir Ernest Cassel.

Two Minute Talks About PANDORA RANGE for Coal or Wood

HAVE you seen the Perfect Spring Door on the warming closet? It is the newest Pandora feature.

The ordinary door, when opened, is inside the warming closet and takes up valuable space.

But the Perfect Spring Door, when opened, is entirely outside of the warming closet. By being outside it adds two inches to the height of the space inside the closet. That extra space provides room for fourteen more dinner or dessert plates. The door cannot drop down and smash the dishes because the spring holds the door up out of the way until you desire to close it.

The Perfect Spring Door is a convenience worth having. There are more than a score of other conveniences on the Pandora. Our Pandora booklet tells about them. Send for a copy.

COOK HAS NO PROOFS TO FIND SAYS CAPT. BARTLETT

Former Captain of Peary's Ship just Back From Arctic Scoffs at Reported Trip of Rival in the Land of Ice ---Talk With Natives Disproves Doctor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Captain Robert Bartlett, commander of the Newfoundland steam sealer Beothic, who captained the Roosevelt on the last Peary Arctic expedition, was greatly exercised yesterday when informed of the report that John R. Bradley, the millionaire sportsman, and Dr. Frederick A. Cook were on the way to Etah to secure the latter's "proofs" that he had reached the North Pole. The captain had just put in at Erie Basin after bringing his ship from Glen Cove, after the successful Paul J. Rainey-Harry Whitney polar hunting trip. As The World told yesterday, the latest report about Dr. Cook may have originated in a joking message signalled from the Beothic.

It developed that the Rainey hunting expedition went pretty thoroughly into the Cook matter at Etah. Ittukashu and Awelah, the two Esquimau youths who accompanied Dr. Cook on his polar dash, were thoroughly examined, and the log book of the Beothic and the personal diaries of Capt. Bartlett and Paul J. Rainey are filled with voluminous notes regarding their statements. The Esquimaux drew maps for Rainey and for Bartlett which are now in their possession. President Hubbard of the Peary Arctic Club also has one of these maps detailing Cook's wanderings in the polar waste.

Capt. Bartlett in his statement to a World reporter said that he had seen Knaud Rasmussen, the Danish Esquiman, at Etah, and in conversation with him, through an interpreter, was informed by Rasmussen that the latter never gained the pole. Rasmussen was led strongly to this belief, averred Bartlett, after the conversation with Ittukashu and Awelah, the Esquimau youths who accompanied Dr. Cook upon his wanderings in the Arctic wastes. Bartlett says Rasmussen will forward his finds to the University of Copenhagen, where Dr. Cook first made northernmost prize.

Bartlett also took a fall out of Matt Henson, Peary's colored companion, who, he now declares, never reached the pole with Peary, but stopped at a camp some considerable distance away. This flatly contradicts Henson's assertions that he slept on the earth's axis and there aided Peary in raising the Stars and Stripes.

"I simply can't believe this Cook yarn," said Capt. Bartlett to a World reporter. "What use can Dr. Cook have in going to Etah for 'proofs' when there are none? The only articles belonging to Dr. Cook at Etah are some clothing and such like, and possibly a sextant. But as for records, you can stake your life that none are there. As for what belongs to him, they have been divided up among the Esquimaux, who probably thought the doctor never intended to return.

"I feel sorry for Mr. Bradley, who, I understand, is a fine sportsman, but if he is taking Dr. Cook up there he is simply wasting his time and his money."

Capt. Bartlett then went into details regarding the discovery of the pole which have never before been published. It was in answer to a query as to whether Peary had told him that he had reached the earth's axis after Peary learned that Cook had claimed the prize that he said:

"I was the first man to know that Peary had reached the pole, and I also believe that no other man knew the commander had gained the prize for which he had fought so long until Peary himself flashed the world-wide message from the Marconi wireless station at Indian Harbor.

"I went with Peary as far north as 87.53. There I planted the Union Jack and made my way back to the Roosevelt, getting there about five days ahead of Peary. The commander made his way forward and gained the pole, as everybody knows.

"When Peary made his way back to the Roosevelt, some twenty-five days after gaining the earth's axis, I was the first man to meet him as he came aboard.

"His first words were, 'How's everybody?' Then I told him that Marvin was dead. He was stunned. After a pause he said to me, 'Well, we went forward all right, and I made the pole at last.'

"From what I know I do not believe that Peary told another person aboard the Roosevelt that he had accomplished his end.

"And, in a way, I don't blame the commander. We were going back to Etah, where Harry Whitney's faster vessel was to meet us, and if the news became general the commander was sure to be beaten out of the information of his feat.

"I am sure that I said nothing about his discovery to any man."

11 1-16 CENTS WAS PREVAILING FIGURE AT THE CHEESE BOARD

Regular Meeting Was Held This Morning When 3801 Cheese Were Boarded—Some Sold at 11 1-8c. and a Few Went at 11c.

THOSE WHO BOUGHT

The regular meeting of the Cheese Board was held this morning, when there was a good attendance of buyers and makers; 3,801 cheese were boarded, and the prevailing price was 11 1-16 cents, a few going at eleven cents. The cheese boarded was as follows:

|---|---|
| Keene | 160 |
| Warminster | 120 |

| Norwood | 160 |
| Fleetwood | 180 |
| Killarney | 160 |
| Total | 3,801 |

The bidding was commenced at 11 cents by Mr. Watkins, Mr. G. A. Gillespie raised it one-sixteenth, and Mr. Watkins raised it to 11 1-8 cents. At this figure he called Keene, Warminster, Shearer, Central Smith, and Warsaw. At 11 1-16 cents, Gunn and Langlois selected Villiers, Daisy D., Ormonde, and Norwood. At 11 1-16 Mr. Weir had the next choice and took Selwyn, Lakefield, Young's Point and Lang. Mr. Gillespie, at the same price, got Oakdale, Pine Grove, King Edward, Maple Leaf, Myrtle, Fraserville, Indian River East Emily Trewern, Bensfort, Cedardale, Cavanville Killarney, Stony Lake, and North Dummer.

The Board adjourned for two weeks.

Good Samaritan Gets Shot Meant For Thief

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The next time that Patrick Norton of White Plains finds an onyx clock, silverware and some bric-a-brac in a lonely shed where plainly they have no right to be, and thinks that he knows the owner, and reckons he'll walk over to the owner's house and see if they are really hers—well, the next time he won't.

Instead he'll set the ornaments down and take to the deep, deep woods about his home on the French Road, near Elmsford. For Mr. Norton did find the onyx clock, the silverware, &c., &c., and he did walk over to the owner's house to see if they were really hers. As a result to-day he is nursing a bullet hole in the fleshy part of his arm.

Mr. Norton is a neighbor of Mrs. Mary Young, who also has a bungalow on the French Road, near Elmsford. He was wandering about the woods late on Friday afternoon when he found the articles in a little hut.

Then he recalled that Mrs. Young had told him that while she was at her work as a stenographer in New York burglars had twice visited her home and carried off almost everything moveable.

Mr. Norton then got his nearest neighbor, Mr. Lisscomb, and together they walked to Mrs. Young's bungalow. It was dark when they reached the house. Mr. Norton stepped to the door and knocked. His resounding knuckles brought immediate action. All the lights in the house shifted to the front room. Messrs. Norton and Lisscomb stepped forward into the light, Mr. Norton in advance.

As they did so there came from the doorway a light sharper and more intense than that from the lamps in the front room. There also came a report. Then Mr. Norton clapped his hand upon the fleshy part of his arm, while a fusilade of shots sputtered through the door, none of the rest, however, taking effect upon the well-intentioned neighbors.

When she discovered her mistake, Mrs. Young insisted upon binding up Mr. Norton's wound. She told her neighbors that she had been so disturbed over the thought of a return of the burglars that she had bought a revolver and that in her agitation she had acted very foolishly.

SPECIAL HARVEST HOME SERVICES

Special Harvest Home services will be held next Sunday in the Park street Baptist church. The church will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. Those who were privileged to see the beautiful decorations last year will see the efforts of Brother Archie Jackson and his committee surpassed this time.

The committee request that no vegetables or fruit of any kind be brought or sent to the church this year, as they intend using wheat and oats and other grains, instead. Another special feature of the Harvest Home festivities will be the introduction of a new organ, which will be skilfully handled by Mr. Harold Foster, the popular organist, and choir leader of the Park street Baptist church. The new organ is the same kind of an instrument as is used in the Sacred Heart church, and will be a splendid acquisition to the service of praise and song.

The choir will render special music and there will be special sermons delivered by the pastor.

On Monday a grand Harvest Home supper and platform meeting will be held. A special musical programme and addresses by local ministers will be given. Tea served from 6 to 8 in the parlours of the church.

CHANGING OWNERS OF MOVABLE ARTICLES

There is a party or parties in the west end of this city, who in the past year have been very busy, under cover of darkness, changing the owner of movable articles. Some time ago, a somewhat valuable tethering chain was stolen from the lot where it had been in use. Not long ago a similar article disappeared, and last week, a wheel barrow, the property of a prominent contractor, was taken from the corner of King street and Maitland avenue. The wheel-barrow has been advertised for and the person in whose possession it is found, will be dealt with very warmly.

WAS A SUCCESS

A successful pumpkin pie social was held last evening at Springville, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church. A large number of people were present and a very enjoyable time was spent. Supper tables were prettily arranged in a large marquee and flowers and golden leaves made them look very attractive. After everyone had enjoyed the abundance of good things provided a delightful programme was given, among those contributing being a number of Peterborough young people, including Miss Julia Choate, violiniste, Mr. Werdein, whistling artist, Messrs. Lee and Bradley, vocalists, and others. The receipts were very encouraging.

Miller's Granules will make a clear complexion. Wm. Madill, druggist.

WEDDING BELLS

CROWE—COUGHLIN.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at 6 o'clock when Miss Rose Helen Coughlin was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Crowe, Rev. Father O'Brien officiating. The bride, who was assisted by her sister, Miss Veronica, was attired in a beautiful gown of grey taffeta trimmed with Baby Irish lace and pearls, while her sister wore pink mulle with black velvet and overlace. The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace and to the bridesmaid an amethyst ring. The groom was supported by Mr. Harry Donovan.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents, among which was a check from the employees of J. J. Turner & Sons, where the groom is employed. The bride's travelling suit was a navy lady's cloth, with large black hat to match. The young couple will reside at 218 King street.

ECZEMA FOR 30 YEARS

What is so annoying and disfiguring as itching Eczema? Mr. Fred W. Clark, Petworth, Adington Co., Ont., writes that his mother suffered from Eczema on both legs for twenty years unable to get relief or cure from doctors or medicine. She found that Dr. Chase's Ointment brought great relief and it soon made the cure complete. He states that no one could have the dis ease worse or suffer more.

PETERBOROUGH HORSES ARE WINNERS AT OGDENSBURG

At Ogdensburg yesterday at the largest and best fair ever held in New York state and in competition with the best horses in the United States, Mr. Stratton's string of thoroughbred hackneys maintained their winning stride.

In yesterday's events the prize captures were:

Saddle horse, 15.2 and over (sixteen entries)—First prize, "Ruth," 15.3.

Harness horses, single (fifteen entries)—First prize, "My Pride,"; second, "Perfect Dream."

Harness horses, pairs—First prize, "My Pride" and "Premier"; second prize, "Perfect Dream" and "Loch Ryan Princess".

These successes were won, as remarked, in competition with the best show horses in New York state, which practically means, in the United States. They indicate, taken in connection with their sweeping the prize ring in the Old Country, and with their triumphs in Canadian exhibitions, that it would be difficult to find anywhere any better horses to their class than Peterborough's thoroughbred Hackneys.

GOOD FOR ONTARIO

Special Wire to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, SEPT. 21.—Advice has been received here that Ontario grown peaches are bringing the highest price at Glasgow market.

SAID FAREWELL TO MEMBERS

The members of Marathon Lodge, No. 39, Knights of Pythias, gave a banquet at the Peterborough Lunch Co's parlours on Monday evening to say farewell to three of their number, Messrs. W. W. Armstrong, Thos. Savigny and Melville Halliday, who leave this week for the west.

Smith's orchestra was in attendance and rendered excellent music during the evening.

Bro. Frank Clarke gave several selections on the banjo, among others his famous "Watermelon song."

Several toasts were honoured and responded to by different members in neat speeches.

After singing "They Are Jolly Good Fellows," "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save the King," the evening was brought to a close. Messrs. McDonald and Jacobi deserve great credit for the manner in which they catered to the affair, amply sustaining their past reputation by preparing such an elaborate repast.

A CHIC WEDDING

OTTAWA, SEPT. 21.—A fashionable wedding took place here this afternoon at St. Andrews church, when Clare, daughter of the Hon. Frank Oliver, was married to Allan Keefer, son of Mr. C. H. Keefer. There were many out-of-town guests. The presents included beautiful things from Earl and Countess Grey, Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier.

BODY FOUND

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE AGAINST THE MOTORMAN FORTY PEOPLE KILLED

Special Wire to the Examiner.

FORT WAYNE, IND., SEPT. 22.—That Motorman B. T. Corkwell, will live to be tried for manslaughter, for causing the worst catastrophie in the history of electric railroads is apparent to-day. Corkwell's disobedience to orders, it was stated to-day, caused that awful crash yesterday afternoon, when two radial cars came together, killing forty persons and injuring eight. Strangely enough, none of the conductors or motor men were dangerously hurt. The only man found unhurt was John R. Boyd, a passenger who owes his life and possession of his limbs to the fact that he was compelled to hold on to the rear end of the crowded excursion car. The horror has paralyzed passengers travelling throughout the states of Ohio and Indiana, which contain the greatest radial systems in the world.

CANADA'S GREAT SHOWING AT OGDENSBURG'S GREAT FAIR

Special to The Examiner.

OGDENSBURG, SEPT. 21.—To-day the Ogdensburg Fair opened at 9.30. The weather was beautiful and there was a large attendance. It was estimated that there were 12,000 persons on the grounds.

The best horses of the United States and Canada were in competition and Canada has reason to be proud of the result.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, in harness horses, and Hon. Clifford Sifton, in jumpers, captured the lion's share of the trophies.

In harness horses, open to all pairs over 15.2, there were nine entries—First, Sorg, New York; second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Vanderbilt, New York.

Harness Horses, for residents of Canada, ten entries—First, Stratton, Peterborough; second, McLean, Brockville; third, Wilmot, Belleville.

High steppers, Canadian — First, Beith, Bowmanville, second; and third, Stratton, Peterborough.

The exhibit of four-in-hands was the greatest show of the day, and excited keen interest First, Stratton, Peterborough; second, Sorg, New York; third, Vanderbilt, New York.

Tandems, six entries—First, Sorg, New York; second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Vanderbilt, New York

Harness team driven by lady—First Stratton, Peterborough, (driven by Mrs. Jones, Brockville); second, Sorg, New York; third, Dr. Young, of Toronto.

Harness team, under 15.2 (ten entries)—First, Stratton, Peterborough; second, Sorg, New York; third, Mitchell, New York.

Single horse driven by lady—First, Stratton, (driven by Mrs. Jones, of Brockville).

Hackney stallions — First, Beith, Bowmanville.

In the jumping events, Hon. Clifford Sifton's horses took all the principal prizes.

Offers Ten Dollars Reward To Find The One Who Broke Open Box

The management of the Grand Opera House offers a reward of ten dollars for information leading to the identity of the person who broke a chocolate box and stole the money out of it. From time to time there have been at least fifty boxes broken open. It isn't so much the contents, but each time it costs two dollars to replace the box. Mr. Turner intends to have the practice stopped, and if the guilty one is found he certainly will be made an example of. For this purpose he is offering the reward.

FIRST DAY'S CAMPAIGN SHOWS GOOD RESULT

The reports from the several committees engaged in securing 500 new members were very encouraging, as they were handed in last night. Yesterday was the first day of the campaign, and it was hardly to be expected that there would be a large return yesterday; nevertheless, when the cards were counted it was found that there was almost one hundred who had agreed to join the Association. Many of these have paid in their fees, while some have just put in their applications and will pay their fees on Friday or Saturday. This can hardly be avoided, because the men whom the workers are after are men on weekly wages, and they have not the money to lay down at a moment's notice.

However, the workers feel very much encouraged and are hard at work, knowing, as they do, that the task they have is no light one. Many prospective members are visiting the building and express their pleasure at seeing the improvements that have been made in the Physical Department. An old member would hardly know the bath room and the bowling alleys are made to look like new in their new surroundings of painted walls and clean floors. This department will be run in an altogether different and more satisfactory way this season. There will be a charge of five cents a string, and each man pays for his game as he plays it. Men who are interested in bowling can hardly do better than pay a visit to the Y. M.C.A. bowling room. The men who have been bowling on the green all summer can get the same exercise, and enjoy a mighty fine game by joining the Y. M. C. A. and taking up work on the Bowling Alleys.

The boys are working hard in the Collegiate under the leadership of Mr. Wallie Armstrong. Mr. Armstrong says he is good for the boys' end of the campaign, and there is no doubt that there will be 150 more boy members at the close of the campaign. Fathers ought to take this matter into their serious consideration. It is much better to keep their boys from going astray than to reclaim them after they have gone astray. A father who is not willing to pay the small sum of three dollars to keep his boy right should not be a father.

SUICIDED IN CELLS

Special Wire to the Examiner.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, SEPT. 22.—C. W. Yates, a prominent Pittsburg lawyer, hanged himself in the police cells early this morning after being captured in the company of a prominent and well-to-do New York divorcee.

CLEVELAND, OHIO,—(Later). — Yates, who suicided this morning, belongs, not to Pittsburg, but to Detroit, where he is a millionaire proprietor of the Business Men's Publishing Co. He shot a girl here, who was with him before his capture and she is in a precarious condition in the hospital. Yates had many interests and relatives in Canada.

REMOVE TEMPTATION.

The Globe seems to have its own idea of the deep-seated position of an Italian's vitals. In commenting upon the act of one Italian stabbing another to the heart, it demands that some Italians should be searched, and deprived of all knives with blades more than three inches long. A knife blade, three inches long, taking into account the yielding of the tissue under the impact of a blow, might easily be driven through the body. There is point to the demand that the carrying of offensive weapons should be forbidden, and the prohibition enforced. It would be an answer in one form to our daily prayer: "Lead us not into temptation." A great deal of the crime, whose record makes lurid our newspaper pages is the temptation implied in the possession of a pistol or knife. But for their easy accessibility many an outbreak of vicious temper would find expression and exhaustion in loud words or at the worst, fisticuffs, that would but very rarely kill. Many a man may lead an honest life if the temptation to thieving in the way of need or opportunity were not presented, and many a murder would be uncommitted if the possession of a pistol or knife did not present an irresistible temptation to homicide through their unlawful use. In Canada, at least not one person in ten thousand needs to carry a revolver on his person. If a man behaves himself, and keeps decent company he is, as a rule, perfectly safe without being armed.

ACTION IS DEMANDED.

Sir James Whitney has been talking again to the English newspapers. For the moment, dropping his role of steersman of imperial destinies, he condescends to talk of Ontario matters and declares that his administration "is opposed to government membership." Sir James says this at a safe distance, but when he gets into hot water on his arrival in Ontario, listen for his repudiation and to his being "outrageously misreported." Sir James evidently does not believe in government ownership. He opposed the building of the government railway by the Ross government, which has made accessible in Northern Ontario a splendid area of wealth in natural resources, arable land, timber and minerals. In the very act of excavation in building the railway, the discovery was made of mineral deposits, which represent the richest silver mining camp in the world. Sir James had the provincial railway ownership thrust upon him, and has practically shown his resentment, by failing to make use of its extension to realize upon the immense wealth of resources existent in Northern Ontario. The Globe in an article yesterday demands that the government lethargy in regard to the railway and what its extension and construction to Hudson Bay mean, should end. It aptly says:

The period of lethargy should end. In the race to Hudson Bay and in the struggle for the control of the northern fisheries Ontario was first to enter, and the Government will not be lightly forgiven that stands aside now and permits the western provinces to entrench themselves by means of a railway to the bay, while Ontario's Hudson Bay Railway ends in a field at Cochrane. This Province is the richest in the Confederation. In the northland it owns one of the greatest undeveloped regions in the world. Every stick of timber, ever acre of soil, every pound of ore on the route to Hudson Bay belongs to the people of Ontario.

The Ontario government's journalistic and other friends have scant love for the energetic settlement and immigration policy of the Liberal government at Ottawa, possibly, because of its great success and ostensibly because the west is built up at the expense of Ontario's depopulation. For this depopulation, the Whitney government is not free from blame. If it had taken Ontario's colonization railway seriously, and had put it to use in the inauguration and execution of a vigorous colonization policy, hundreds of Ontario's sons lost to it in the citizens and contributing to Ontario's citizens and contributing to Ontario wealth. "In the region north of the height of land," says the Globe, "there is room for as many people as there are to-day in all Ontario." Sir James Whitney never had any use for this great region, which, in a speech in Massey Hall, Toronto, a few years ago, he sneeringly described as "the land of the stunted poplar." But he must be forced to take action in the provision of means to make available to the people of Ontario the advantages of the exploitation of the immense wealth, not only of the soil of Northern Ontario, but of the sea wealth contained in Ontario's share of Hudson Bay.

Between Ontario old and Ontario new, under live administration and the adoption and carrying out of an energetic policy of development, there should be flowing a deep and broad stream of profitable trade. The first condition is the extension of railway facilities to Hudson Bay; the second is a vigorous settlement policy. The government is called to action, is required to become and be something bigger than a mere paymaster in respect of the revenue provided, largely, by the initiative and enterprise of precedent Liberal governments. It is called to do something greater than busying itself in finding official vacancies for its party friends. Ontario is the greatest and most important province of the Dominion, actually as well as potentially. To maintain its actual lead and to realize upon its potentialities, its trustees must wake up.

A CIVIC GOLD MINE.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

On another page of this issue The Citizen prints a summary of the report of the city of Cleveland's board of appraisal, (which will also be found on this page of the Examiner.) The work of this board corresponds to that of Ottawa's assessment department except that the former assesses Cleveland's realty, both improvements and land values, at the full hundred cents on the dollar. This full value assessment will enable Cleveland to strike a lower rate of taxation which is preferable to under-value assessment with a higher rate of taxation. The Citizen, however, does not call attention to this report because it illustrates the full-value assessment idea but for the reason that it makes an interesting and suggestive disclosure of that public gold mine—the unearned increment of the site value of every growing city. This gold mine, though its value is primarily and wholly created and increased by the presence, growth and expenditure of the community, belongs not even in part to the latter. Not only has the community as a whole no share in this site value which it makes by its growth and expenditure on public utilities, but its very value making growth adds to the annual burden which each of its units has to carry, in the form of economic rentals for the privilege of living and working on the site, the value of which he helps to enhance. This would seem to be about the limit of injustice but it is not. Every municipality in Ontario ment act to perpetuate the system is forced by the provincial Assessment which prevents the community from participating in the increment of its site value. This act also prohibits municipalities from making the land values pay their just portion of the municipality's taxes. If land values paid their just portion of a municipality's taxes they would pay all of them. The Ontario Assessment Act, however, prevents municipalities from levying even a higher rate of taxation on land values than on improvement values. To repeat, Ontario municipalities are prohibited by law from sharing in their site value increment and even from collecting from land values a just share of their tax requirements. Nor is this the limit of injustice in the matter of taxation in so far as Ottawa is concerned. In this city land values which, as elsewhere, are created by the community as a whole, should and could pay the city's running expenses. Not only do they pay less than half the city's taxes ut they are lamentably under-assessed. It is surely poor enough business for any city to penalize enterprise and industry by taxing improvements as Ontario municipalities have to do, but what justification can there be for making a misfortune worse by under-assessing land values as is the case in Ottawa. Why not make the best of a bad job forced on us by an all-wise legislature and at least assess our land values at 100 per cent.

The Examiner gives space to the above article and the other article to which it refers, to be found on this page, because both deal with a problem which is of interest to every municipality. The general idea involved relates to the unearned increment. The unearned increment is a term involving a gigantic interest which in the past has, in practice, includes a gigantic injustice. To illustrate. A man owns a vacant lot, in an unoccupied district. He is taxed so much for his vacant land—in most cases, a merely normal sum. He builds a house or cottage and at once his assessment and consequently, his taxation is increased. He is practically fined for improving the neighbourhood; for making a practical wilderness habitable. Following his example a dozen other men on each side of him build houses and occupy them, thus establishing a community which adds to the importance and revenue of the municipality. One man, owning a vacant lot, in the midst of houses and homes, does not build. He leaves his property vacant. It is very greatly increased in value, not from any outlay he has made himself, but on account of the enterprise of the owners of the neighbouring property. His vacant lot is greatly increased—perhaps doubled—in value, because of the expenditure and habitable enterprise of the owners of adjacent lots. They have spent their money and been subjected to a great increase of taxation, in order to make the neighbourhood a desirable place to live in. While his property has been say, doubled in value, he has not raised a finger to contribute to the creation of this increased value. His neighbours have done it all; and they have been punished by having their taxes raised; but the man who has enjoyed an equal advantage in rise of value of vacant land from the expenditure of his neighbours, pays no more or at the most very little mode additional taxation. Assessment of land values at their approximately real values instead of taxing improvement values to the hilt, is one way of removing the injustice of permitting a man to enjoy the fruit of the enterprise and expenditures of his neighbours without contributing his share. Taxing the land values representing the unearned increment is what has aroused the parasitic landed class of Great Britain against the Lloyd-George Budget, which provides for making land holders assemble for the increased value that has been given their property by the improvements in the way of buildings and otherwise; an added value to his land, which has escaped just taxation.

The Place Of Realty Values In Municipal Assessment

At the election at which Tom L. Johnson was defeated for fifth consecutive term as mayor of Cleveland, it was said that he had devoted more effort in the campaign to the election of the board of quadrennial appraisers than to his own election, and the candidates of his choice for that board were elected notwithstanding his defeat, says the Chicago Public. His reason for especially wishing the election of these men was that a clear majority of them were men whose theory of taxation was the same as his own, namely, that land values, which increase with community growth, should be the basis of taxation for community revenues. One of these appraisers, John A. Zangerle, who was subsequently chosen secretary of the board, has now collated some of the statistics of the board's report, made with the expert aid of W. A. Somers, in a manner to show the peculiar importance to public interests, not only in Cleveland, but in all well settled communities, of that report. The Cleveland Plain Dealer of August 22 makes the following interesting summary of Mr. Zangerle's valuable statement:

Ten years ago, the land in Cleveland was formally appraised at $85,058,000. This year the land values are fixed at $318,229,002. The improvements ten years ago totalled $57,700,000, while this year they reach $232,661,158. The grand total a decade ago was $142,758,000, as against $550,890,160 up to date. The increase in land values is 274 per cent., the increase in improvements is 30 3per cent., and the increase in the total is 285 per cent. These facts may be a little misleading unless it is remembered that the appraisal ten years ago was made on a basis of about 60 per cent. of the real value of property as against a basis of 100 per cent. used in making the appraisal this year. Nevertheless Zangerie says that the city of Cleveland shows wonderful growth and gratifying increase in wealth per capita despite the fact that one of the worst financial panics the city ever knew occurred within the time the data cover.

A rough attempt was made to value the exempted property in the city. The total reaches $58,559,680, but does not include land used as streets, sewers, water mains and much other property owned by the city on which no taxes are collected but which are worth many millions. It is estimated that, were they counted in, the total would be at least $200,000,000.

Secretary Zangerle has taken district 21, which embraces the Public square and its environs, being bounded by E. 14th Street, the lake and the Cuyahega river, and finds that the increase in land values in the downtown business district in ten years has been $91,009,360, or 316 per cent. "Assuming," says Mr. Zangerle, "that the land was appraised at 50 per cent. of its value ten years age, this district will show an increase in value in ten years of at least $50,000,000. If the city of Cleveland were as progressive as some German cities or took the progressive position that these land values are largely or entirely social and took a moderate percentage of this social value from the seller at the time of the sale, it would wipe out the city's bonded indebtedness in a few years. The citizens of Cleveland are certainly not so unjust as to refuse to give the public body 10 or 15 per cent. of this value created by the people at large. Our valuations could be taken as a basis for this purpose."

Mr. Zangerle says that because of the ever present element of depreciation the calculations have been liberally made and in many instances will be found to be below the actual value of properties appraised. Land values, however, have been put in at a full 100 per cent., the first time in the history of Cleveland.

Mr. Zangerle says that the most striking thing which was brought to his attention in the later months of making the appraisal were the necessity of a permanent board of assessors, which would be at work continuously keeping the records up to date.

Such statistics as have been collected this year have never been attempted in Cleveland before and are expected to serve as a basis for future efforts. On another occasion the appraisers will not have to hew out an entirely new system, but can take up the voluminous records which have been created the last year and merely correct them.

$10,000 REWARD FOR GOLD ROBBERS

Expected That Alaska Pacific Express Company Will Offer Big Sum For Arrest of Men Who Stole Bullion From Steamer Humboldt

Examiner Special.

SEATTLE, SEPT. 21st. — The Alaska Pacific Express Company is expected to offer a reward of $10,000 to-day for the arrest of the robbers who made away with $57,000 in gold bullion, part of a shipment of $170,000 from Fairbanks Alaska, which was missing when the steamer Humboldt arrived in Seattle. The gold was assigned to the local assay office.

In addition to the theft of the bullion nearly $20,000 in gold was also stolen from registered mail punches on board the ship. A score of federal secret service agents and Pinkertons are here working on the mystery and the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police at Dawson in the Yukon have been called upon to aid.

AFTER SUFFERING TEN YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

MARLTON, N.J.—I feel that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has given me new life. I suffered for ten years with serious female troubles, inflammation, ulceration, indigestion, nervousness, and could not sleep. Doctors gave me up, as they said my troubles were chronic. I was in despair, and did not care whether I lived or died, when I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so I began to take it, and am well again and relieved of all my suffering."—Mrs. GEORGE JORDY, Box 40, Marlton, N.J.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

BY LOUIS TRACY

groups. An inconsolable gloom settled in the women. By some means, the knowledge spread that they might all starve to death in the heart of this cold dungeon. They began to loathe it, to upbraid its steadfastness with spoken curses or unrestrained tears. The sanctuary of one day was becoming the tomb of the next. No longer was there competition to look at land or sea from the open windows. Everywhere was settling down a pall of blank, horrible silence and suspicion.

Even Constance yielded to the common terror once when the men of the watch escorted the bearer of a tray-load of provisions to the occupants of the coal-cellar.

"Enid," she whispered, "did you see the light in their eyes? What is it? Does hunger look that way?"

"It must be so, yet it is almost unbelievable. They are far removed from real starvation."

"One would think so. But it is so hard to realize things beforehand. And they have nothing to do. They are brooding all the time. We are slaves to our imagination. Many a sick person is allowed to eat far less than these men have been given, and the deprivation is not felt at all."

"What will become of us, Constance, if we are detained here for many days."

"Dear one, do not ask me. We must not think of such things."

"But dad is thinking of them. I watched his face when I took him a scrap of food just now, and—"

"Hush, dear. Let us pray—and hope."

There was a clatter of feet down the iron stairs. The men of the watch were hustling to unbar the iron door. A solidly built, circular raft had been lowered from the Trinity tender.

An assistant-keeper, wearing a cork jacket, with a rope about his waist, was clinging to a stumpy mast in the centre. Two stout guide-ropes were manipulated from the deck of the vessel, and the flat, unwieldly mass of timber was slowly drifting nearer to the lighthouse with the tide.

The door of the column opened towards the east, so the wind, with its pelting sheets of spray, was almost in the opposite quarter, and the stout granite shaft itself afforded some degree of protection for the entrance.

The scheme signalled from the steamer was a good one. None but a lunatic would endeavour to approach the rock itself, but there was a chance that the raft might be made to drift near enough to the door to permit a grapnel to be thrown across the rope held by the gallant volunteer on the raft.

It was his duty to attach the two ropes and thus render it possible for a stronger line to be drawn from the vessel to the pillar. There was no other way. The lighthouse did not possess a rope of sufficient length to be drawn back by the raft without intervention of some human agency.

This was precisely the puny, half-despairing dodge that the reef loved to play with. Cat-like, it permitted the queer, flat-bottomed craft to approach almost within hail. Then it shot forth a claw of furious surf, the heavy raft was picked up as if it were a floating feather, turned clean over, and flung many fathoms out to sea, whilst both of its guiding cables were snapped with contemptuous ease.

The assistant-keeper, kept afloat by his jacket, was hauled, half-drowned, back through the choking froth, whilst the wave which overwhelmed the raft curled up a spiteful tongue and almost succeeded in dragging out several of the men stationed in the doorway.

With a clang the iron shutter was rushed into its place, and when the sailor was rescued the Trinity boat steamed away to try and rescue the raft.

Sojoyo us hope gave way once more to dark foreboding, and the only comfort was the faint one to be extracted from the parting signal:

"Will try again next tide."

CHAPTER XIII.

BEFORE THE DAWN.

Discipline slackened its bonds that night. For one thing Mr. Emmett fell ill. Although inured to hardship in the elemental strife, being of the stocky mariner race which holds the gruff Atlantic in no dread, he had never before been called upon to eat sodden bread, to drink condensed steam flavoured with varnish, and to chew sustenance from the rind of raw bacon. These drawbacks, added to the lack of exercise and the constant wearing of clothes not yet dry, placed him on the sick list.

Again, there were ominous whispers of unfair division in the matter of food. It was not within the realm of accomplishment that the purser, Constance, Enid, and others who helped to apportion the eatables could treat all alike. Some fared better than others in quality if not in quantity. The unfortunate ones growled and talked of favoritism.

A crisis was reached when the second officer mustered the night watch. When one sheep leads the others will follow. A stout German from Chicago asked bluntly:

"Vere's de goot of blayin' at moundin' gurt? Dere is bud von ting to gurt, und dat is der kidchen."

Community of interest caused many to huddle closer to him. Here was one who dared to say what they all thought. Their feet shuffled in support. The officer, faithful to his trust, was tempted to fell the man, but he thought the circumstances warranted some gentle methods.

"Why are you dissatisfied?" he sternly demanded. "What do you suspect? Are you fool enough to imagine that you are being cheated by people who are dividing their last crust with you?"

"How do ve know dat? Dose girls—dey are chokin' mit Mr. Pyne all der day. Dey can't do dat und be hungry, like us."

"You unmitigated ass!" said the disgusted officer. "There is food here for three people. They have fed eighty one of us for two days and will keep us going several more days. Can't you figure it out? Isn't it a miracle? Here! Who's for guard and who not? Let us quit fooling."

And the doubters were silenced for the hour.

The hymn-singer endeavoured to raise a chorus. He was not greeted with enthusiasm, but a few valiant singers came to his assistance. A couple of hymns were feebly rendered—and again—silence.

"Say when," observed Pyne calmly when he entered the service-room to find Brand trimming the spare lamp.

"Not to-night," said Brand.

"Why not? Hell may break loose at any moment downstairs."

"What has occurred? I heard something of a dispute when the watch mustered at eight o'clock."

"Things are worse now. One of the men found a gallon of methylated spirit in the work-shop."

"Good Heavens! Did he drink any of it?"

"He and his mates have emptied the tin. Eight are helplessly drunk—the others quarrelsome. The next thing will be a combined rush for the store-room."

"But why did not the second officer tell me?"

"He thought you had troubles enough. If he could depend on the remainder of the crowd he would rope the sinners. Says he knows a slave knot that will make 'em tired."

Brand's eyes glistened.

"The fools," he said, "and just as the weather is mending, too."

"You don't mean that?"

"Listen."

He glanced up at the glass dome. Heavy drops were pattering on it; they looked like spray, but Pyne shouted gleefully:

"Is it rain?"

"Yes. I was just going to summon the watch to help in filling every vessel. By spreading canvas sheets we can gather a large supply if it rains hard. Moreover, it will beat the sea down. Man alive, this may mean salvation. Tie those weaklings and summon every sober man to help."

With a whoop, Pyne vanished. He met Constance on the stairs, coming to see her father before she stretched her weary limbs on the hard floor of the kitchen.

She never knew exactly what took place. It might have been politness but it felt uncommonly like a squeese and Pyne's face was extraordinarily close to hers as he cried:

"It's raining. No more canvas whisky. Get a hustle on with every empty vessel."

He need not have been in such a whirl, however.

When the shower came it did not last very long, and there were many difficulties in the way of garnering the thrice blessed water. In the first place, the lighthouse was expressly designed to shoot off all such external supplies; in the second, the total quantity obtained did not amount to more than half a gallon.

But it did a great deal of good in other ways. It brightened many faces—it caused the drunkards to be securely trussed like plucked fowls and dumped along the walls of the entrance passage, and it gave Brand some degree of hope that the rescue operations of the next day might be more successful.

When the rain cleared off, the moon flickered in a cloudy sky. This was a further omen of better fortune. Perhaps the pinching rhyme of Admiral Fitzroy's barometer was about to be justified:

"Long foretold,
Long last:
Short notice—
Soon past."

And the hurricane had given but slight warning of its advent.

"I feel it in my bones that we shall all be as frisky as lambs to-morrow," said Pyne, when he joined Brand after the scurry caused by the rain had passed.

"We must not be too sanguine. There is a chance, now. I won't deny that, but the sea is treacherous."

"This reef licks creation. At Bar Harbour, in Maine, where a mighty big sea can kick up in a very few hours, I have seen it go down like magic under a change of wind."

"That is quite reasonable. An ordinary commotion has room to spread itself in the tide-way. Here the tide is broken up into ocean rivers, streams with boundaries as definite as the Thames. The main body sweeps up into the bottle-neck of the Channel. Another tributary comes round the north of the Scilly Isles and runs into the tidal stream again exactly at this point. The result often is that whilst little pleasure boats can safely run out into the Bay from Penzance there is a race over the rock that would break up a stranded battle ship."

"Say, do you like this kind of life?"

"I have given my best years to it."

Pyne was smoking a pipe, one which Brand lent him. The tobacco was a capital substitute for food, especially as he had established a private understanding with Elsie and Mamie that they were to waylay him when possible and nibble a piece of biscuit he carried in his pocket.

This arrangement was to be kept a strict secret from all, especially from Miss Constance and Miss Enid, whilst the little ones themselves did not know that the she-dragons whom Pyne feared so greatly gave them surreptitious doses from the last tin of condensed milk, retained for their exclusive benefit.

"Do you mind me saying that you are a good bit of an enigma?" he hazarded, between puffs.

"It may be so, but I like the service."

"Just so. I was never so happy as when I took a trip as fourth engineer on a tramp in the Gulf of Florida. But that didn't signify being tied to a long-nosed oiler for the remainder of my days."

"Are you a 'marine engineer'" inquired Brand, with some show of interest.

"I hold a certificate, just for fun. I had a mechanical twist in me and gave it play. But I am idler by profession."

The lighthouse-keeper laughed, so naturally that the younger man was gratified. Polite disbelief may be a compliment.

Bilious Headache

COMES FROM LIVER DERANGEMENTS WHICH ARE THOROUGHLY OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Headache is said to be the most useful pain in the world. It is a sort of fire alarm that warns you of something wrong with some organ of the body.

Most frequently the trouble is indigestion and torpid liver and the pain arises from the poisoned blood passing through the arteries of the brain and head.

There is no cure for bilious headache, torpid liver and indigestion that can be compared to Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for prompt and certain results. This has been proven by so many thousands of letters published from time to time that everybody should know it by this time.

Mr. Fred Hinz, Bradhagen, Perth Co., Ont., writes: "I don't like to have my name in the papers, but feel out of justice to suffering humanity I should tell others of the good I obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment.

"For years I was troubled a great deal with sick headaches and was often so bad that I could not work. Being advised to try Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills I did so and can say they have brought about a complete cure. From the first I found that one pill cured my headache quickly every time. I was also a victim of blind piles and found Dr. Chase's Ointment the most satisfactory treatment I ever used. It brought relief almost instantly."

You won't be satisfied with mere temporary relief when you know your headache can be completely cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cts. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Dandruff Causes Falling Hair and Baldness

Baldness and Itching Scalp Are Caused by Microbes

There is no doubt about it. Doctor Sabourand proved it when he infected a guinea pig with dandruff germs and all its hair disappeared in a short time. The entire medical world has accepted Dr. Sabourand's discovery as final. Ask any worthy physician.

Paris leads the world in knowledge of diseases of the hair and remedies for the same.

And Parisian Sage which can now be obtained at leading druggists all over Canada is the one great remedy that kills the dandruff germs.

And that is why Wm. Madill says to every reader of the Examiner, if Parisian Sage does not banish dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks he will refund the purchase price.

Dandruff is the forerunner of baldness. Take care of your hair while you have hair to take care of. Kill the dandruff germs now before the dandruff germs kill your hair.

Use Parisian Sage, the guaranteed dandruff cure and delightful hair dressing.

It is used extensively by ladies of refinement because it keeps the scalp absolutely clean and gives a bewitching lustre to the hair. Price 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and leading druggists everywhere. Girl with auburn hair on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. Mail orders filled, all charges prepaid.

"I was told of your great remedy, Parisian Sage, that it would grow hair on bald heads, so I got a bottle and tried it, and it is fine. I am a young man, and only 25, and was completely bald on the top of my head, and now I have hair an inch long, with the use of only one bottle. I shall certainly keep on using it until I have a good head of hair, which I have no no doubt it will bring."—Oscar Armstrong, engineer, Belleville Horseshoe and Rolling Mill Co., Belleville, Ont., Aug. 21, 1909.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Dear Niece Joan:

Yes, I was all ready for that discouraged letter. Ready, and waiting, in fact.

For you see, in my younger days, I was one of those sentimental folks who keep a diary and when I was looking it over the other day, I found this—

"I know I never in this world can learn to be a stenographer. Things went pretty smoothly at first, but lately it doesn't seem to me that I get ahead one bit. I had three bad mistakes in my test letter to-day, and Mr. M. said my paragraphing was poor. If I hadn't borrowed the money to take this course, and spent half of it, I do believe I'd stop right now and get a job behind a counter as an errand girl. Seems as if that is about all I am fit for."

So I wasn't at all surprised to-day when I got your letter telling how Mr. R. said your speed on the machine wasn't increasing as it ought to, and how you had an "a" for a "the," and a comma for a semicolon, in your test letter, and how you were beginning to believe you'd made a mistake in thinking you were fitted for a business woman, and were almost ready to go home and let your father support you.

Instead of being surprised I was actually glad to get that letter.

Why, child if you missed out that spasm of discouragement I'd know right off there was something the matter with you.

I've talked with a good many girls who were studying stenography first and last, in the course of my experience, and I never found but one who didn't have an attack of discouragitis along about the middle of the course. And that one was the kind who are too complacently, smugly, self-satisfied to know what discouragement means, and consequently to know what improvement and success mean.

So when I didn't get that discouraged letter when I expected it, I was just the wee*st bit worried about you, and when I did get it, I was right glad to have you confirm my conviction that you didn't belong in the complacent class.

Cheer up, niece. The man who said: "It's always darkest just before dawn," was no nature fakir. He knew.

Why, even by the time you get this letter, your dawn and sunrise, too, will probably have come in a su[illegible]t of commendations and success, and you'll be wondering what on earth I'm writing about.

How about it, Joan?

Be sure and tell me next time I hear from you if I didn't prove my claim to the title of Yankee by guessin' dead right.

As ever,
Your Interested Old Aunt.

REMAINS OF A PEOPLE OLDER THAN THE INDIANS

Prof. Henry Montgomery, of Toronto University, Has Been Successful in His Excavation Work on Serpent Mounds ---Thought at First Bones Were Those of Indians.

Special to The Examiner.

KEENE, SEPT. 21.—Professor Henry Montgomery, of Toronto University, who has been a guest at "Oak Lodge" for a couple of weeks, has returned to Toronto. The professor while here, had a gang of men working under him and made a complete examination of the contents of the mounds. It was, for many years, supposed that the bones found in the serpent mound and in the various small mounds around it were the remains of Indians. The theory now generally accepted is that they are the bones of a race that were here long before the Indians, as there were no traces found among the excavations of any arrow heads, tomahawks or any other stone or copper implements in common use among the Indians. Evidently the people buried there were unused to weapons other than wooden clubs. Ashes and charcoal were found among the skeletons, which go to show that these mound builders must have built a fire and had some sort of funeral ceremony when burying their dead. Large stones and several feet of earth covered all the skeletons. The stones were probably put there to prevent the wild animals from digging out and devouring the corpses. Professor Montgomery used extreme care in his excavations to leave the general appearance of the mounds exactly as they were before he commenced work. The skeletons and relics that were disinterred were taken to Toronto University.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID It will not stand up on Canadian roads, although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID—That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now that the leading concerns in six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United States firms will announce 1912 models with Knight motors in another twelve months, despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction, formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands:

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high-grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

Indians Are Hard At Work Harvesting The Rice Crop

All the Alderville Reserve is Camped at Sugar Island, Rice Lake---Most of the Rice is in Demand for Seed so Visitors Are Disappointed.

Special to The Examiner.

KEENE, SEPT 21.—There is a whole Indian village at Sugar Island now. The rice harvest is on and nearly all the Indians from the Alderville reserve are camped on the island and working at the rice. As there has so far, been a good demand for green rice, for seed, none of the Indians have prepared any of the rice for food and visitors who go to the camp to see them at this interesting primitive occupation are disapointed to find that the women who usually do this work are idle while the men are very busy with their canoes, two to a canoe, threshing the grain into the boats. The rice, although the area is small, is very good and the grain is plump and heavy, so that they are able to make good wages. Some of them eglaim to make from four to six dollars a day and working only labour union hours, too.

Sunday, Sept. 18th, church service was held on the island and there was a large attendance. It was probably several times larger than is usual at the meeting house on the reserve, for besides the Indians, a great many people from all parts of the lake attended. There were also about a dozen gasoline and steam yachts and probably thirty or forty canoes and skiffs at the island. Rev. Mr. Jopling, the missionary to the Indians, endueted services in the open and the Alderville brass band assisted in the musical part of the service. A part of the service that was especially interesting to the visitors to the camp was the singing of a hymn in the Indian language.

The Indians have arranged for their annual rice harvest picnic to take place on Sugar Island on Friday Sept 23rd. The steamer "Monarch" has been chartered for the occasion and will run trips from Harwood, Hiawatha, Dummet's Landing and Keene. The Alderville brass band will furnish music. There will be a platform for dancing and canoe and running races. Dinner will be provided by the Indians on the island and the menu will include wild duck muskinonge and parched rice.

GOT IN MIX-UP

Society Girl Gets Into Scuffle With "Hello" Girl

Special to The Examiner.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 21.—Incensed over the continual repetition of the phrase "line's busy," while she and her guests were delayed at bridge whist because of an absent friend, Miss Hazel Gillen, daughter of John Gillen, prominent horseman and ice manufacturer of Fayette City, Pa., last night her home and her guests to investigate the local Bell Telephone Exchange and learn the reason why she could not get telephone connections with a young woman she wanted to "fill in."

Trouble was found and plenty of it when Miss Gillen reached the head of the first flight of stairs at the exchange. A whirlwind in the form of the much abused "Central," Miss Lillian Usher, enveloped her and a second later both young women were rolling down the stairs and on to the sidewalk in each other's arms.

With their skirts wrapped about their shoulders the young women took a "death grip" on the sidewalk when they stopped rolling, and to the amusement of a number of men and boys proceeded to pull hair and attempt to choke each other, until one man stepped forward, righted their skirts and separated the fighters. Hair "rats," side combs and barrettes and one switch, the ownership of which neither of the young women will acknowledge, littered the sidewalk.

PINK LEMONADE

Is Now Under Ban—Cannot Sell It Any More

Special to The Examiner:

TOPEKA, KAN., SEPT. 21st.—Dr. Crumbine, head of the health department of the Kansas government, has struck another heavy blow for health. Having barred the common drinking cup on railroad trains and in public places, now the order goes forth that Kansans must not look upon the circus lemonade when it is red, and that the mixer of this well-known concoction must confine his work to other states and communities. Coming as this order does at this season, there is widespread dissatisfaction among the people living in the rural districts.

Dr. Crumbine declares that dispensers of this liquid at county fairs and at circuses must obey his order and use real lemons in its manufacture, and if the pink lemonade is offered the barker of the stuff must stand up before the assembled farm folks and talk of its merits as "imitation" lemonade. A decoction made up largely of water and tartaric acid will no longer be sold in Kansas as real lemonade, nor will the vendors of the liquid be permitted to color it with deleterious substances.

Following this reform in soft drinks will come the order soon against the old oaken bucket that hangs in the well. This loved and favorite vessel from which farmers quench their thirst as it poises on the curb, too, is a spreader of disease, a nesting place for germs, and must go in spite of the memories clustering about it.

MAY GET JEWELLERY

Arrest of Suspects With Gems That Answer Description Given of Heirlooms

Examiner Special.

WINNIPEG, SEPT. 20th.—Two arrests made by the police in connection with the investigation of that robbery of jewels of the Countess of Antrim give promise of solving the mystery surrounding this clever theft.

As the result of information given by a third party two young men named Kardner were arrested this afternoon and the police were soon in possession of an assortment of diamond rings, diamond scarf pins, pendants, brooches and other articles, including some pieces that had evidently been wrenched from large settings, such as pendants or brooches. One of the articles in possession of the police is a sapphire pendant, and as the list of missing articles furnished by the countess included such a pendant, there is reasonable ground for belief that the right parties have been caught. This, however, will probably not be known definitely until the return of the countess from Vancouver early next week, when she will be asked to look over the collection now at police headquarters.

The two suspects, for they are at present being held only on suspicion, have told very conflicting stories and have been utterly unable to give any reasonable account of how the jewellery came to be in their possession. The police are positive that if the two men under arrest were not concerned in the robbery of the jewels of the Countess of Antrim they at least came into possession of the gems by illegal means and they are now hard at work in an attempt to locate the men's origin.

Both suspects were at the Royal Alexandra Hotel at the time the robbery took place. One of them is known to have been on the same floor as the rooms occupied by the countess on Saturday night.

COFFIN PROVES GOOD FIT

Farmer, Cheated in Other Casketa, is Having His Own Built to Order

Examiner Special.

MILAN, MO., SEPT. 21.—George Brandon, who lives near here, believes he was cheated on two occasions when he bought coffins from undertakers for members of his family, so he is having a carpenter make him a casket for himself to order.

Brandon came here, climbed into the coffin, and expressed himself as satisfied with the fit of it.

Although Brandon is now in perfect health, he desires to run no chances on his estate being balked in the purchase of a casket after he is dead.

ENGLISH GRAND OPERA

To Be Given Here By the Aborn Singers

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, an organization that has gained an excellent reputation in the larger cities of the United States during the past few years, and which its management announces as the only English grand opera company of its size in America, is to come to the Grand Opera House on Wednesday night next, Sept. 28. This season is the first time any of the Aborn organizations have undertaken engagements of single weeks or less in different cities, as this company are making their first tour of the United States and Canada. Formerly the Aborn aggregation have appeared only in cities where the demand for Grand Opera in English was strong enough to support a run of from five to twenty weeks. Milton and Sargent Aborn have built up a remarkably large institution in this line, involving, last season, no less than six different companies of an average membership of one hundred, employing altogether more than six hundred persons, mainly selected from American talent. Last season these six companie were patronized liberally by the general music loving public in New York, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago, Milwaukee, Saint Louis and Cincinnati. Likewise, those cities, and a few others, including Philadelphia, Newark Brooklyn, Buffalo and Detroit, have been the only ones reached so far by the various Aborn organizations. Believing that the remarkable increase of interest in classical opera noted in those places has also extended to all [illegible] America, they have decided to send one of their companies on a regular tour from coast to coast, playing all of the principal cities and a few of the smaller ones. The first places to be visited by the Aborn aggregation are Canada and the Eastern States, after which the route extends South and West. The organization includes a double cast of alternating singers, mainly chosen from the Chicago-Milwaukee-Saint Louis organizations under the Aborn banner last season, a chorus of sixty and a large orchestra, which elaborate productions for "Il Trovatore," "Aida," "Carmen," "Faust," "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "The Bohemian Girl." The prices for seats will range no higher than $2, which in grand opera circles are designated as "popular prices."

On Monday, Dean Ellis was a visitor at the Peterborough Normal School. He occupies the same position at Kingston as Dr. Pakenham, formerly of Peterborough, does at Toronto.

CAN THIS BE SO?

Judge at Kinmount Fair Not Complimentary to Peterborough

What do you know about this from the Lindsay Weekly?

In the northern town of Kinmount, coyishly nestled among its rocky hills, the ever popular Galway fair was held on Monday and Tuesday. The really big day was Tuesday, and some idea of the success of the show may be gathered from the words of a prominent Lindsay merchant who acted as judge, "Peterborough may take occasion to have a fling at us about the weeds and grass on our streets," he said, "and may even make the suggestion that the Peterborough mower may be sent up to help us out of the difficulty, but this little town of Kinmount, under the auspices of the Galway Agricultural Society, has put on a vegetable, root, and seed exhibit that throws the efforts of the Peterborough fair in a dismal shade." This is the opinion of a judge of one department, and the other officials were equally as laudatory in their remarks.

GAVE HER PEARLS

Examiner Special.

SEATTLE, SEPT. 21st.—Because an enthusiastic Englishman in Victoria B.C., presented a pearl necklace worth $1,000 to a chorus girl in a travelling musical comedy company, the United States customs officers in this city are holding the twenty-one trunks of the show in appraiser's stores here [illegible] the advance agent is on the verge of madness because the entire outfit of the little show cannot be given. The show entered the United States yesterday and the customs inspectors, having been tipped that the necklace was genuine, will not release the company's effects till the chorus girl declares her gift and pays the duty, which is $500. The company is due to open here Sunday.

TOO FAT TO FIGHT SUIT

Woman Gives That Excuse for Dodging Divorce Court

Examiner Special.

LOS ANGELES, SEPT. 21.—Explaining her non-appearance in a divorce suit brought against her, Mrs. Ysabel Andrini made affidavit that she was too fat to come to court.

"My husband was old-fashioned and did not realize what he was doing when he filed this suit," she stated in her affidavit. Then she calmly requested the judge not to annoy her by forcing her into court, as she was only five feet two inches in height, but weighs more than three hundred pounds.

Dominico Andrini, the husband, is a prosperous-looking business man of sixty-three, who says his health was undermined by his wife's cruelty. He says they were married more than twenty years ago, and that soon afterward his wife became imbued with the "new woman" ideas.

She assumed charge of all family affairs, the customs averred, and when he protested he was driven out into the woodshed. The husband at the limit of endurance was reached when she took to reproving him with a section of garden hose. He also claims his health has suffered from the many times he has been forced to bivouac in the back yard. He asks for $100 a month alimony.

Large And Enthusiastic Meeting Of Men At St. John's Church

After the week-night service at St. John's church last evening, a large and enthusiastic meeting of men was held, for the purpose of welcoming the new assistant, Rev. Mr. Carpenter, and arranging for the season's work. Rev. Canon Davidson presided and outlined a scheme for the winter's operations, and asked for suggestions on the same. A leading feature, he said, would be a men's class and club, to be conducted by Rev. Mr. Carpenter, on Sunday afternoons, with occasional weekday meetings. Confirmation will be held some time during the winter, for which preparation will soon commence. The Brotherhood of St. Andrew work was also referred to by Canon Davidson and also other features of church work.

Rev. Mr. Carpenter then added a few remarks. He spoke chiefly in reference to the Sunday afternoon classes. They would be conducted along broad lines, dealing with many different subjects of interest to men. The fellowship of the men should be strengthened by development. In this Mr. Carpenter had had a great deal of experience in connection with St. John's Cathedral, Newfoundland. Discussion of an informative and enthusiastic character was then participated in by all present. It was resolved to aggressively push forward the work of the Brotherhood, and a meeting will be held on Wednesday evening next. Strong support will be given Mr. Carpenter and development in many lines of church work is looked for. It was decided to hold a Sunday evening tea on the 4th Sunday in November in connection with the dedication festival.

CHILD BITTEN BY A DOG CANINE TO BE DESTROYED

Another "dog-biting" incident occurred down near the King Edward school on Park street yesterday. Little Wilbert Beauvard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Beauvard, 37 Park street, was the victim. He and a number of other boys were playing on the road when the dog came along and they began playing with it. The dog, which is a little black, curly spaniel, has been getting cross lately, evidently from being teased too much. At any rate it sprang on Wilbert, severely biting him on the right arm and breast.

The child was taken to Dr. Nicholl's office, where the wounds were dressed. The wounds, although severe in the nature, are not likely to prove dangerous.

The dog is a tramp and has been shown around the south part of the city all summer. A complaint has been laid at the police station and it will probably be destroyed.

The second intermediate class of the season is on for to-night at 8 p.m. This is a new class this year, composed of the older lads of the boys of last year, and, judging from the interest already shown, this class promises to become one of the best, if not the premier, class of the Association.

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and All Stomach Distress Vanishes

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which disagrees you, it is what little you eat causes a lumped load on your stomach, and there is difficulty in breaking up these concentrations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, headache, belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to help digestion and correct fermentation.

To make every bite of food you eat add to the nourishment and strength of your body, you must put your stomach right, sweeten it, so that the food you eat does not ferment and sour, thereby poisoning the blood with acid stomach gas, which robs your body of needed nourishment. Then you will have no indigestion, sick headache, biliousness, constipation, gaping, etc. Your stomach is probably very sick and disordered if you are a victim of indigestion, though you may call it by some name, your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, thereby poisoning almost any unhealthy person.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents at any Pharmacy. It will overcome any stomach suffering or misery after taking a dose or two, and the fermentation and sour stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name, always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without distress or discomfort, all of any food you eat.

FUND INCREASES

The Chimes Donations Now Total $4,250

During the past week strong efforts have been put forth in connection with adding to the chimes' fund. The progress that has been made has been most satisfactory, a large number of small subscriptions having been made, and many others have promised to give the matter their attention. In several factories and offices the cause has been taken up by the employees generally. In two business places every employee has made a small contribution. Recent out-of-town subscriptions have been made by Mrs. H. C. Schofield, Cobourg; H. C. Rae, manager of the Yonge Street branch of the Bank of Commerce, in Toronto, and Mrs. H. C. Rae. The fund now stands at $4,250.

POTATOES SCARCE

Crop This Year, Farmers Say, is a Failure —Heavy Frost Last Night

The potato crop this year is a failure in this township, is the report received by the Examiner today. The dry rot has affected them and some of the farmers state that not more than a hundred bags of sound potatoes will be produced in the whole township. The crop is a good one as regards number and size, but they are affected so by the disease that they are practically of no use.

There was a heavy frost last night, and great damage was done to the vegetables and fruit. The tomatoes and melons, which were left unprotected last night, were destroyed. The fruit crop, such as apples, pears and such like, are reported as not being seriously damaged.

RUGBY MEETING IN ARMOURIES SATURDAY

There will be a meeting of all those interested in Rugby in the Armouries on Saturday night at 8 o'clock for the purpose of forming a City Rugby League and also of discussing the advisability of placing a team in the O. R. F. U. All players and lovers of the game are cordially invited to be present and a large attendance is expected.

Much interest is being taken in the proposal to form a city league. It is felt that such an organization would do much to arouse interest in the game and develop young material. There should be no difficulty in securing teams. The Collegiate Institute is in the field already and the students have been practising for some time. The T. A. S. have announced that they are willing to place a team in the League. The C. G. E., it is said, will have a fourteen, and rumour has it that the West End Athletic Club will have a shy at the great Canadian pastime this year. If the West Ends have a team Manager Motherall of the Strathconas will be unhappy until the Commissioners, too, have a team in line. Don't forget Saturday night's meeting.

This afternoon the members of the Examiner press room took occasion to make a presentation to Mr. Edward Wyatt, who has been an employee of the Examiner for some years, and who leaves to-morrow morning for Calgary, where he has secured a good position in the printing establishment of Mr. Sidney Tivey, who is also a former Peterborough boy. As a mark of the high esteem in which he was held by his fellow employees, he was presented with a handsome leather suit case. Mr. R. M. Glover, manager of the Examiner, made a few remarks, extending the best wishes of the employees of the Examiner for his success in the West, and Mr. Bob Long made the presentation. The recipient made a suitable reply, expressing his appreciation of the kindness of his friends.

Woman In Transfusion Operation Values Her Life Fluid At $2,000

Examiner Special.

ST. PAUL, MINN., SEPT. 21st.—The monetary value of three-eighths of a woman's blood to save the life of another was the problem before Judge of Probate George R. Smith today. The transfusion was given by Evelyn Whitney, twenty-six years old to Mrs. Mattie Mulligan on her deathbed in St. Mary's Hospital September 15 last. The operation did not save the other woman's life. She died leaving an estate of $5,000.

Evelyn Whitney has made claim of $2,000 against the estate for her sacrifice. A part of the claim will be allowed. Mrs. Mulligan was dying of anaemia. Dr. D. C. Cowles told the court to-day how the operation was performed. An artery was severed in Miss Whitney's wrist and joined to the artery in the other's arm. They were bound together for two hours. Miss Whitney claims her left hand was practically disabled by the operation. Dr. J. M. Anderson, summoned as an impartial witness, found the pulses destroyed.

Miss Whitney testified Mrs. Mulligan said before the operation: "If I recover I will remember you handsomely; if I die you must look to the estate."

His Night On Ellis Island The Worst He Ever Saw

NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—Herr Waldemar Bruehl of Braunschweig, Germany, who had trouble in passing through Ellis Island, though he had $8,000 in his inside pocket, was a very busy man yesterday. He spent Friday night at Ellis Island.

"It was the worst night I ever saw," said Herr Bruehl yesterday. "I don't know why they did not let me land. I had all that money with me, too."

Bruehl is stopping at the German Lutheran Emigrants' Home, at No. 1 State Street. Anthon Raab, the business manager, finally succeeded in convincing Bruehl that the United States Government did not want to take his $8,000 from him, nor did they consider him an undesirable citizen.

"Then why did they put me with all those people on Ellis Island?" demanded the German.

Bruehl is fifty-seven years old and as sound as a rock. He is an old time traveller and has seen service in the Far East.

"Every two years I get possessed of what they call the wanderlust," he said. "I just can't help it. I have to leave my wife and children and start on a long trip. I always travel alone. I have been all over Europe, but there is no place like New York. What impresses me mostly are the tall buildings and the good looking policemen I have seen. Both are wonders and wonderful."

Herr Bruehl went sight seeing all by himself yesterday afternoon. Later he expects to go as far West as San Francisco.

Mr. Raab said that he had no fear that Herr Bruehl might fall into the hands of bunco steerers.

"He is a very careful man," said Mr. Raab. "He has deposited all his money with me and he never has more than $15 at one time. No, I don't think he will get lost."

IT SAVES YOU WAITING

On Saturdays we have so many persons who drive long distances or come by train, that we are unable to promise appointments for that day, but we wait upon persons in turn. Many persons call, write, or phone for appointments, we then reserve time for such and it saves them much waiting, as the time so given is kept open for them. We make such appointments for any day or evening other than Saturday. Evening is quite as good as day time for the eye examination, but it is necessary to arrange for this a day or two in advance.

Orders Not Understood

Southbound Car's Failure to Take the Switch Is Responsible for Smash-Up —Only the Presence of Mind of Conductor Prevented Another Car From Plunging Into the Great Heap of Wreckage.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 22. Forty-two passengers were killed and seven were seriously injured in a head-on collision between two interurban cars on the Fort Wayne and Bluffton division of the Fort Wayne and Wabash Valley Line yesterday. The wreck occurred seven miles north of Bluffton at a sharp curve.

The cars in collision were a north bound local car, crowded to the steps, and a southbound extra car from Fort Wayne. They met while both were running at high speed.

The collision is said to have been made by a misunderstanding of orders for the southbound extra to take a switch near Kingsland. The motormen of the two cars did not have time to set brakes when they sighted each other.

The heavily loaded northbound car was crushed and the bodies of the dead and injured were strewn on either side of the track amid the wreckage. The screams of the injured men and women, following the crash of the cars, brought the neighboring farmers to the scene.

Conductor Spiller of the southbound car was unhurt, and ran back toward Kingsland and flagged a car which was approaching the wreck at full speed and would have plunged into it.

Wrecking cars and physicians were rushed from Fort Wayne and Bluffton and the bodies of the dead and the injured were conveyed to hospitals in the two cities.

Eighteen Thousand on Parade.

Atlantic City, Sept. 22.—Eighteen thousand grizzled veterans of the civil war, with cadence that showed the weight of years they bear, marched yesterday through flag-bedecked avenues. Along the line of march arose the cheers and applause of the greatest crowd that ever saw a parade in Atlantic City.

Never before had the thinning of the ranks been so noticeable. Many of the states were represented by a mere handful of veterans. The smallest delegation was from Arizona, but an old grizzled veteran in line, who got nearly as much applause as he marched along as did the big army of Pennsylvania, which had the largest number of men in the parade.

Ontario Peaches In London.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—C. C. James, deputy Minister of Agriculture, received a cablegram from N. B. Colcock, Ontario Government agent in London, yesterday, stating that the first shipment of Ontario peaches to England have arrived in excellent condition and the fruit is on sale in Covent Garden, where it is eagerly sampled by dealers.

The fruit was grown near the experimental farm at Jordan, and was selected by P. W. Hodgetts.

Consignments of peaches have been made from South Africa to London, and Mr. James states that 5,000 baskets will be shipped from Ontario to London this season.

To Oust Cavalieri.

New York, Sept. 22.—A civil suit to set aside the ante-nuptial agreement between Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the opera singer, and her husband, Robert Winthrop Chanler, was instituted late yesterday by Mrs. Julia C. Chanler, his former wife. The papers alleged that the ante-nuptial agreement was obtained by Mme. Cavalieri by fraud and undue influence.

Arrested In Calgary.

Calgary, Sept. 22.—A young man and young woman, giving their names as Roy and Margaret Marshall, and claiming to be brother and sister, were arrested here for theft. P. C. Wade, formerly of Toronto, identified the man as Roy Ostrum, who had been convicted of theft in Toronto. The girl is supposed to be Lily McNulty of Kincardine, Ont.

No Frivolity for West Durham.

Bowmanville, Sept. 22.—West Durham fall fair yesterday was another record-breaker, for there were larger crowds than have been. This has been for years and continues to be a purely agricultural exhibition. No horse racing, midways or fake attractions. It is emphatically a live stock show, with horses far in the ascendancy.

Silence For The Present

Resolution Favoring an Educative Crusade In Behalf of the Tariff Is Practically Rejected, But Hope Is Expressed That Government Will Not Make Any Move Towards Freer Trade With U.S.

Vancouver, Sept. 22.—Practically rejecting a resolution to conduct a campaign of education along tariff policy lines, but at the same time expressing the hope that the Dominion Government would not overthrow the present fiscal arrangements in favor of those more radically making for free trade, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday debated the most important features of the present situation with respect to free trade and protection.

"Let us not listen to a sectional, parochial, little meeting of grain growers," said C. S. J. Phillips of Montreal, in urging that no discussion of the issues be undertaken at the present time.

"The less said now, the better," remarked A. Saunders of Goderich.

It was in adopting this idea of silence for the immediate present that the convention decided not to make any move towards instructing its tariff committee to go ahead with a campaign along protection lines.

The debate came at the close of the reception of the tariff committee's report. It was to the effect that the committee mentioned undertake the duty of issuing pamphlets, laying the tariff situation before the citizens of Canada, especially those in the agricultural districts, and that a select committee meet their representatives body for the purpose of taking up the whole issue.

H. J. Waddie of Hamilton proposed the resolution, and R. A. Robertson seconded. While nothing in it specifically stated that protection was to be laid before the people as a desirable policy, yet that was the understanding, and the entire debate was not centred on whether protection was needed or not, but rather as to whether the association should advance protection arguments now, or wait until the opening of Parliament before attempting to meet the memorials recently laid before Premier Laurier by the farmers of the middle west.

Mr. Waddie, who was responsible for the unsuccessful resolution for a tariff educational campaign, said the farmers needed the lesson the most. The discussion had been missed by the manufacturers on their way across the prairies. The free trade germ had been starved, and, with advent of so many free traders from the old country, who found the present tariff conditions in this young land rather irksome, the doctrines of free trade would be largely spread, unless a counter campaign was carried on. The farmers evidently thought that they were being "soaked" for the benefit of the manufacturers' interests, and it was the duty of the latter to demonstrate that this was not so.

P. W. Ellis of Toronto thought that it would be wiser if the manufacturer would take some action to hold a conference with the agricultural interests, with a view to arriving at some amicable arrangements as to tariffs. At the present time some of the free traders, such as one man in Portage la Prairie, declared that the seven million people in Canada should not be taxed $100,000,000, but they did not go on to say to what they proposed doing to raise the money necessary for the improvements demanded in the Dominion, and they did not offer any changes to the present policy of tariffs prevailing in the country. It was strange why so many took exception to the levying of duties which provided money for the needs of Canada. He followed with illustrations of what had been achieved by the protection in the United States.

R. A. Robertson of Hamilton, confessing himself as one of the "extinct dodos" in the manufacturing ranks who did not favor high protection, declared that, instead of starting a campaign to spread the doctrines of protection, it would be wiser to approach the farmers with a little sugar coating and hold conferences with them. It could perhaps be termed "A Conference for the Discussion of Ways and Means for Maintaining the Revenue of the Country."

The supporters of the "wait" idea won, and an amendment to leave the whole question in the hands of the committee to do as was thought best, took the place of the resolution which was withdrawn.

Only one business session was held yesterday. Three will be held to-day, the closing day of the convention, with a banquet in the evening, following the election of officers and members of the executive council. Ballots have been handed out to the delegates and will be returned to-day.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Ira Rymal, a prominent farmer of Mersea Township, is dead.

The Bishop of Salisbury arrived at New York from England yesterday.

The Canada Steel Co. will build a four hundred thousand dollar mill at Hamilton.

Wm. J. Bryan has announced that he cannot support the Democratic nominee for Governor of Nebraska.

Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell reached Ottawa on his way home after a week or more spent in the woods.

It is reported that the Old Guard Republicans in New York may propose Senator Root for Temporary Chairman of the convention at Saratoga.

No damage to the crops west of Edmonton has resulted from the recent frosts and rain, according to J. J. Moore of the Immigration Department.

Three men were arrested at Oak Lake, Man., with about four thousand dollars' worth of jewelry in their possession, stolen from a store in Manitota.

Judge Demers of Montreal refused yesterday to maintain an injunction against the civic enquiry into the charges that certain employes were Freemasons. His honor declared, however, that the investigation was irregular.

That Canadian manufacturers should unite in having an agency in the City of Mexico is the suggestion made by the trade commissioner in the weekly report issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. At present the U. S. practically controls the market.

Jackson Caught In Toledo.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Word was received by Superintendent of Provincial Police Rogers yesterday that Frank Jackson, colored, has been arrested in Toledo, in connection with the murder of Jacob Enos at Chatham on July 18 last. Inspector Greer left last night for Toledo with the necessary papers, to apply for extradition.

The story of the affair is that Jackson, John Johnson and one Needham were going home together about 11 o'clock on the night in question. They met Enos and a quarrel ensued. The latter was stabbed in the abdomen and Enos received a bullet in the eye, which penetrated the brain and proved fatal. Johnson has been arrested in Detroit, and if Jackson is extradited the pair will be charged with murder at the assizes in Chatham.

Big Fur Merger.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Two of the leading Canadian fur houses with branches and warehouses in leading Canadian cities have completed a merger. They are Holt, Renfrew & Co. of Quebec, and the Dunlop, Cooke & Co. of Montreal, Boston and Winnipeg. The output of the two firms reaches $2,000,000 annually. The Winnipeg business of W. J. Hammond is also absorbed.

The new company will be known as the Holt, Renfrew Co., Limited. The negotiations for the merger have been in progress for some months, and the new Holt, Renfrew store in Toronto was erected with a view to their completion. The business, as before, will be managed from Quebec. A new building is in course of construction in Montreal, and another will likely be built in Winnipeg soon.

Tried to Poison Herself.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—There was a scene of excitement in the police cells yesterday, when Rose Cyr, aged 19 who had just been sentenced to nine months with hard labor, swallowed three mercury pills in an attempt to commit suicide.

The strength of the dose probably saved her life, for in a few moments after swallowing the poison she became violently sick, and the pills were ejected before they had time to dissolve and permeate her system.

Columbia's Right to Property?

New York, Sept. 22.—The right of Columbia College to property worth approximately $1,000,000 bequeathed to it for a cancer research fund by the late George Crocker, the California millionaire, was attacked yesterday, when Crocker's stepchildren applied to the Supreme Court for an injunction to prevent the executors of the will from selling the property.

Assaulted Six-Year-Old Child.

Winnipeg, Sept. 22.—Two years and twenty lashes was the sentence meted out by Judge Meyers yesterday to Arthur Lefevre, for criminally assaulting a child six years old. R. P. Graham, deputy assistant attorney-general, for the crown, recommended the maximum penalty, that of life.

Married at Eighty-One.

Leamington, Sept. 22.—Major A. W. Morley, 81 years of age, was united in marriage here yesterday to Mrs. Mary Wood, aged 73 years. The major was born and raised in Lake County, Ohio. He is a veteran of the American civil war.

The Women Jeered Her

Testimony of Emily Jackson Robs Leneve of the Sympathy That Was Felt For Her and Crowds Taunt Her on Streets—Crippen Is to Be Tried for Murder, According to Coroner's Verdict.

London, Sept. 22.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and his typist, Ethel Clara Leneve, were formally committed yesterday for trial for the murder of the former's wife, Cora Belle Crippen, the actress who was known on the stage at Belle Elmore. The doctor is charged as the principal and his companion as an accessory after the fact.

Arthur Newton, counsel for the prisoners, said he would reserve his defence until the trial proper was held.

The inquest into the death of the person, parts of whose body were unearthed in the cellar of the Crippen home in Hilldrop crescent, has not been ended, and another session of the court will be held next Monday. The crown has attempted show that the parts found were of the body of Belle Elmore, but its medical experts have not been able to swear positively regarding the sex of the victim. At Monday's session Emily Jackson, at whose hon Miss Leneve lodged up to March 12 last, recited a conversation which she had with her lodger, which indicated that the girl expected to marry Crippen after his wife had left him. This testimony appears to have robbed the accused girl of some sympathy which she has heretofore enjoyed, and was the cause of a hostile demonstration when she arrived at the Bow street court yesterday. The cab which she occupied, which was followed by a crowd of hooting women, and their taunts, were echoed by the throng that had gathered in the vicinity of the court.

There was nothing especially new in yesterday's testimony. Inspector Dew identified the suit of boy's clothing, which William Long swore he had purchased at Crippen's request, as the suit worn by Miss Leneve at the time of her arrest. Mrs. Jackson repeated the evidence which she had given before the coroner's jury. Miss Merion Curnow, who formerly was employed as an office manager by Crippen, told of cashing checks for the doctor shortly before he fled for Canada. She said Crippen told her to say nothing about him to anyone. Gilbert M. Rylance, the prisoner's partner in the manufacture of artificial teeth, told of receiving a note from Crippen in which the latter said that in order to escape trouble he would be obliged to absent himself for a time.

A Dreadful Murder.

Westchester, Pa., Sept. 22.—Search is being made to-day by the police of all towns in this vicinity for a man who is suspected of murdering Mrs. John Saus, her two small daughters, and a young son, at their home at Byers, Pa., 12 miles from here. The suspect formerly boarded at the Saus home, and it is believed robbery was the motive for the terrible deed, and that the four victims were killed in order to prevent an identification. The skulls of the woman and her children had been crushed in as though by an axe or heavy club.

The bodies were discovered by the husband and father upon his return from work Tuesday night.

A Novelty In Strike.

Halifax, Sept. 22.—A new phase of the strike in the Cumberland Railway & Coal Co.'s mines in Springhill, is being experienced. The men have been out for fourteen months. When the school re-opened the children of the strikers went out in a body, refusing to sit beside the children of the strikebreakers or men at work in the mines. The former were in the majority, and they not only went out, but stayed out.

The school authorities, to tide over the trouble in the meantime, have asked the non-union youngsters to stay away from school.

Awarded $1,000 Damages.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—Henry Corby, 75 Temperance street, was awarded $1,000 in the non-jury assizes yesterday against George Bryan, 16 Temperance street, in a fight over a joist between properties which Corby claimed overcrowded on his land. Bryan has the option of paying the thousand or removing the objectionable portion of the joist.

EXAMINER ROAD RACES TO TAKE PLACE AS USUAL ON THANKSGIVING DAY, OCT. 31

Just a little reminder.

The Examiner Road Races, both senior and junior, will be held, as usual, this year on Thanksgiving Day which the government has set for Monday, October 31st. Arrangements are already being made for this, the biggest event in the year's sporting calendar, and better prizes than ever before will be offered.

Already a number of runners are in training, and there promise to be unusually large fields in both junior and senior events. The Y.M.C.A., which, until last year, was always prominent in the two events, having three senior winners and one junior to its credit, will once more be to the fore this year, as a number of the triangle men will enter and are already in training. The course will be the same this year as in other races, the senior from Lakefield to the Examiner office, and the junior from a point 100 yards north of the five mile post on the Lakefield road, to the Examiner office.

It is not too early to get busy and commence training. Runners should realize by this time that they cannot hope to run ten miles at any degree of speed without a considerable amount of training. The winners last year were Albert Smoke, of Chemong in the senior race, and Willie Edwards, of Keene, in the junior event. The record for the senior event is 55 mins., 16 secs.; made by Ernie Wilson, in 1907.

RACES AT KINMOUNT FAIR DRIVERS WERE FINED

Because They Did Not Drive Their Horses Out---Most of the Harness Horses Which Appeared at the Peterborough Industrial Took Part---Planet Won the Free-For-All.

The races at the Galway Fair at Kinmount on Tuesday were interesting. Most of the horses which raced at the Peterborough Industrial were there, as the following report from the Lindsay Warder indicates:

2.40 Class.

In the 2.40 class there were three horses, Lew Jean, owned by T. Hodgins of Orillia; Ned Wilkes, owned by Wes Fanning, Lindsay, and Harry Mac, owned by Dave McMahon, of Reaboro. As Harry Mac was a green horse, and went three stiff heats in that class, he was not in shape for this race, and the fight consequently was between Ned Wilkes and Lew Jean. They went three fast heats. Lew Jean getting first, Ned Wilkes second and Harry Mac third. The judges did not seem well satisfied with the way the horses were being driven, and called the drivers up to the stand. From a spectator's point of view there did seem to be something wrong in spite of the fact that the finishes were close. The driver of Harry Mac. was fined $5 for driving out. He protested that his horse was green and had gone 21 heats within the last week. The track was heavy and he could not get up. He claimed that his horse was "rolling" and that the judges should be able to see it that way. It was learned afterwards that his arguments were sustained, and the fine was not collected. Summary:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Lew Jean, T. Hodgins, Orillia | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Ned Wilkes, Wes Fanning, Lindsay | 2 | 2 | 2 |
| Harry Mac., Dave McMahon, Reaboro | 3 | 3 | 3 |

Free-For-All.

The free-for-all, of course, was the most hotly contested race. There were four entries, Dot L., owned by A. J. Bowens, Orono; Jenny Price, owned by McGeer, Meaford; Planet, owned by Jas. McDowell, Toronto; and Harry K., owned by Joe Lee, Fenelon Falls. Dot L. drew the pole, but lost it on the turn to Planet, and gradually fell back to last place. Harry K. fell in behind Planet, while Jenny Price took up third position. They kept in order until on the back stretch in the last half. Then Jenny Price opened up. She passed Harry K. and then went at Planet. They had a beautiful drive down the home stretch, Jenny Price winning by half a length. In the second heat Planet showed his ability at getting away by taking the pole and maintaining it again until the home stretch. Then Jenny Price went at him again and had him beaten when she broke just long enough to get in for second place. In the third heat Jenny Price had up and Dot L. was drawn. This left Harry K. and Planet in the game. It is the opinion of horsemen that Harry K., who was drawn by George Curtis, would have won but for a peculiar accident. Harry K. was coming right at Planet as they turned into the stretch. Just at this moment a stray cow crossed the track and upset Harry K's bike. The driver was thrown off, but fortunately the horse turned and came back to Mr. Curtis and he finished the race third.

The driver of Jenny Price was called up to the stand and asked to give an account of his driving. He said his horse was going bad and got off with a warning. The next heat he held in again and Planet won a close heat from Harry K. The driver of Jeny Price was fined $5 for not driving out. There was no question about the race being square. They were out to win, and Jenny Price was after the money. She won the first heat and would have got the second, but for a break. The driver, seeing that they would have to go extra heats and that his horse was tiring, did not went to kill him on the heavy track. He was sure of second money, and has a chance at a $250 purse at the Lindsay Central. He was evidently saving his horse for the race here. Summary:

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Jenny Price, McGeer, Meaford | 1 | 2 | 2 | 3 |
| Planet, McDowell, Toronto | 2 | 1 | 1 | 1 |
| Harry K., Joe Lee, Fenelon Falls | 3 | 3 | 3 | 2 |
| Dot L., A. J. Bowens, Orono | 4 | 4 | dr | |

Time 2.26¼, 2.29¾, 2.41, 2.31.

Starter W. T. Bowes, Lindsay; judges, John Aldous, Fenelon Falls; John Kenny, Bobcaygeon.

READY TO FIGHT IN A CELLAR OR AN AEROPLANE

Boston Tar Baby Corners Champion Jack Johnson and Breaks Up His Speech With an Offer to Fight Him Any Place.

FOR A $20,000 PURSE

BOSTON, MASS., SEPT. 21.—The long and fruitless "chin chatter" between Jack Johnson and Sam Langford was expected to end to-day with the meeting of the two at a local newspaper office, each with a $20,000 roll in his pocket to bind a match for the world's heavyweight championship.

"I'll fight Johnson for $20,000 in a cellar or on an aeroplane," (the "Tar Baby" called it "earplane"), was the challenge issued by Langford.

"Well, I am here to make a match with Langford," was the champion's retort.

With such expressions of good faith as the basis of their hopes, fight followers were counting on a match between the two ebony maulers at last being made.

Langford, who has camped on Johnson's trail for many moons, had his inning last night at the weekly show at the Armoury Club, when he climbed through the ropes and interrupted an oration that Johnson was delivering by his "cellar or earplane" challenge. Langford's action created a storm of enthusiasm, and virtually forced the champion to say that he had come to Boston in the hope of signing up with the Hub's eminent scrapper.

Johnson and Langford shook hands on their promise.

Says Kaufman Is The Man To Beat Jack Johnson

By Dr. Walter Peet

The interest of the whole country was aroused last summer over the meeting of the two best known contestants for the prize ring honors, so much so that discussions were heard on all sides; and peaceable, conservative people, who had scorned fistic matters, were worked up to the fever heat of feeling, while much hard-earned money of law-abiding citizens changed hands. It was thought at the time, on account of the great reputations of Jeffries and Johnson, that this interest, which culminated on July 4, would wane and die, as do many of our American fads, launched on the top wave by our proverbial national enthusiasm, and soon be a thing of the past. But this thing was not only temporary, and the public is now clamoring for a worthy opponent for the winner of that memorable event.

The various experts have come out and admitted that Johnson is the one prize fighter in the ring to-day; but there are many who say that there are two stars rising above the pugilistic horizon that may possibly eclipse the big dark one, and put him into oblivion—metaphorically, literally and historically. These are Kaufman and Langford, and each has a large constituency. It looks, however, as though Langford were too small for championship honors. As the carsmen say—and it holds good for pugilism as well as for rowing—"A good big man is better than a good little man."

Last December—seven months before the fight at Reno—the writer carefully examined Johnson and Jeffries for The World, making measurements, which were described from both the medical and athletic view points.

On Labor Day I examined and measured Kaufman and Langford, and saw the bout between them in the evening.

Kaufman is a magnificent specimen of human development. I do not think that I have seen a 'varsity rowing man, of the many hundreds that I have gone over, that could surpass him.

Now comparing Kaufman with Johnson the measurements are:

| Johnson Last December. | | Kaufman on Labor Day. |
|---|---|---|
| 31 | Age | 24 |
| 195 lbs. | Weight | 200 lbs. |
| 6 ft. 1-3 in. | Height | 6 ft. 1¾ in. |
| 17½ in. | Neck | 17 in. |
| 41 in. | Chest | 40 in. |
| 34 in. | Waist | 33½ in. |
| 14½ in. | Upper arm | 12⅝ in. |
| 13½ in. | Forearm | 12½ in. |
| 24½ in. | Thigh | 23½ in. |
| 15½ in. | Calf | 16 in. |

The first cardinal point is years. As Johnson had the better of it in this respect over Jeffries, so has Kaufman over Johnson, but more so. "Youth will prevail," something many of us forget. Kaufman's star is rising. Johnson's will, before long, begin to decline.

Again, this youngster of twenty-four has Johnson beaten in height and in weight, but this was also true of Jeffries.

The same difference in neck measurement obtains as did between Johnson and Jeffries, the advantage going to the negro by a quarter of an inch only.

During the contest on Labor Day I was very near Kaufman's corner. I watched his respiration closely after each round, and it was plain to see that he was breathing most slowly and smoothly for one in a bona fide contest.

Physchologically both are far and away ahead of Jeffries. They look one in the eye in the most straightforward, kindly way, without a trace of nervousness, and they have an abundance of self-confidence without being in the least disagreeably obtrusive. Both are most cheerful and lighthearted at all times, Johnson the more so, perhaps, which is a valuable asset in everything in this life. And, after all, the psychological end of it is a much greater factor than most of us think.

JACK SLATTERN LEADING BATTER IN THE EASTERN

The leading batter of the Eastern league will undoubtedly be Slattery, who is playing first base for Toronto. He is the only man who has played all season that is sticking above .300. This is the first time in years that but one man ends the baseball year above those figures, says the Buffalo "Express." Usually there are a half dozen, but the pitchers have been so clever that there may be none by the end of the week, for Slattery has not a big margin to fool away. Right Fielder Goode, of Baltimore, and Left Fielder Batch, of Rochester, are just now running even for second place with .290 each.

Noah Heline and Dan Moeller of Rochester are running a stiff race for the stolen base honour. It is an even toss at the present time. Both are very clever at the trick and catchers always dislike to see either get to first.

George Merritt has proved to be Buffalo's winning pitcher with fourteen victories and seven lost. Jack Cronin is next, with Mularkey, Taylor, Carmichael, Vowinkle and Jessop following in the order named. Buffalo is two points back of her opponents in both team batting and fielding.

KEENE HORSES CLEANED UP

Bourbon Brook and Tom Tariff, Winners at Marmora Fair

Keene horses were decidedly in evidence at the Marmora Fair on Tuesday. In the free-for-all Bourbon Brook, ably driven by his owner, Wm. Elmhirst, won in three straight heats, beating such good horses as Patterson, owned by Eddie Jones, of Peterborough. The fastest mile was 2.17. In the 2.35 class "Tim Tariff" met with an accident in the first heat, when his bike was smashed. The next three heats, however, went to the Keene horse, which was driven splendidly by Wm. Elmhirst.

WEDDING BELLS

KIDD—BORLAND.

A very pretty house wedding took the Breadalbane estate, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Borland, Otonabee, when their eldest daughter, Rubie, became the wife of Mr. Walter H. Kidd, of Indian River.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked very dainty in a gown of embroidered baptiste and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. Her sister, Miss Pearl Borland, was bridesmaid and looked very pretty in a gown of white persian lawn, trimmed with embroidered flouncing and carried a bouquet of pink asters and gladiolus. W. Earle Kidd of Toronto, brother of the groom, was best man, while the wedding march was played by Miss Maidie Post, of Belleville.

The ceremony took place in a bower of asters and asparagus and was performed by the Rev. Wm. Johnston, of Keene, in the presence of about seventy guests. After dinner had been partaken of the bride and groom left on the evening train for Ottawa.

The bride's going away costume was of plum coloured diagonal serge and black hat with white mount. Mr. and Mrs. Kidd will, on their return, reside at Indian River.

DUNFORD—GUERIN.

A quiet wedding took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the residence of Father O'Brien, who performed the ceremony, when Mr. G. Dunford and Miss Clara Guerin were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. The bridesmaid was Miss Maud Landry, while Mr. John Hanrahan assisted the groom. The happy couple will reside at 75 Ware street, city.

"RAT" SAVES GIRL'S HEAD

Clogs Loom as It Draws Her Into Its Machinery

Examiner Special.

ALLENTOWN, PA., SEPT. 17th. Miss Helen Eckstein, a good-looking miss of seventeen, daughter of Alfred Eckstein, was saved from decapitation by the "rat" she wore in her hair. She is employed in the Adelaide Silk Mills, and had occasion to go back of one of the looms to make some slight adjustment.

Her hair was caught in the cards, and she was being drawn into the machinery, with prospects of her head being flattened out like a piece of sheet steel, when the "rat" clogged the loom and she fainted, a hair-pulling being her worst injury.

HAD A SHOE STOLEN FROM FOOT

Sleeping Man's Strange Experience at East Liverpool

Examiner Special.

EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, SEPT. 20th.—George Barton, of Georgetown, Pa., had the unusual experience of having his shoes stolen as he slept. While on a visit here he sat on a stavepile at the Frank P. Williams cooper shop. He had just purchased a $5 pair of shoes. As one of the shoes hurt him he removed it. While he rested he fell asleep, and when he awoke he found that the other shoe had been removed and both stolen.

He walked barefooted to the city, where he borrowed a pair of shoes and returned home.

COCHRANE OPENS FAIR.

Central Algoma Exhibition Begins With 12,000 Present.

Sault Ste Marie, Sept. 23.—Before a crowd of 12,000 people, the Central Algoma Fair was opened yesterday afternoon by Hon. Frank Cochrane. He was entertained at luncheon by the ladies of the district. One hundred citizens of city and surrounding country were present, including A. C. Boyce, M.P.; W. H. Hearst, M.P.P.; T. J. Drummond, president Lake Superior Corporation; W. C. Franz, J. Taylor, Mayor T. E. Simpson, W. R. Smith, M.P., Judges Johnston and O'Connor, and members of bar, Moses McFadden, crown attorney, and others.

T. J. Drummond believed that it was about time farmers and manufacturers got together and worked out a systematic plan for the country's good. He admonished farmers to patronize the home town, saying that a home market was better than a district one.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane fell in line with the suggestion that a permanent agriculturist be sent to the Soo, who would remain there during the entire season. The agricultural college at Guelph was doing much, but the men sent out were too widely distributed to be effective. He was glad to tell the people that arrangements had been made with the Dominion Government for early completion of the Soo-Sudbury trunk road.

He then addressed 3,000 school children who had marched to the grounds.

Praise for Q.O.R.

London, Sept. 23.—The Queen's Own Rifles have not as yet participated in the fighting manoeuvres, but their marching is earning unstinted admiration. The Associated Chambers of Commerce have passed a resolution in favor of compulsory service for the youth of the empire.

Request Granted

Resolution Is Passed by Representatives of Power Using Towns Affirming the Principle That If Power Be Sent Out of the Country All Towns Must Share In Profits —No Long Term Contracts.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(Special.)—About 50 representatives of the municipalities in the Western Power Union under the hydro-electric power commission met here to-day to consider the application from Windsor for 15,000 horse power, and unanimously adopted the following resolution, on the motion of Controller Spence, Toronto, seconded by Mayor Guest, St. Thomas:

"That this meeting records its desire that the City of Windsor should be granted a supply of electric energy by the H. E. P. commission, at whatever rate the power can be equitably supplied, in view of the other service given by the transmission line serving Windsor, and that it be affirmed as a principle that any Niagara power which the commission supplies to be used outside this province should be supplied only on condition that such service should be terminable on reasonable notice, and that all profits on such service should be appropriated so as to be equitably advantageous to all Ontario municipalities supplied by the commission with Niagara Falls transmission system, and such supply to be entirely under the control of the commission."

There were present: Representing the commission, Hon. Adam Beck, chairman; P. W. Sothman, chief engineer; E. C. Bettell, secretary; and as delegates, Mayor Geary and Controller Spence, Toronto; Mayor Beatty and Ald. Chapman, Eckert, Brock, Wyatt, Underwood, Fitzgerald, Tancock, London; Mayor Hahn and Ald. Uttley of Berlin; Mayor Hanna and Ald. Sheppard, Keogh, McKay, Clinton of Windsor; Mayor Armstrong of Paris; Mayor Graybill of Waterloo; Reeve Jackson of Port Stanley; Mayor Guest and City Solicitor Doherty of St. Thomas; Mayor Scarff of Woodstock; Mayor Austen of Chatham; Mayor Dingman of Stratford; Mayor McCallum of Seaforth; Councillor Collins and G. C. Wilson, M.L.A., of Dundas; Mayor Hastings of Guelph; J. W. Purnell of Walkerville; Controller Cooper and City Solicitor Waddell of Hamilton; Reeve Hull of Weston.

Few Obstructionists.

There were also present some uncredentialed persons, and of these Ald. Bedford, who, with Ald. Porter, was the only opponents of the power scheme on the Windsor council, and John Wood, who appeared to represent himself, neither Mayor Hanna nor Ald. Sheppard having ever seen him before, made themselves prominent in an attempt to obstruct the proceedings. The chairman, Hon. Adam Beck, permitted them great latitude, until those present began to resent the intrusion, upon which the chairman called for order. Ald. Bedford frequently interrupted and wished to go into the whole question, as it appeared locally at Windsor. The chairman told him that he evidently did not understand the situation. The private views of Windsor people did not interest the meeting, which had been called to discuss the application of the council.

It became evident at an early stage that there was no disposition to accord any special favors to Windsor in admitting the city to the power union. The strict letter of the agreement was stipulated for, and Mayor Geary led the way in asking questions with a view to prevent any advantage being overlooked, which should be shared with all the other municipalities. There appeared to be a fear that Windsor might sell her surplus power at a profit for her own benefit, and the resolution was framed to block that possibility.

The effect of the resolution would naturally be, should Windsor proceed with the exploitation of power, to encourage the city in the development of local consumption of the power, and hasten its return from Detroit where it is expected the surplus will be exported.

Queen's Professor Resigns.

Kingston, Sept. 23.—Prof. John Marshall, professor of English at Queen's, has resigned. He has accepted the position of principal of the high school at Weyburn, Sask. Prof. Greaves of Carlton College, Minnesota, will take his place.

Prof. John Watson, vice-principal of Queen's, will leave for Glasgow Oct. 1, to deliver lectures in the Scottish University.

George Smith, mining expert and authority on minerals, died yesterday.

Redemptorists Summoned to Court.

Paris, Sept. 23.—The Redemptionist Fathers were summoned to the correctional court yesterday, charged with having secretly reconstructed the order, which was dissolved under the law of 1901. The police have seized documents, which, it is alleged, establish that the order is again in full activity throughout France.

May Lock-Out 200,000.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The metal working employers organization met yesterday and voted to lock-out the organized workmen in the trade Oct. 6, unless the striking shipbuilders return to work before that date. The employers estimate that 200,000 workmen will be affected by the lock-out.

Fire Gutted Boarding-House.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 23.—Fire yesterday gutted the building formerly the St. Clair Hotel but now a boarding-house, conducted by Mrs. Haney. The cause of the fire is unknown. The damage is about $2,000.

Convention At An End

John Hendry Is Succeeded by Hull Man as Chief Executive of Organization—Resolution Is Passed Favoring Removal of Vexatious Features of Company Law and a More Uniform System.

Vancouver, Sept. 23. The following officers were elected at yesterday's session of the Manufacturers' convention: President, W. H. Rowley, Hull, Que.; vice-president, Nathaniel Curry, Montreal, Ontario vice-president, W. B. Tindall, Toronto; Quebec vice-president, J. S. N. Dougall, Montreal; British Columbia vice-president, R. T. Rogers, Vancouver; Nova Scotia vice-president, J. T. Edwards, Londonderry; Manitoba vice-president, T. R. Deacon, Winnipeg; New Brunswick vice-president, T. S. Simms, St. John; Prince Edward Island vice-president, Hon. S. L. Hazzard, Charlottetown; Alberta and Saskatchewan vice-president, W. G. Clark, Edmonton; treasurer, George Booth, Toronto.

Chairman of standing committees: Parliamentary, Atwell Fleming, Toronto; commercial intelligence, S. L. Chapman, Toronto; reception and membership, J. A. McMahon, Hamilton; technical education, George A.

W. H. ROWLEY.

Howell, Toronto; industrial Canada, R. J. Young, Montreal; tariff, T. A. Russell, Toronto; railway transportation, Harry Bertram, Dundas; representative Eastern and Central Canada Manufacturers' Mutual Insurance Co., G. A. Murray, Toronto; auditor, Wilton G. Eddie. Chairman of insurance committee to be appointed.

The 1910 convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association concluded yesterday with but one session, the annual banquet last night, the delegates go to Victoria, where, during Friday and Saturday they will be the guests of the Provincial Government.

The text of the resolution on the important companies act as as follows:

"Whereas there appears to be uncertainty as to whether charters for manufacturing companies should be issued by the Federal Government at Ottawa, or the Provincial Governments of the various provinces.

"Also, that uncertainty exists as to the extent of the powers granted by the provinces and the Dominion respectively to such companies.

"And that various vexatious restrictions and conditions are at present imposed upon the exercise of the powers of companies under charters both Dominion and provincial.

"Resolved, that the attention of the Federal and the Provincial Governments be drawn to the unsatisfactory state of the present law, and that a recommendation be made that steps should be taken to place the administration of the law governing the incorporation and control of companies throughout the whole Dominion upon a more uniform and reasonable basis."

Among the resolutions adopted yesterday was one declaring for a more uniform and reasonable basis throughout the Dominion for the incorporation and control of companies. Another pressed for a final decision on the question of the legality of the insurance associations. A third went strongly for reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire. Little discussion followed the reception of the resolutions.

Contrary to general expectations there was no specific declaration on the Canadian tariff question and reciprocity with the U. S. This issue, however, was covered by the resolution on imperial preference, which, after mentioning reciprocal preferential trade within the Empire, closed with believing that thereby the bonds of union will be strengthened, and, the British Empire freed from dependence on foreign countries for food and other supplies.

Expecting probable changes in the Australian tariff, the meeting passed a resolution asking that the Dominion Government arrange for an interchange of commodities between Canada and Australia on a preferential basis of custom duties.

Diamond Robber Gets One Year.

Saskatoon, Sept. 23.—Herbert Faulkner was yesterday sentenced to one year at hard labor in the common jail at Prince Albert, for the theft of $1,000 worth of diamonds.

Ratified To-Day

Through Grain Route From Beyond Edmonton Is Completed by Arrangement Reached Between Representatives of the Government and Officials of the Grand Trunk —To Be Ready This Season.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Arrangements have been practically completed for the immediate use by the Grand Trunk Pacific of the new line of the National Transcontinental between Winnipeg and Superior Junction. The branch from Port Arthur is completed, and there is now a through grain route available from Port Arthur to Edmonton and beyond. The Winnipeg-Superior Junction section had not been taken out of the hands of Contractor McArthur, and probably will not be taken over by the National Transcontinental Commission for some months yet.

Yesterday afternoon the terms of a temporary traffic arrangement were discussed at a conference between Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. G. P. Graham, Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Mr. C. M. Hays, Mr. Alf. Smithers of London (chairman of the Grand Trunk Board), Mr. McArthur, the contractor, and Hon. S. N. Parent, chairman of the National Transcontinental Commission. The basis of an agreement was arrived at, and this will be completed in Montreal to-day.

Bled to Death.

St. John, N.B., Sept. 23.—To bleed to death far from human habitation was the fate of John the trapper a few days ago. John Sims for the past seven years has lived in a small hut near Lepreaux and existed by hunting and trapping. He is said to have a wife and daughter at Liverpool, but he shunned company, and no one knew anything of his antecedents. On Wednesday a boy who sometimes took him provisions went to the hut to find him sitting bolt upright with both feet shot off and quite dead, with his long rifle across his knees. He had bled to death.

Offered to Sell the Prints.

Detroit, Sept. 23.—A new precedent in automobile law was made when Judge Donovan fined Julius Haltzenberger $2,000 for offering to sell to the Jules Motor Co. of Toronto, prints of the King car.

The judge laid particular stress on the effect of such conduct on Detroit's leading industry. Haltzenberger, made copies of the designs jointly produced by King and himself, told Attorney Atkinson that he owned them and he was advised that he had the right to sell them.

Judge McGibbon Appointed.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—It is announced by the Labor Department that Judge McGibbon of Brampton has been appointed chairman of the board of conciliation which will deal with differences between the Canadian Pacific, Canadian Northern and Grand Trunk Pacific and the maintenance of way employes. The railways will be represented by F. H. McGuigan, and the men by W. T. Lee of Toronto. The board will deal with each railway separately.

Let Prisoner Escape.

St. Catharines, Sept. 23.—County Constable Jay Book of Grimsby must appear before Judge Carman on Oct. 6, to explain his conduct at Grimsby Beach last month, when he is said to have let a prisoner who had been placed in his care escape from his custody.

Wireless Was Interrupted.

Buffalo, Sept. 23.—When the big passenger steamer Western States arrived in port last night, 15 hours behind her schedule. Capt. F. G. Stewart was mad clean through because over fifty wireless messages which he sent after his boat became disabled off Long Point, in Lake Erie, had been interrupted.

ALWAYS AILING!

How many women there are to whom these words apply exactly! They are not quite "sick in bed", but they almost wish, as they struggle through each day, that they were. Frequent headaches, loss of energy, loss of appetite, depression and attacks of biliousness and indigestion make life a dragging misery.

In nearly every case the cause of it all is chronic constipation, that trouble so often made light of, but which brings about so much suffering. As a result of it the whole system is filled with impurities and almost everything, including the special functions of womanhood, goes wrong.

Hundreds of thousands of women have had reason to thank Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills for relief from all this chain of miseries, and for restoration to health and happiness. For over fifty years, and in every part of the world, these Pills have been tested and proved a great female medicine.

Being purely vegetable, they are not harsh like salts and so many other purgatives, nor do they weaken, sicken or gripe.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are a perfect blood purifier, and a sure cure for biliousness, indigestion, headache, sallow complexion, liver and kidney troubles, piles, pimples, boils and other ailments that arise from the sluggish action of bowels, liver or kidneys. By purifying the blood and invigorating every organ in the whole body they relieve and cure female ailments and restore normal, healthy conditions.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are, in truth, a blessing to women, as Mrs. Harrison, of Richmond, Va., found. She writes:

"About six weeks ago I first used Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, and I must state that I found them a most superior medicine. My complaint was peculiar to women—langour, debility, and bilious attacks, which combined to make my days thoroughly wretched. Indeed, there were spells when I used to wonder in the morning how I could manage to get through my household duties, and was forced to struggle through the day when I should have been in bed. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have made me vigorous and well. I noticed the change from the very first dose."

"The Pillar of Light"

BY LOUIS TRACY

"An idler, eh? You do not strike me as being properly classed."

"It's the fact, nevertheless. My grandfather was pleased to invest a few dollars in real estate on the sheep farm where Manhattan avenue now stands. My uncle has half; my mother had the other half."

"Are both of your parents dead?"

"Yes, years ago. Lost at sea, too, on my father's yacht."

"What a terrible thing!"

"It must have been something like that. I was only six years old at the time. My uncle lost his wife and child, too, when the Esmeralda went down. It nearly killed him. I never thought he would marry again, but I suppose he's tired of being alone."

"Probably. By the way, now that you mention it, Mrs. Vansittart wished to see me yesterday. I could not spare a moment so I sent her a civil message. She told Constance that she thought she knew me."

"Hardly likely," smiled Pyne, "if you have passed nearly the whole of your life in lighthouses."

"I did not quite mean to convey that impression. I knew a man of her late husband's name, many years ago."

"She is a nice woman in some ways," said Pyne reflectively. "Not quite my sort, perhaps, but a lady all the time. She is not an American. Came to the States about '90, I think, and lost her hubby on a ranch in California. Anyhow, the old man is dead stuck on her, and they ought to hit it off well together. The Vansittart you knew didn't happen to marry a relative of yours?"

"No. He was a mere acquaintance."

"Odd thing," ruminated Pyne. "It has just occurred to me that she resembles your daughter,—your elder daughter,—not so much in face as in style. Same sort of graceful figure, only a trifle smaller."

"Such coincidences often happen in the human family. For instance, you are not wholly unlike Enid."

"Holy gee!" said Pyne, "I'm too run down to stand flattery."

"Likeness is often a matter of environment. Characteristics, mannerisms, the subtle distinctions of class and social rank, soak in through the skin quite as sensibly as they are conferred by heredity. Take the ploughman's son and rear him in a royal palace, turn the infant prince into a peasant, and who shall say, when they reach man's estate, 'This is the true King.' You will remember it was said of the Emporr Augusta: Urbem lateritiam invenit, marmoream reliquit. 'He found the city brick, he left it marble.' The same noble result may be obtained in every healthy child properly educated."

The college-bred youth had not entered into any general conversation with Brand before. He had the tact now to conceal his astonishment at the manner of his friend's speech.

"You fling heredity to the winds, then?" he asked.

Brand rose to his feet, as was his way when deeply moved.

"Thank God, yes!" he cried.

A faint hoot came to them through the chortling of the wind.

"One of our visitors," shouted Brand, "and here we are gossiping as though snugly seated in arm-chairs at the fireside."

He hurried to the gallery, putting on an oil-skin coat.

"We must win through, and I guess I'll play ball with my father-in-law," quoth Pyne to himself as he followed.

This time it was the Falcon alone, and she signalled with a lamp that it was deemed best to defer active operations until the following afternoon. The tide at dawn would not suit.

She went off, and the two men returned to the grateful shelter of the service-room.

Brand forbade further talk. Pyne must rest now and relieve him at 3 o'clock. The youngster needed no feather-bed; he was asleep in amazingly quick time. There is a supperless hunger which keeps people awake at night with a full larder in the house. The crude article differs from the cultured one so greatly that the man who hungers of necessity cannot sleep too much.

Thus far, the inhabitants of the lighthouse had been given quite enough nutriment to maintain life. There was no reason why any, even the most delicate, should be in real danger during the next forty-eight hours. But scientific reasoning and the animal instincts of mankind clash at times; in that lay the danger whose sullen shadow was deepening the lines in the corners of Brand's eyes.

Every hour, the officer on duty and some men of the watch visited him to report that all was well below. Some of the less drunken mutineers were pitifully sober now: the others were maudlin. Beyond the few words exchanged on this and kindred topics, he was left alone with his thoughts throughout the silent watch. Pyne slept heavily. Glancing at times at the youngster's stalwart figure and firm, handsome face, Brand found himself reviewing the buried years. He thought of the days when he, too, looked forth on the world with the stern enthusiasm of triumphant youth.

Long-forgotten ghosts were resurrected, shattered ideals built up again. He wondered, if the decades rolled back, would he decide, a second time, to abandon the fine career which lay at his feet and withdraw his grief and his talents to the seclusion of lonely rocks and silent headlands!

He had been happy, as men count happiness, during the decades. No cloud had arisen to mar the complete content of his life. The blossoming of the girls into delightful womanhood was an increasing joy to him, and it was passing strange that his little household should be plunged into a whirlpool of events in the very hour when their domesticity seemed to be most assured. The changeful moods of the elements found no counterpart in his nature. He, knowing the sea, did not expect it to remain fixed in one aspect. Whether in storm or calm the contrary would surely happen 'ere many days had passed. But life was a different thing. How came it that at the very close of so many years of association with the fickle ocean she should play such a trick on him and his daughters, enfold them with perils, snatch them from the quiet pleasures of the life they had planned for the future, and thrust upon them, even if they escaped with their lives, a publicity which he, at any rate, abhorred and even dreaded.

He harboured no delusions on this point. He knew that the drama of the Gulf Rock was now filling the columns of newspapers all over the world. He and his beloved girls would be written about, discussed, described in fulsome language, pictured by black and white artists, and eulogized by wide-awake editors eager to make much of a topic dear to the public mind.

On the rock they were undoubtedly in grave danger. Death confronted them—death at once extraordinary and ghastly. No tyrant of the Middle Ages, with all his paraphernalia for wringing truth or lies out of cringing wretches, had devised such a fate as threatened if the inconstant sea should choose to render the reef altogether unapproachable for many days. Yet, if help came, he and those dear to him were already steeped in unavoidable notoriety, bringing in its train certain vague disabilities which he had striven to avoid for over twenty years.

And all this because one fierce gale, out of the many he had endured, sprang into being at a moment when his mates were incapacitated and his daughters happened to pay him a surprise visit.

It is an insane freak of fortune," he muttered, "so incomprehensible, so utterly out of focus with common events, that if I were a superstitious man, I should regard it as betokening the approach of some great epoch in my life. Surely, a merciful Providence would not bring my girls here to subject them to the lingering torture of hunger and thirst. I must not think of it further That way lies madness."

There was at least one other troubled soul on the rock which divined some sinister portent in the storm. Mrs. Vansittart even at this moment, was staring into the black void with questioning eyes.

He resolutely threw back his head as if he would hurl into the outer darkness the gibbering phantom which whispered these words of foreboding. Although the lamp needed no attention just then, he climbed to the trimming stage merely to find relief in mechanical action. He carefully examined the adjustment, and, to judge how the weather was shaping, went out into the gallery to look at the distant lights.

The three quick flashes of the Seven Stones Lightship were very clear. That was a good sign. The wind came from that quarter, and, blustering though it was, driving gigantic waves before it into the loud embrace of the reef, it maintained the good promise of the last few hours.

Seeking the comparative shelter of the east side, he gazed steadily at the Lizard. Its two fixed electric beams, nearly in line with the Gulf Rock, were dull and watery. A local squall of rain was sweeping down from the land. Changeable, threatening, unsettled—the meteorologist might apply any of these terms to the prevalent conditions.

Far out in the Channel he saw the twinkling masthead lights of several steamers. Blow high or low, mails must travel and vessels put to sea. On such a night, at other times, he would re-enter the lighthouse with a cheery sense of its comfort and homelike aspect. Now he dreaded the brilliant interior of the service-room. Its garish aspect ill accorded with the patient misery, the useless repinings, the inebriate stupor which crouched beneath. If he and those committed to his charge were to be saved, either the sea must be stilled or another miracle of the loaves and fishes enacted.

There, alone on the gallery, amidst the din of howling wind and ceaseless plaint of the waves, he seemed to be apart, cut off from the sufferings within. He lifted his eyes to the sombre arch of the heavens. Men said the age of miracles had passed. Pray God it might not be so!

When Brand went out the sudden rush of cold air through the little door leading to the balcony aroused Pyne.

That young gentleman was rudely awakened from a seriously vivid dream. He fancied that Constance and he were clinging to the tail of an enormous kite, which had been made to hover over the rock by a green imp seated in a nabsurdly small boat.

They were solemnly advised by other gnomes, imps with sparkling, toad-like eyes, to entrust themselves to this precarious means of escape, but the instant they dropped off the ledge of the gallery their weight caused the kite to swoop downwards. The resultant plunge into the ocean and Constance's farewell shriek were nothing more terrifying than the chill blast and whistle of the air current admitted by Brand. But Pyne did not want to go to sleep again. He did not like emerald-hued spirits, which arranged such unpleasant escapades.

He straightened his stiff limbs and sat up.

He was about to feel in a pocket for his pipe — he experienced the worst pangs of hunger after waking in such fashion—when he saw a woman's head and shoulders emerging out of the stairway.

At first he thought it was Constance and he wondered why she had muffled her face in the deep collar of a cloak, but the visitor paused irresolutely when her waist was on a level with the floor.

She uttered a little gasp of surprise.

"You, Charlie?" she cried. "I thought you slept in the kitchen?"

"No, Mrs. Vansittart," he said. "I am assistant-keeper and I am here most of all the time with Mr. Brand. But what in the name of goodness—"

"I was restless," explained the lady hurriedly. "If I remained another minute among those women I should have screamed aloud. How peaceful you are here. Where is Mr. Brand?"

"Guess he's gone outside to squint at the weather. But come right in. I can offer you a chair. Mr. Brand wants to see you, and this is a quiet time for a chat."

"How does he know me? What did he say?"

Mrs. Vansittart pressed her left hand to her breast. With the other she kept the high collar over her mouth and cheeks. Pyne could only see her eyes, and the alarmed light that leaped into them increased his astonishment at her unexpected presence.

"It seems to me," he answered, "that if you just walk up four more steps and sit down you can ask him all those things yourself."

"Were you speaking of me to him."

"I did happen to mention you."

"And he said he knew me?"

"No, ma'am. He said nothing of the sort. But, for mercy's sake, what mystery is there about it?"

"Mystery! None whatever. I was mistaken. I have never met him. I came now to explain that to him. Oh—"

She dived suddenly as the gallery door opened. Brand caught a fleeting glimpse of her vanishing form.

"Who was that?" he asked.

Pyne had found his pipe and was filling it with tobacco.

"Mrs. Vansittart," he answered.

"Paying her long-deferred visit, I suppose. She chose a curious hour."

"So I thought. But she just popped her head in to tell you that she did not know you at all."

Brand smiled.

"Poor lady!" he said. She, like the rest of us, is perturbed and uneasy. I imagine she is of a somewhat hysterical temperament."

"That's so," agreed Pyne.

There were puzzling discrepancies in Mrs. Vansittart's explanation of her untimely appearance. Evidently she did not expect to meet him there. She thought she would find the lighthouse-keeper alone. The ready deduction presented itself that when she did encounter Brand she did not wish any third person to be present at the interview.

That Constance's father had no cause to look at matters in the same light he was quite certain. Anyhow, it was not his affair, and he declined to trouble his head about Mrs. Vansittart's vagaries.

So the young philosopher lit his pipe and delivered a dictum on the sex.

"Some women," he said, are made up of contradictions. She is one. I have known her for some time and I thought nothing could phaze her. But there must be a sort of society crust over her emotions, and the wreck broke it. Now, for my part, I like a woman with a clear soul, one in whose eyes you can catch the glint of the inner crystal."

"They are rare," said Brand.

"I suppose so. Indeed, it used to be a mere ideal of mine, built up from books. But they exist, and they are worth looking for."

He waited, lest perchance the other man should take the cue thus offered, but Brand, for the twentieth time, was poring over the records of the days which followed the hurricane reported by a former keeper. The American pursed his lips.

"He has had a bad time with a woman once in his life," he mused. "It must have been Constance's mother, and that is why he doesn't believe in heredity. Well, I guess he's right."

Had he seen Mrs. Vansittart cowering on her knees outside her bedroom door, he might have found cause for more disturbing reflections. She was crying softly, with her face hidden in her hands.

"Oh, I dare not, I dare not;" she moaned. "I am the most miserable woman in the world. It would have been better if I had gone down with

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. HECLA FURNACE

Has 30 Years Experience Behind It

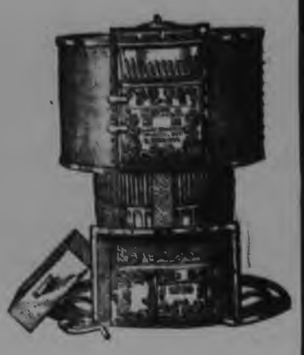
Invaluable experience to you, who are going to buy a furnace this year.

20 years ago, we invented and patented the most important improvement made in furnace construction—our now famous FUSED JOINTS.



These joints mean an absolutely gas, dust and smoke proof furnace.

Then we adapted the FUSED JOINTS to the firepot and fused 97 steel ribs into the castiron, thus increasing the radiating surface three times that of any other firepot. An accurate three years test, proved that the "Hecla" Steel Ribbed Firepot saves one ton of coal in seven.

We learned that a steel combustion chamber was not durable. By experimenting, we found that an all-castiron chamber would last longer than a steel one.

We can help you, too, in planning the right heating for your home. Our book will tell you. Write for free copy. 103

The Decoy

A Short Story

Old Ranlet had been out of the office two days before anyone noticed his absence. Somebody then asked if the old boy was sick, and the answer amounted to so little that the questioner did not wait for it. But the third day something came up that involved his little part in the great machine. The great powers then paid old Ranlet the compliment of being exceedingly wroth with him. Where was he? Sick? What right had he to be sick? Why hadn't he sent word or explanation about his absence?

"Spencer," said the head clerk, "Ranlet lives on your side of the city. You go and rout him up tonight and tell him if he don't get out to-morrow—or next day at best—he'll lose his job."

"What street's he live on?" inquired Spencer without interest.

"Chardenal—a short street down from Pleasant."

"Never heard of it," remarked Spencer, "but then you couldn't imagine Ranlet living any where you ever heard of anyway."

He disposed of old Ranlet for the time. It was not until he was going home that he thought of his errand. He found Chardenal Street without difficulty. It was a modest little street with a trace of gentility about it. He caught himself wondering how Ranlet happened to live on such a street. He had worked in the office for over 30 years and could not now be earning anything more than a very modest salary. It also occurred to him that he did not know whether Ranlet was married or single, whether he boarded on Chardenal Street or had a dwelling there. The latter question was settled in his mind as, on looking up at the door of a small, neat cottage near the end of the street, he read in blazoned letters the name of the man he sought. It looked quite pretentious there on the door.

"Not a bit like Ranlet, somehow," said young Spencer.

A woman answered his ring. She astonished Spencer by saying she would see if her husband could see him. She treated him graciously with a little touch of loftiness. She was plump and vivacious, with a slight burr in her speech, which suggested the Irish blood which was confirmed by her blue eyes and bright black hair.

"Mr. Ranlet may not feel like seeing you," she said, "as he's been so ailing, I'll ask him."

The door through which she vanished did not quite close behind her. It was in this wise that Spencer heard quite distinctly what follows:

"There's a young man—Spencer's his name—from your office wants to speak to you, father. I told him you might not feel like it."

There was a pause. Then a voice arose, strong and irritable, in spite of a quaver or two.

"Send him away at once, Jane. Don't talk to him. How often have I told those fellows never to bother me out of office hours? Send him away!"

The woman could hardly have moved away from the old man's side, however, before he had changed his mind.

"Well—let him come," he said, "but you, Jane, just show him in and then leave us, and take care that the child doesn't come in. I won't have these business affairs discussed before my family."

She came back to the door, then, and motioned Spencer to approach. He went into the room and she went out. He stood looking down into old Ranlet's faded white face as he lay stretched in his bed, and in the younger man's expression there was a strange mixture of wrath and uncertainty.

"What do you mean by that talk I just overheard?" he said, bluntly.

Old Ranlet's eyes looked up meekly. "Mr. Spencer—" he began. It was the voice Spencer was accustomed to hear—not at all like the one he had just heard. The young man's apparent distrust deepened.

"You needn't answer my question," he said coldly. "It's none of my business. What I called to say was that you must be back in the office to-morrow or the day after, or——"

Old Ranlet clutched his arm. "Don't talk so loud," he whispered.

"Why—what—" stammered Spencer angrily, yet stopped for the moment by the anxiety in the old face. They remained so for an instant. Then the door was pushed open and a girl came in. She was singing lightly as if to herself, but she stopped when she saw Spencer sitting by her father, and the two young people looked at each other.

"My daughter—" said old Ranlet with the mysterious change in his voice.

Why had nature endowed old Ranlet's daughter with deep dark eyes and sunny hair? Spencer found himself wondering, and then he was amazed to know that he was bowing before her as humbly as if she were a queen. After her father had told her to leave them to their business together, and they were once more alone, Spencer had forgotten to finish his interrupted sentence. His mind reverted to the girl again and again. Awaking himself from his dream he found old Ranlet looking at him.

"I never meant to do any harm," the old voice whispered, without preface, "I can tell you just how it was. I was always an imaginative sort of young man who lived inside myself and pretended to myself that I was something better than I was. And then, bye and bye, I met her mother—and she—she was the first person who ever took me at my own dream estimate of myself. I loved her for it. We married and came here to live. I have let her think all these years that I amounted to—something in my business life—she doesn't know what it is. Then when my child was born I was more than ever anxious to be something—in her mind at least—that she could be proud of. She's never known what a poor thing I am—"

His voice trailed away into silence. Presently he looked up in his old meek way.

"What were you going to say would happen—if I didn't get back—"

But Spencer couldn't remember. At any rate he didn't say it.

He said he hoped Ranlet would let him call now and then to see how he was. Then he said good-bye and got away, somehow.

The deceit was never mentioned between old Ranlet and Spencer, although the latter came every day. Old Ranlet had not been well enough to get into the office on the day following their conversation, nor on the day following that, and as old parts are of little worth to a great machine when they are broken, the office had got someone else to do Ranlet's work. He knew it subtly and he watched Spencer with wistful eyes, thinking every day something must be said.

"Mr. Ranlet," said Spencer coming in one night. "I've a proposition to make to you."

Looking up, old Ranlet saw that his daughter stood beside Spencer with her hand shyly in his.

"She's going to trust me to take care of her," said the young man tenderly, "and I think it might be well if you let me take care of your part of the business as well. You're not well enough to keep on going to the office. Let me manage the business end from now on." He held out his hand.

Old Ranlet's daughter has never understood why it was that instead of shaking the hand, her father raised it to his lips and kissed it.—Boston Post.

A Tonic-Stimulant

The active business man, the brain worker, and all this class of people could not stand the constant strain on their brain and nerves were it not for the timely use of a pure, gentle, invigorating tonic.

DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKEY

the stand of purity and excellence

for over half a century, is one of the greatest tonic stimulants and strength-givers known to science.

It has been extolled throughout the world for what it has done for suffering humanity. Its success in curing disease has caused many unreliable dealers to put up substitutes and imitations with which to fool the people, claiming that their substitutes are "just as good as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey," but they are thinking of their profits only. Insist on the genuine. Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY. All druggists, grocers and liquor merchants or direct. $1.25 a large bottle. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free.

Shadow In The Timothy

A Short Story.

She stood on the porch, thoughtfully twisting the letter between her fingers while she gazed over the fields to the little town of Easton, down in the hollow, three miles distant.

On a clear day, one could see the tall spire of the Presbyterian church, the colony of little white dwellings, the old red inn, and the high modern brick factory, where many of the sons and daughters of the poor earned their bread, and where her husband John Bannister, was superintendent.

Though still early in the day, the weather bade fair to be unusually warm. The sky was a cloudless azure, hill and valley were bathed in golden light. In the distance Old Ocean, like a sleepy monster, lay blinking at the sun. The twittering of birds and the drowsy hum of insects filled the air. Now and then a sudden gust of sweetness fanned the girl's face like a caress. She breathed great drafts with delight. Only when the wind was due south did the odor of the honeysuckle reach them, for the arbor was down at the far end of the timothy field.

Rousing from her reverie, she drew the letter from the envelope and read it for the second time.

"Dearest May: We want to send David to you for a few weeks. He does not improve as he should, and we have concluded that change of air and scene will do more for him than all the doctor's concoctions in creation. No need to tell you what a sweet baby he is. He cannot get over Jack's death, and no wonder, for never did father worship a child as Jack worshipped David. Poor, poor Jack! He did not seem to mind the dying, but only the leaving his motherless boy. I'll send David Saturday. Give him all the care and love you can. He has acted oddly of late—dreamy, remote. I cannot explain, but you will notice it. Forlorn, lonely Laby, He cannot, of course, understand that Jack is gone for good, and keeps expecting his return. I will send him in charge of Mr. Moore, conductor on the 5.40 express.

Lovingly, KATE."

Saturday evening Mrs. Bannister and her husband met the train which brought the little boy. David held her hand as they drove home. He said little, yet seemed in his quiet way to enjoy it. Night grew on, the heavens gradually filled with stars. Once he said gravely, "Aunt May, it's beautiful up there, isn't it?"

At supper he scarcely tasted anything. He started at every slight sound. His eyes had a wistful, expectant look. Twice his little lip went up, yet he bravely kept back the tears until he and his aunt were alone on the porch. Then suddenly he covered his face. "I thought my daddy would be here! I thought it would be a surprise. Will he come soon? Please, please, will he, will he come soon? I'm so lonesome!"

Tears rushed to her eyes. She spoke impulsively to comfort him. "Be a brave boy David. Be patient, precious. Perhaps—who knows?" Daddy may come back some day."

With the boundless faith of babyhood he believed. He clasped her about the neck. "I love you, Aunt May, I do! I love you more than everybody. They said he could not come back. But he will. I know he will!"

He was soothed, and when she presently took him up and tucked him in his little bed, he immediately fell asleep. Then she crept down to the porch where her husband sat smoking. The night was glorious. Thousands of stars twinkled in the heavens. As they sat talking a great red moon rose resplendent over the distant hills. Mrs. Bannister pointed over to the field of timothy. Her hand shook, though she could not explain why. John Bannister looked intently into the shadows.

"Where?" he asked. "I don't see anything. Oh, there, yes, it's a man standing in the timothy."

He sprang over the porch rail, and walked rapidly down the field, which was only a few rods away. The girl stood anxiously watching. The scent of honeysuckle, fragrant and sweet, was wafted to her on the night air. The moon was hidden for a space under a cloud. Then John returned.

"It was only the shadow of the honeysuckle vine. Queer it never looked just that way before. Come, sweetheart, you shivered; it's getting too cool for you out here."

For many evenings she watched in silence for the shadow. It did not return.

On Tuesday, the second week of David's visit, he came suddenly into the house. It was about 11 o'clock in the morning. He had a slight lameness, inherited from his father, yet he ran very fast through the hall and up the stairs to the room where his aunt sat sewing.

"Aunt May," he cried joyfully, "I saw daddy; he came!"

"What!"

"I saw daddy. He couldn't stay; He's coming again."

She drew the child to the window and looked into his eyes. Steadfast eyes, with no hint of untruth in them. She placed her hand upon his brow. Cool, clear, unclouded.

"Where did you see him, precious?"

"Down in the timothy field."

She started, remembering. "David, you had a little nap, didn't you," she asked. "Think a moment. Did you fall asleep, just a wee, little while?"

"No, no, no!" he cried, with a gentle impatience. "I was playing Injun. Daddy and I used to play it, you know. Then daddy stood right there, and he said: 'David!' and I said 'Daddy, I knew you'd come!' He said: 'I cannot stay now, I will come again and get you.'"

Through the days and weeks that followed David watched and waited with an angelic patience. Each morning he would go and play in the timothy field. Each noon he would slowly, wearily return to the house. He gradually failed, until he was unable to leave his bed. They lavished love upon him. No bright boy, no childish pleasure but was forthcoming to divert and amuse. He was as gently indifferent as though he had already crossed the borderland, leaving both sorrows and joys on earth behind. David was waiting.

One evening as Mrs. Bannister sat beside the child's bed the doctor came, and bent over her, "My dear, you must not confine yourself so closely, or you are going to be ill," he said. "Then what will become of David and of your husband? See, he is sleeping quietly now, and probably won't wake through the night. Come along and sit upon the porch until your husband returns."

She followed the doctor downstairs. John was late at the factory and she seated herself in one of the comfortable porch rockers to await his return. The night flooded the sleeping earth with a white radiance. Suddenly a gentle breeze sprang up from the south and the odor of honeysuckle, penetrating and sweet, was borne to her over the field of timothy. Down in the shade of the arbor something stirred and slowly detached itself from the surrounding gloom. The shadow at last! And she knew that she had kept silent and felt no fear, but an unspeaking awe.

Slowly and noiselessly it advanced toward the house, through the field, up the garden path and on to the porch, passing so close she might have touched it. Without her own volition she arose and followed. Passing under the newel light and up the broad stairs, limping as it went, it reached David's door and entered.

On the threshold she paused. The figure went on and knelt beside the bed. The child lay sleeping, his serene little face turned toward the light, his golden hair like a halo upon the pillow. The woman watched with the kneeling figure, her heart reverent, uplifted in prayer.

Then David awoke. In his eyes grew a heavenly light of joy and hope fulfilled. About his lips an ineffable smile of peace. He stretched forth his arms. "Daddy, have you come for me?" he said, and the figure, stooping gathered the little lamb.

When she regained consciousness the doctor from the centre of the room looked anxiously over his spectacles as he mixed something in a glass. John Bannister, bent with his wife's first movement and clasped her hand.

"Darling," he said tenderly, "you are thoroughly used up. Do you know that you fainted and gave us quite a fright? To-morrow I'm going to make arrangements to take you for a long holiday."

She looked mutely for a moment from one to the other then her lips formed the word "David!"

The doctor came and bent over her. His kindly old face was illuminated with a sweet solemnity and love.

"Mrs. Bannister, David is all right now. Past the heartache. Past the sorrows and sins of a wicked world. The little angel slipped quietly away in his sleep."

Nervous Headache

AND MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM DISAPPEARED WHEN THE NERVES WERE RESTORED BY

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Feeble, wasted, starved nerves often make their condition known by nervous headaches. This was one of the first and most marked symptoms.

If you are at all subject to rheumatism you have noticed how much worse it gets when the system gets run down.

Both nervous headache and muscular rheumatism disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used to rebuild and revitalize the wasted and weakened body.

Mr. James Riley, moulder for the Waterous Engine Co., 46 Jarvis St., Brantford, Ont., writes: "I suffered for years with muscular rheumatism and as I also had frequent and severe attacks of nervous headache I concluded that the trouble came from the nerves and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As I continued this treatment the rheumatism was gradually driven out of the system, my nerves got stronger and steadier and the headaches disappeared. I consider Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid nerve regulator and health builder."

You cannot possibly make a mistake in using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when the nervous system gets run down, for, by forming new, rich, blood this great food cure builds up the nerve cells as nothing else can.

When you have made up your mind to test this treatment, go at it in earnest and keep at it regularly until you feel again the joy of health and vigour.

HIS SUCCESS DEPENDS ON HIS HEALTH

Gin Pills Guard Both

Think of being stricken down by illness at a lonely ranch—or all alone, in the great north woods! Many times, this has happened to those hardy pioneers who "blazed the trail" to new fields.

Mr. James is one of these brave men who is making a name and a fortune for himself in the far West. Unfortunately, Mr. James overtaxed his strength and for a time, it looked as if he would have to give up his claims and his work.

Monro, B. C.

"I have much pleasure in testifying to what Gin Pills have done for me. I divide the year about equally, working on the ranch and on various logging claims, being consequently entirely dependent on bodily fitness for a living. At times, I have suffered like many others in this country from Backache and Weak Kidneys, sometimes to the extent of being laid off for weeks altogether.

Having tried many remedies, I have pleasure in stating that your Gin Pills are the only remedy from which I have received any permanent benefit. I had been using Gin Pills only a short time when the pain and trouble left me and have not returned since.

I take care to always have Gin Pills by me, though my present condition does not require medicine.

I have recommended Gin Pills to other men with similar results."

J. EDWARD JAMES

Gin Pills have proved a friend in need to thousands of those suffering from Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Lame Back and Rheumatism, and the Constipation and Biliousness that usually accompany these diseases

So great is our confidence in the merits of Gin Pills that we let you try them before buying the regular 50c. boxes at your dealer's. Write the National Drug & Chem. Co. Limited Dept. B. Toronto, and you will receive a sample box, absolutely free, by return mail. 30

On The Trail

A Short Story

Rose came out upon the stoop of the cabin with a novel in her hand, flung a cushion into the canvas swing-chair and settled herself comfortably to read. It was a perfect mountain morning. There was nothing to see save the pinto pony browsing at the end of his tether and a single dark-winged hawk swooping about the old stub that marked the spot where the trail led forth from the clearing to the populated valley below.

Down that trail Rose's father had gone in the earliest morning light to get the mail. For the first time Rose too, had not ridden along. It had occurred to her that she would like to try staying alone in the cabin. For three summers now she and her father had dwelt in the cabin among the pines. He had bought a bit of land and made a clearing and planned the cabin himself. When he first entered the woods he had scarcely had sufficient strength to swing an axe. Pulmonary weakness the doctor had called it. The clearing was cut and the cabin ready before ever Rose came up the trail. She had taken to the woods life at once. She had contrived a real home out of the rude little cabin and a garden out of the clearing, but there were times when she so longed for the sound of a human voice that she could have shrieked aloud for the sake of the echo, for her father was a silent man, content to commune with nature and his pipe rather than with her.

This morning she was determined not to be lonely, so she snuggled down in the roomy chair, set it swinging with her foot and began to read. In the midst of a charming love scene she was startled by hearing the clanking of a steel-shod hoof against a stone. Some one was coming up the trail. And who?

Clang—clang! The tones rang as the furious hoofs pounded up the trail. She waited tensely, with her eyes fastened upon the dark hole in the foliage where the trail broke from the woods. Clang! Out of the woods flashed a black horse—riderless. Straight toward the cabin he came, wheeled and stood at the stoop's edge so sharply that he all but threw himself. His head went up and he looked at her; he was spent with his run, and his nostrils were wide and pink. There was foam on his chest and the hair on his flanks was covered with sweat. With a feeling of relief that it was only a horse Rose looked him over. He was not of the native build, and the saddle was better made than those one saw in the mountains.

She caught the horse by the bridle and saw that he was frightened. Then in a flash she understood. He had been scared at something on the trail and had thrown his rider

"If father were here I'd go and see," Rose said aloud. "I suppose I ought to go anyway." She hesitated a moment, considering. "He may be dead by the time father comes back up the trail," she thought. "I'm going to find him."

Leading the horse she went across the little clearing. As she entered the woods she followed with her eye the track of her father's horse and of the runaway, both clearly inlaid upon the dust of many days.

A mile down the trail was a little spring which trickled icily out from under a rock, dampening the earth and mosses about it. There the wild things of the wood came to drink. She had often seen their delicate footprints in the moist, naked earth. It might be the accident had occurred at the spring. Indeed, she felt almost sure that it had. The trail made a sharp turn there. As she rounded this turn she came suddenly in sight of the spring. The horse snorted and tugged at the bridle and she stopped, staring at the man who lay face downward among the celandine and coarse grasses. His wide hat had rolled from his head. His limp hand held the stock of a broken riding-crop.

Rose dropped the horse's bridle and ran and knelt beside him. With main strength she pulled him over so that she could see his face. It was a young face and fine in its still pallor. There was a great bruise over the eyes and his right arm was twisted round in the horribly limp way that suggests broken bones. The spring was so near that by leaning Rose could fill her hands at it. Again and again she did so, emptying them upon that face of stone. He was not dead, she knew, only stunned. Presently his eyelids began to rise unsteadily and he drew a long breath. Rose poured more water on his face. Then she sopped her handkerchief in the spring and laid that across his forehead. He drew another deep breath and tried to raise himself. Rose assisted him. He looked down at his limp arm.

"Broke," he said. And his face twisted. The first numbness had passed and she knew that his arm was beginning to ache.

"Give me a drink, please," he said. Rose filled her hands again and he drank from them thirstily.

"What scared the horse?" she asked.

"A rabbit hopping away from the spring. He isn't used to these parts. Neither am I, I wish I knew what to do." The words ended in a kind of groan.

"If you can get on the horse," Rose said, "I'll take you back up the trail to my cabin."

He looked at her, seeming really to see her for the first time. "Thank you," he said. "If you'll bring up the horse I'll try to mount him."

Rose brought up the horse. With her own hands she placed his foot in the stirrup and with all her vigorous young strength pushed and shoved to help get him into the saddle. Twice he nearly fell backward upon her. But at last with a supreme effort he got astride of the horse. There he clung to the pommel of the saddle, white as death.

"I guess I'll have to have another drink," he said.

Rose could not now give him to drink from her hands, so she filled the crown of his felt hat. It leaked like a sieve but he managed to get enough water to revive him. She wet her handkerchief again and laid it upon his head. Then leading the horse with one hand and carrying her revolver and his hat with the other she took him up the trail.

Twice she would have stopped the horse to let him rest, but he urged her to go on. When they reached the cabin he was spent, but still brave. She got him off the saddle and within and upon the home-made couch. There was brandy, and she made him drink some of it.

"Father will set your arm when he comes," she said.

"When will he come?"

"Soon after noon. He went down after his mail. Didn't you pass him coming up?"

He shook his head.

"I saw no one. There are two trails after you get a ways down, you know. I kept to the old one. That's where I missed him. What time is it?" he asked.

"A little past nine," Rose told him.

"Three hours!" he counted. "I can't wait so long with this arm. You'll have to set it."

"But I don't know how," Rose objected.

"I'll tell you. My father is a doctor and I've watched him set bones. You are to do just as I say, no matter how I yell. Will you?"

"I'll do my best," Rose answered simply.

He told her how to grasp his arm and turn it. She thought of the time she had shot the rabbit. That was easier than this, but the sight of the man's suffering face nerved her and lent the strength of steel to her hands. With a snap, a sickening little crunch the bone went into place. He moaned once. Rose held the brandy bottle to his lips again, and again he swallowed. He looked up at her with a tortured smile.

"Maybe you'd better take some yourself," he said.

"No," she said. "I don't need it. Now what?"

"We'll have to see about making this bone stay where it's put," he said.

At his direction Rose went out and manufactured some splints with the aid of the hatchet and a pine stick. A sheet torn up supplied bandages and presently the broken arm was as comfortable as might be.

The patient, with his arm in a sling and his bruised head reeking with arnica, was asleep; the black horse, unsaddled, was in the corral and Rose was in the garden gathering the beginning of a meal when her father came riding home.

"Whose horse is that?" he asked, pulling his horse up shortly and pointing toward the corral.

Rose told him the story of her adventure.

"Come in and look at him," she said. "He's asleep."

"And you didn't ask his name?"

"I never once thought of it. You see, he kept me pretty busy—"

"I should say he did."

They entered the house together. Side by side they went up to the couch and stood looking down upon the sleeping man. He stirred and groaned and looked up at them.

"Hello!" said Rose's father. "Who are you?" Then he bent over and looked into the young man's face closely. By George!" he exclaimed. "The old doc's boy, as I live!" He held out his hand. "Well, by George!" he said again in a tone of delight and amazement. "Rose," he explained, "this is Dr. True's son—True, you remember, the man that sent me up here to get well. Didn't you know him?"

"Why, I never saw him before." Rose answered slowly. She felt a little dazed with this turn her adventure had taken.

"I found your father's letter in my mail," the older man went on, "saying that he was sending you up here to see me. They said you'd started by the old trail. That's how I missed you going down. And you made my girl set your arm—she that faints at the sight of a dead rabbit. Well, well!" He laughed in enjoyment of it all.

Rose turned away blushing. "Then you knew all the time," she said reproachfully. "And I thought you took me for a mountain girl."

His eyes flashed full of sudden admiration and he smiled sagely. "Oh I knew you were no mountain girl," he said.

BOY MAROONED ON ISLAND 4 MONTHS

Youth Lives Without Fire, Food or Company, Except Raw Flour and Wild Goats

Examiner Special.

HONOLULU, SEPT. 21.—Kalau Kaalhue, a fourteen-year-old Hawaiian boy, was rescued last week from the barren island of Kahoolawe, where he has been living marooned, for four months, without fire, without any food except uncooked flour, and with only wild goats for company.

The boy was an employee of the Kahoolawe Ranching Company, which has a herd of sheep on the island. Four months ago the other employees of the company left in the only boat, telling Kaalhue that they would return for him. They either forgot all about him or did not care whether he lived or starved to death. They neither notified any one that they had left him behind nor went back for him. His stock of matches ran out; his dog, with which he ran down goats for food, was hunted off a cliff by a pugnacious billy and killed. He had nothing to eat but flour, mixed with cold water.

He tried all the approved Robinson Crusoe stunts of striking stones together to get sparks and making fire by rubbing sticks, but there was nothing doing. He ran up some signals, but none of the boats passing up and down the channel noticed him. He was afraid to try to swim the few miles that separated him from Maui because of sharks, and the small raft he built smashed up almost at the moment of launching.

Kahoolawe is an island seldom visited, although lying in sight of several of the largest islands of the group. A Japanese fishing sampan put in last week, however, and brought the boy off.

WHY SLEEP IS NECESSARY

During sleep nature restores the cells and tissues wasted by the activities of life. Without sleep physical bankruptcy is quick and certain. Mrs. J. Derocher, 485 Bethune street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I can say for a certainty that Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid medicine, for, besides steadying the nerves it built up my system wonderfully and enabled me to sleep and eat well."

SHEEP CHEW TOBACCO

Farmer Believes Weed Keeps Flock Free From Infection.

Examiner Special.

MONTROSE, PA., SEPT. 20th.—Pennsylvania has sheep that chew tobacco. This does not mean that the source of all mutton calmly enters the crossroads store and calls for a union plug or wants a package of finecut. These sheep take theirs in a more primitive form, but are said to look upon it as being a luxury as much as the veriest tobacco user in the land.

These unusual animals are the property of a farmer of Montrose, who is reported to have taken home a whole waggon load of tobacco stems to feed his sheep and lambs.

He says that in the Spring he always gives them some of the weed, that it keeps away certain infections to which they are subject in the Spring time, and that the animals become very fond of the stems, taking a full-sized chew every day.

You can't dodge them all. Mosqui to bites, sunburn, bruises, skin injuries. Some of them will attack you this season sure. Have a tin of Davis' Menthol Salve on hand. 25 cents.

KILLS WIFE BY MISTAKE

Tripped on Carpet, He Says, and Shot Her as She Leaned Out of Window

Examiner Special.

NORRISTOWN, PA., SEPT. 21st.—Mrs. John G. Hallman, of Limerick township, was shot and killed in her home by her husband. According to a statement made by Hallman to Coroner King, he had been annoyed by hawks stealing chickens.

He heard a commotion in the poultry yard, and thinking that a hawk was at work, grabbed his shotgun and hastened across the room.

He tripped over a piece of carpet, was thrown forward, and the gun struck the jam of the door. The shell was discharged and the load of birdshot tore a hole in Mrs. Hallman's back, killing her instantly. Mrs. Hallman was looking out of the window trying to see the hawk.

Mr. Hallman is sixty-one years old and his wife was fifty-seven. They were married last April.

Eggs, steady, unchanged; receipts, 15,948.

CATTLE MARKETS.

United States Exchanges Generally Steady, With Trading Slow.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—London and Liverpool cables quote American cattle easy, at 12c to 15c per pound, dressed weight, refrigerator beef lower, at 10½c to 10¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Sept. 22.—The railways reported 190 carloads of live stock for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 2426 cattle, 3483 hogs, 4822 sheep and lambs, 220 calves and 8 horses.

Fat Cattle.

The bulk of the best butchers on sale sold from $5 to $5.60; 3 choice cattle of export weights brought $6.25 and four or five more were reported as selling at $5; common cattle sold from $4.25 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.75, with a few choice at $5 to $5.25; canners, $1.75 to $2.50.

Stockers and Feeders.

Trade was steady for good quality, but lightweight common quality steers were 20c to 30c per cwt. lower. Best steers, 900 to 1100 lbs., sold at $5.25 to $5.60 and $5.70; steers, 500 to 900 lbs., at $4.25 up to $5 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a strong market all week for milkers and springers of good quality. Prices were firm at $40 to $75 each Thursday. There were three Montreal and Quebec buyers of milkers and springers, which caused the trade to be good.

Veal Calves.

Receipts moderate; prices firm at $3.50 to $7.50, with a very few new milk fed going at $8 to $8.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were heavy, especially the latter. There were 48.2 sheep and lambs reported for the two days, which caused a slight break of 15c to 20c per cwt. for lambs, and had it not been for the farmers present to buy feeding lambs, prices would have gone still lower. Lambs sold during the two days at $6.90 to $6.20, and at about an average of $6 per cwt. Ewes sold at $4.50 to $4.80; rams, $3 to $3.50 per cwt.

Hogs

Selects, fed and watered at the market, sold at $9.10, and $8.70 to $8.75 f.o.b. cars at country points to drovers.

Will Investigate Drowning.

Cobalt, Sept. 23.—The provincial police have been asked to investigate the circumstances surrounding the death of two Finlanders by drowning in Porcupine Lake last Sunday. It appears that a blacksmith named Johns, employed at the Timmins Mine, and his helper, whose name is not known, were out canoeing with two companions when a wrangle ensued. All had been drinking freely. The canoe was overturned and Johns and one of the others lost their lives.

Amazed at Our Peaches.

London, Sept. 23.—The Ontario Government's window display of peaches is the chief topic of interest on the street here, passersby having been heard to express their doubts that peaches of such size had been grown in Canada. The retailers are asking and getting for small ones 12 cents each, and for the larger ones 10 cents apiece.

Victims of Forged Checks.

St. Thomas, Sept. 23.—Several bankers and business men have been victimized during the past few days by reason of forged checks. Several arrests were made, and yesterday Harry Haskin was committed for trial and Marshall McMillan of Aylmer, was honorably acquitted.

Body Found Beside Track.

Belleville, Sept. 23.—Yesterday morning, near Marysville, on the G.T.R., about six miles east of this city, a body of a man, unknown, was terribly mutilated.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

B. W. Yates, formerly of Brantford, hanged himself in a Cleveland jail.

Lady de Rothschild, widow of Sir Anthony de Rothschild, is dead, aged ninety.

Bishop Sellen of the Free Methodist Church in the United States says Protestantism is dying out.

Mrs. G. M. Hayman, said to be the original of Charles Dickens' "Little Dorrit," is dead at Southsea, England.

Word has been received of the drowning at Miskoto, Mich., of Thos. Turcott, aged 24, a former citizen of Peterboro.

The King Edward Hotel at Schreiber was burned. A Finnish girl was burned to death, and several of the guests had narrow escapes.

Bishop Fallon of London, Ont., has issued a denial of the report that he opposes the teaching of French in the schools of his diocese.

The 12-year-old son of E. Seyers of Cavan is in a Peterboro hospital, as the result of being accidentally shot while playing with a 32-calibre rifle.

Judge Bazin dismissed thirty informations laid against Montreal hotelkeepers for violation of the license law, as the witnesses failed to appear.

A committee of the Montreal City Council censured Mayor Guerin for placing the French flag behind the Irish ensign during the Eucharistic congress.

Gaynor for Governor?

New York, Sept. 23.—Gaynor sentiment took form and assumed direction in Democratic circles here yesterday more rapidly than at any other time since his name came to the front as a possible candidate for governor. State Chairman John A. Dix had brought word of how large the figure of the mayor bulked from a distance, but until yesterday New York had been reticent. Partly, they were distrained by the continued silence of the mayor himself, and partly by hesitation as to how they would fare with Mayor Gaynor at Albany and John Purrey Mitchell, now acting mayor, in his chair.

But yesterday there were two developments of interest. In the first place, there was much open talk for Gaynor among district leaders who gathered at Tammany Hall, and those who heard it could only account for it on the supposition that it had warrant from those higher in the councils of the society. In the second place, Charles F. Murphy, the taciturn leader of Tammany, publicly admitted the strength of the movement toward Gaynor, while carefully reserving any declaration of his attitude.

From Allentown to Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—J. A. D. McCurdy, the daring aviator from Toronto, will to-day essay the most hazardous flight ever attempted in America. He has been substituted for the noted aviator, Glenn H. Curtiss, and will endeavor to make the round trip from Allentown to Philadelphia.

While the actual distance covered will be but 130 miles, McCurdy will have to rise to an altitude of 2,000 feet to surmount some of the low mountains he will be forced to pass in his journey.

A flight was tried yesterday to test the machine in which McCurdy will endeavor to make the trip. The crucial test will take place this morning, if weather conditions are favorable.

A Naughty Artist.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—It was reported here to-day that civil arrest and excommunication from the Roman Catholic Church will overtake A. E. Bourbee, an artist, whose name appeared upon nude posters displayed in the east end of the city during the Roman Catholic Eucharistic Congress. These posters depicted Archbishop Bruchesi, in very slight attire, bearing a mitre. The greatest indignation was felt over similar pictures depicting nuns in abbreviated raiment. It is alleged that the original intention was to have the pictures printed upon post cards.

He Needed a Prodding.

His arm was round her waist, her hand was on his shoulder, and they were walking through the fields as they had been wont to do for nine long years.

"Em," said he, "we've been courtin' a tidy time now."

"Nine year come next August bank holiday, George."

"I told you, fust start off, as how I shouldn't be in no hurry to git married, Em."

"You didn't tell no lie about it, neither, George," she declared, with a sigh.

"You're a-talkin' as if you was sorry that I'm a man o' my word, Em," he said reprovingly.

"Well, George," she replied, "now you mention it I have bin thinkin' this last year or two that if you could see your way to go back on your word just this once it wouldn't be amiss."—London Mail.

The Mouse Was Shaky.

When John Quincy Adams was eighty years of age he met in the streets of Boston an old friend, who shook his trembling hand and said, "Good morning, and how is John Quincy Adams today?"

"Thank you," was the ex-president's answer. "John Quincy Adams himself is well, sir; quite well, I thank you. But the house in which he lives at present is becoming dilapidated. It is tottering upon its foundation. Time and the seasons have nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. Its walls are much shattered, and it trembles with every wind. The old tenement is becoming almost uninhabitable, and I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon. But he himself is quite well, sir; quite well."

Were that the venerable sixth President of the United States moved on with the will of his soul.

Arrested by Highwaywoman.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Sept. 23.—In a quarrel over a city of cakes, Gilbert Gardiner, chief inspector of the New York Agriculture, Adirondack division, was shot and killed the death by James McKinley, a fruit watchman. McKinley used a revolver.

Postpone Increased Taxes.

Berlin, Sept. 23.—The Government is still struggling with the problems of revenue which failed of solution through the fiscal explanation of 1909. It has been rumored for some months that the Government intended to introduce at the next session of the Reichstag a bill providing for additional taxation.

Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg however, has recently had a conference with the Cabinet, at which a decision was reached to postpone action in the matter until after the elections to the Reichstag, which it is expected will be held in the autumn of 1911. The conclusion generally accepted is that the Government is unwilling to risk the political effect of new fiscal legislation prior to the election.

Accordin gto the figures for the first five months, it appears probable that the revenue for the present fiscal year from new taxes will fall $10,750,000 short of the budget estimates, which placed the expenditure at about 30 per cent. less than they proved to be.

Gauthier Goes to Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston is officially Archbishop of Ottawa in succession to the late Archbishop Duhamel.

That announcement was made at Rome Wednesday and was communicated to Monsignor Gauthier by cable yesterday. His grace at once cabled his acceptance.

Along with the appointment of Archbishop Gauthier there will be an important change in the boundaries of the archdiocese of Ottawa. The archbishopric of Kingston and the bishopric of Peterboro will be included in the archdiocese of Ottawa, and the boundary on the northeast will be the Ottawa River. Kingston will therefore be reduced to a bishopric. Hull will be cut off from the Ottawa diocese and created a diocese, under the care of a French-Canadian bishop, and within the archdiocese of Montreal.

A Record Breaker.

Guelph, Sept. 23.—The Guelph Central Fair, with a list of prizes amounting to nearly $5,000, and with over 7,000 exhibits, closed last night. Never in the 39 years' existence of the Guelph and Centre Wellington Agricultural Society has the fair been such a decided success. In all the departments the exhibits were so crowded that the management will not attempt to hold the fair another year unless the city assists them in the erection of a complete new set of buildings and stables about twice the size of the present ones.

The outstanding feature of the show was the poultry department, which contained about 1,500 entries. Some from Quebec were amongst the many exhibitors.

Rich Gold Discovery.

Nelson, B.C., Sept. 23.—Cresten is wildly excited by the reported discovery of placer gold in Goat River by Ira Boan, an old-time prospector. A rush then occurred in the vicinity of the find, up to the present eighteen claims having been staked. A meeting of claim holders will be held this week for the purpose of forming a syndicate to carry out necessary flumming and tunneling to enable the gold to be taken from the bed of the stream to bed rock.

Buried by Cave-In.

Hagersville, Sept. 23.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday morning at the gravel pit adjoining the Hagersville Cemetery, when George Ward and Alfred Smith were buried by a cave-in. Ward was immediately crushed and smothered to death Mr. Smith was severely bruised, being covered to his neck, but he is considered likely to recover.

Rejects Civic Insurance.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—The project for municipal insurance of civic property here is not making very good headway. The committee met yesterday and practically reached the conclusion that no change should be made in the present system of outside insurance, except to increase it and to secure, if possible, a readjustment of rates.

Hearst to Gaynor.

New York, Sept. 23.—William R. Hearst has sent a letter to Mayor Gaynor assailing him as a veiled candidate for governor, and regretting his recent experience "did not abate his lying tongue."

Checked the Epidemic.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23.—The effects of the city's war against the outbreak of scarlet fever are clearly shown in the fact that there were no fresh cases reported yesterday. The health authorities believe they have succeeded in checking the epidemic.

Carried Money Bylaw.

Fort William, Sept. 23.—All the bylaws submitted carried by substantial majorities except those who proposed giving a gas franchise to a private concern and for improving the city hall. The expenditure of $188,000 was authorized.

An Innocent Accomplice.

A smuggling story in which a woman fooled her unsuspecting husband is told in the Century. The husband was a retired general, a martinet in discipline and overscrupulous regarding even the shadow of laxity in the performance of his own obligations. "No smuggling was to be permitted," he told his wife, and before leaving Paris he insisted on making a full list of every dutiable article in his possession. Unknown to him she bought several yards of venetian lace. How to hide it was a problem until she thought of ripping the lining of his overcoat and hiding the lace inside. She regarded her cunning as a tremendous joke, and to this day he does not know how she laughed to herself when, wearing that very same coat on the dock, he drew himself up to his full military height and, with free conscience, pointed to a tray containing "all his purchases." No idea of anything so serious as defrauding the government had ever entered her frolicsome mind.

BISHOPRIC OF PETERBOROUGH WILL REMAIN

Report That It Was to Be Abolished is Without Foundation—Bishop of Diocese Will Not Go to Ottawa, as Was Stated in Recent Despatch

NO CHANGE LOCALLY

OTTAWA, SEPT. 22.—The appointment of Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, as Archbishop of Ottawa, in succession to the late Archbishop Duhamel, was officially announced at Rome yesterday, and Monseigneur Gauthier was notified by cable this morning. After cabling his acceptance, Archbishop Gauthier immediately summoned Canon Campeau, of the Archbishop's Palace here, to go to Kingston, and the canon left by the 11 o'clock train.

As a result of the transfer of Archbishop Gauthier to Ottawa, there will be a complete re-division of the ecclesiastical Province of Ontario and part of the Province of Quebec. The present archbishopric of Kingston will be reduced to a bishopric, and the Bishop of Peterborough will be transferred to Ottawa. Both will be under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Ottawa, who will thus divide with the Archbishop of Toronto the whole Roman Catholic ecclesiastical Province of Ontario.

In order to meet the objections of the French-Canadians on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River against being placed under a non-French bishop (for though Archbishop Gauthier has a French name, he is more English than French), the Vatican has decided upon the creation of a new See to be called the Diocese of Hull. This will be placed under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Montreal, Monseigneur Bruchesi, who, it is stated, will be created a cardinal at the next consistory.

The names of Father Carriere, of Hull, and of Father Raymond, of the Brook, are mentioned as possible nominees for the new bishopric of Hull.

Gauthier Gets Word.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 22.—Archbishop Gauthier has at last received official notification from the Holy See of his promotion to the Metropolitan Province of Ottawa.

Without Foundation.

Note.—On application being made by the Examiner at the Peterborough Diocesan headquarters, it was learned that the statement regarding the abolition of the Archbishopric of Kingston and of the Bishopric of Peterborough was without foundation. It was learned that there was no possibility of the Bishop of Peterborough being transferred to Ottawa. It would at least be three months before an appointment would be made of a successor to Archbishop Gauthier at Kingston, in consequence of his being transferred to Ottawa.

"MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS"

Extraordinary Engagement is Announced For Grand Opera House

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, managers of the Grand Opera House make the following announcement to-day of an extraordinary engagement that has just been made for the Grand in the appearance here on Oct. 13th of "Mr. Preedy and the Countess", one of the most successful English plays of the decade which has just completed a remarkable London run of two years. The entire original English company with Weedon Grossmith and Charlotte Granville in the principal roles will be seen here and the engagement will be one of the features of the theatrical season Peterborough is especially favoured in getting this premier attraction as the company is only spending three weeks in Canada two of which will be taken up in Montreal and Toronto after which it goes to New York for the winter. "With Mr. Preedy and the Countess", Blanche Ring in "A Yankee Girl", "Seven Days", the hilarious New York farce comedy success and other similar offerings already booked, it looks as if Peterborough was to have the best season in its history.

A BIG FIRE

Examiner Special.

Chicago, Sept. 23rd.—Another two hundred thousand dollar fire at the International Harvester Co. works, occurred this morning. It was presumably of incendiary origin. A large corps of Pinkerton detectives is making a rigid examination of the employees.

PARTRIDGE SEEN IN CITY MOST UNUSUAL VISITOR

Peterborough has put on City clothes and its citizens are priding themselves upon the cosmopolitan aspect of life here. But our city pride has received a rude jolt when a real live partridge is discovered in our midst. The other day Mr. William Hillman, of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartridge Company was astonished to come across a partridge calmly feeding in the grass at the corner of Stewart and Dublin Sts. It was so close that he could have knocked it over with a stone or stick but the open season is not yet on and besides Mr. Hillman is too much of a sportsman to hunt partridge in that manner. The bird is a very unusual visitor in Peterborough.

WERE REMEMBERED BY THE GEORGE STREET CHOIR BEFORE LEAVING CITY

Enjoyable Affair to Say Good-bye to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McCann, at Hooper's Last Evening---Presentation of a Clock and Tea Service to Them---Mr. McCann to be Organist of Jarvis St. Presbyterian Church, Toronto.

The members of the choir of the George St. Methodist Church met last evening at Hooper's Palm Gardens to say Good-bye to Mr. W. A. McCann, the organist and choir leader, who leaves in a few days to accept the position of organist of the Jarvis Street Presbyterian church, Toronto. After enjoying a splendid repast, Mr. W. Cole called the gathering to order, and addressed those present as to the object of their meeting. He referred to the active part Mr. McCann had taken in the work of the church, in addition to his splendid work as organist. The choir had benefitted by his capable leadership, and he would be greatly missed. However the best wishes of his many friends went with him to Toronto. The presentation was made by Miss Higgins and Mr. M. McCarroll. It consisted of a beautiful mantle clock to Mr. McCann and to Mrs. McCann a china tea service on a brass tray. Mr. McCann made a suitable reply in which he expressed his appreciation of his friend's kind thoughtfulness. Other short speeches were made by Mr. W. Stocker, Miss M. Armstrong, Rev. Mr. Couch and others.

Mr. McCann has been associated with the George St. Church for four and a half years and during that time he has made many friends who will learn with deep regret of his departure. He goes to Toronto in order that he may complete his musical education.

Business Man Makes Generous Offer in The Y.M.C.A. Campaign

The men who are out on the fighting line in the big campaign for 500 new members of the local Y.M.C.A. are meeting with the greatest success on all hands, sometimes in the most unlikely places they receive the greatest encouragement. This campaign is proving again that the Young Men's Christian Association is a popular and necessary organization in the city life.

One of the most popular young business men in Peterborough was asked yesterday to join and his answer was "Yes, I will, I wish I could get out with you and get members, but I am too busy just now; however I will pay for eight boys who cannot afford to pay for their own membership in the Y.M.C.A., and I will also take a list of men whom I will try to influence to join." That is the spirit that helps a community. There are many boys in this city who would appreciate the privilege of membership in the Y.M.C.A., and there are men in this city who have no boys who could pay for such. The man quoted above is one of the good contributors to the Association, because he knows that the Y. M. C. A. cannot be financed by the monies received from the fees of members.

To-night will see a big addition to the list of new members, for a great many of the men who have been approached have signified their intention of joining on Friday and Saturday night.

The campaigners spent a social hour at the building last evening. This had been prepared for them by the Reception Committee, and they complained that they had no time to be eating and drinking when there were men to be seen. One man confessed that he was glad to get something to eat, for he had not taken time to eat any supper. The meal hour is often the best hour to see men.

"Sandy" Hall is making the best showing in returns so far. Dr. Middleton is a close second, but after to-night the C.G.E., under the leadership of Messrs. Johnston and Taylor will have something to show. Mr. Sisson is proving himself an inspiring leader, and is also down in the thick of the fight getting members.

Peterborough Horses' Continued Success At Ogdensburg's Big Fair

Examiner Special.

OGDENSBURG, SEPT. 22.—Under a beautiful sky and perfect weather conditions, fifteen thousand persons were in attendance at the best combined agricultural and horse show in the history of the state. The contest in harness animals was between Stratton's string of Peterborough horses and the pick of the New York stables. The climax was reached when Mr. Stratton pulled off the event that aroused the most intense interest—the best exhibit of three horses owned by one exhibitor. There were five competing stables, and when "My Pride," "Premier," and "Perfect Dream" carried off the red ribbons, there was prolonged cheering by the thousands of Canadians present.

Mr. Sifton's horses have no competitors. They are in a class by themselves, and have to fight with each other for first places in the jumping and hunter classes.

In addition to the great win of the day, Mr. Stratton scored first in pair for residents of Canada with "Premier" and "Lady Navarre."

Open single, high steppers—First, Sorg, New York; second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Sorg.

Match pair of setters over 15.2—First, Sorg, New York; second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Mitchell, New York.

Single horse by actual residents of Canada—First and second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Brockville.

Amateur tandem, driven by lady—First, Stratton, Peterborough; second, Sorg, New York; third, Young, Toronto.

Pair harness horses over 15.2, for residents of Canada—First, Stratton, Peterborough; second, Brockville; third, Toronto.

Combination class, harness and saddle—First, Stratton, Peterborough.

Tandems, open—First, Sorg, New York; second, Stratton, Peterborough; third, Sorg, New York.

In the contest for high-steppers, which closed the harness events, Mr. Stratton captured second.

The most lively interest was taken in the competitions and the Canadian horses are greatly admired and congratulated upon their success in the keen competition with the crack stables of New York.

ANOTHER SUICIDE

Examiner Special.

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 23rd.—From the same revetment wall where two girls had already plunged to suicide in Hamilton Bay, another young woman, aged about 23, thought to be from London, Ont., took her own life at midnight. She appeared at the Steamer Turbinia Wharf, saying she wanted to go to Toronto after a runaway husband. When she found there was no boat until morning she made for the wall and jumped over in the darkness. The body was found this morning.

GIRL WILL RECOVER

Body of B. W. Yates, Detroit Publisher, Who Hanged Himself in Police Station, Will Be Brought to Brantford For Burial —Born and Raised There

INQUEST OPENED

Examiner Special.

Brantford, Sept. 23rd.—The body of B. W. Yates, a well-to-do Detroit publisher, who hanged himself in Cleveland police station after shooting a woman he was with is expected here to-day. Yates was born and raised here. His aged mother is critically ill at present and his brother, Herbert, is living retired here. Dr. Harry Yates of Montreal is another brother. Yates' wife was formerly a waitress and lives in Detroit. There are a couple of children. The funeral is likely to be here Saturday. The mother knows of her son's death but not of the fearful details.

Is Recovering

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 23rd.—The inquest into the tragic death of B. W. Yates in the police station here yesterday was formally opened this morning by Coroner Boeger who says he thinks there is some other motive than the shooting of the girl. She is recovering.

Brother of Local Man Drowned Near Oscoda, Mich.

The many friends of Mr. Thomas Turcotte of the Peter Hamilton Co. will sympathize with him in the loss he has sustained by the death by drowning of his brother, William Turcotte, of Oscoda, Mich. The young man met his death early on the morning of Tuesday, Sept. 13th, in the Tawas river, and his body was recovered in about eight feet of water on the following Tuesday. He was only 24 years of age, and was very popular and highly esteemed in the community in which he lived. He had recently graduated in engineering and a bright career was before him. His life was an exemplary one, and the loss by his death is an irreparable one.

Startling Offer In The Line Of Overcoat Bargains

The Ed. Huff Tailoring store makes a rather startling announcement in another column to-day that is sure to attract considerable attention from the men of Peterborough who appreciate the reputation of the firm. For two days only the store is offering a tailor-made over-coat such as they usualy sell for from $24 to $28 for $16.95. This is a genuine bargain if there ever was one and the offer will doubtless be eagerly snapped up. It is good only to-morrow and Monday. During those two days the firm will sell an all wool Melton cloth overcoat in black only, made to your measure for $16.95, a price that can't be surpassed in ready-to-wear garments. The cloth is of British manufacture, the best on the market and may be inspected by the customer before purchasing while the cut and making may be depended upon to be down to the minute as the Huff store has a splendid staff of cutters and tailors whose work is widely known. They have a reputation of being particular and the customer can have no better guarantee than a reputation that is based on "particular".

The store that makes its made-to-measure clothes at less than a ready-made price has never made a more generous offer to its customers than the present one and Mr. Huff and his assistants will be kept busy to-morrow and Monday in looking after the many people who will want to take advantage of this bargain opportunity. Remember it is for two days only.

All reserve troops have been summoned to the colours.

BIG CROWD AT DELINE INQUEST

EDITH HELENA

With the Aborn English Grand Opera Co., numbering 100 Singers and Musicians, which comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, Sept. 28th, in "The Bohemian Girl." Seat Sale opens Monday morning

Was Resumed at Havelock Town Hall at One O'clock This Afternoon, Before Coroner Dr. Kindred — Widespread Interest in the Case.

PRISONER INDIFFERENT

Havelock, Sept. 23. The inquest into the cause of the death of Mrs. Deline of Belmont township was resumed before Coroner Dr. Kindred here in the town hall at one o'clock. The great interest taken in the case by the people of this district was evidenced by the fact that the building was crowded with morbid curiosity seekers when the session was opened. The chief interest lies in the fact that Deline, who has been arrested for the murder of his wife will be called to tell what he knows about the case. The prisoner was brought to town on the noon C.P.R. train by High County Constable Cochrane. There was a large crowd at the station to get a glimpse of the man Deline, who seemed indifferent to the curiosity of the crowd. He chewed tobacco and gazed back with no signs of concern. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood of Peterborough is here looking after the case, while Mr. G. N. Gordon is present in the interests of Deline and his family. All the Toronto newspapers are represented, showing the interest taken in the case.

A portion of Deline's clothing has been sent to Toronto, that certain stains on it, may be analyzed. Fifteen witnesses have been summoned for the inquest.

First Witness.

Mrs. Samuel Newell was the first witness called. She testified to having been aroused by Deline on Thursday night last and of having gone to the house with other neighbours. They did not examine the body or look at it until the next morning. Deline had gone to bed at 12 o'clock and slept until next morning, until awakened at six o'clock. Mrs. Newell told of a conversation she had with Mrs. Deline in which the latter said that she and her husband were cousins, and that she did not want to have any more family. She wondered if all men were like Mr. Deline. Mrs. Lytle and Mrs. McMullen, neighbours of the Delines, gave similar evidence.

HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICE AT ST. LUKE'S BRIGHT AND INSPIRING

Eloquent Sermon by Rev. Provost Macklem, of Trinity College U.—Edifice Beautifully Decorated With Flowers, Fruit and Grain

MANY ATTENDED

The harvest festival service, held at St. Luke's church last night, was largely attended. The church was beautifully decorated with products of the harvest: fruits, flowers, and grain being elaborately set up in appropriate places.

The service was of a bright and interesting character and was conducted by Rev. Provost Macklem, of Trinity University. The choir was large, and the music was very effective.

Miss Ruby Quartermaine, during the offertory, sang a very pleasing solo.

The preacher chose his text from part of the 19th and 20th verses of the 14th chapter according to St. Matthew: "Jesus gave the loaves to his disciples and the disciples to the multitude and they did all eat, and were filled; and they took up of the fragments that remained, twelve baskets full."

He said: "You have brought here the choicest of the fruits of the land, not merely for the decoration of this house, but to show God that you make the best of all He entrusts you with." He stated that there were one or two lessons for them to learn in his text. First, the miracle which the Lord performed, when He fed five thousand people on five loaves of bread and two fishes. "The Lord was not anxious or desirous of performing any miracles. He had gone to seek repose with His disciples in the mountains, and the multitude had followed Him around the shore, and His compassion of heart went out to them." Dr. Macklem very explicitly drew a picture of the scene which followed. Our Lord had healed many of the sick, but they were to be fed and His disciples had only five loaves of bread and two fishes wherewith to feed them. No other food was obtainable, so Jesus commanded the disciples to give what they had, to the multitude. They gave what they had, and strange, as it might seem, the food kept increasing and they had some left. He spoke of Canada's prosperity, and the bountiful harvest with which God has blessed us.

Dr. Macklem drew the attention of his hearers to the restraint our Lord exercised in performing miracles, the restraint of power, the hiding of the supernatural. There was no unnecessary display. Our Lord did not seek the miracle. The multitude were unaware that they were being fed by miraculous means. The fact that after they were fed, the scraps were picked up, was another veiling of the supernatural. God uses men and natural agencies, rather than supernatural means, to gain the desired end. The set purpose of God is to use men as His colleagues for doing of work that He cares to do. The Lord can perform a miracle, if necessary; He can use supernatural powers when occasion demands. What the people bring to Christ He will multiply.

Rev. Dr. Macklem told the congregation that if God sends them anything to do, He is using them as His agents and that they are to do it without asking Him for any supernatural assistance. "Christ says the world, not directly, but through the agency of His church. His elect body, to which He entrusts the trust which is so dear to Him. The truth is one great practical power. Christ gives to His own, and His own must give to them unto whom God sent them in Christ's name." "You ask yourself the question," said the preacher, "why did not Christ reveal Himself to all at once? The only answer is that Holy Scripture makes it plain: God has chosen to show the world, through the church. It is astounding when you think of it in that way. The preacher pointed out how much of the world was in ignorance of the true God, even to-day, even after two thousand years, over half the world is yet in ignorance of the word of God. And there is only such a small force to preach to the great multitude. The best of us are so weak that we are quite inadequate to the task. But yield it up to Christ, our Helper, and He will suffice. Bring to God what we have and He will use it, or enable us to use it.

In his closing remarks, Dr. Macklem said that there were two points he wished those present to remember: The call to Christian service, and the need of a stout front to despondency.

IS SUSPENDED

Special to The Examiner:

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 23rd.—Following investigations by constable Foster of the Dominion Police, the Department of Customs has ordered suspension of J. M. Bowell, collector of Customs and Immigration Officer here on the ground that he assisted Chinese in without exacting head tax. Bowell, who has held position for 23 years is a son of Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

TO GIVE CONCERT

The Peterborough Silver Band, assisted by the Songsters and Boy's Band, will give a musical programme in the Salvation Army Temple, Simcoe street, in connection with the Harvest Thanksgiving Sale on Monday evening next. The sale promises to be a great success. The Temple will be open Saturday and Monday, to receive saleable goods of all kinds, to be sold for the benefit of the work.

SPRAINED WRIST

Rev. Father Casey Met With Accident This Morning

Rev. Father Casey, of St. Peter's Cathedral staff, was the victim of a rather serious bicycle accident early this morning. The reverend gentleman was returning from the celebration of the usual seven o'clock mass at St. Joseph's Hospital, when the accident occurred. He was travelling at a pretty good speed down grade on the hospital drive, when in trying to avoid some loose stones, he took a sharp turn, with the result that he was thrown heavily to the ground, sustaining a severe sprain of the left wrist. He was afterward treated at the hospital, after which he was able to return to the rectory.

TO-NIGHT WILL BREAK ALL RECORDS IN THE Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN

BISHOPRIC OF PETERBOROUGH WILL REMAIN

Report That It Was to Be Abolished is Without Foundation—Bishop of Diocese Will Not Go to Ottawa, as Was Stated in Recent Despatch

NO CHANGE LOCALLY

OTTAWA, SEPT. 22.—The appointment of Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, as Archbishop of Ottawa, in succession to the late Archbishop Duhamel, was officially announced at Rome yesterday, and Monseigneur Gauthier was notified by cable this morning. After cabling his acceptance, Archbishop Gauthier immediately summoned Canon Campeau, of the Archbishop's Palace here, to go to Kingston, and the canon left by the 11 o'clock train.

As a result of the transfer of Archbishop Gauthier to Ottawa, there will be a complete redivision of the ecclesiastical Province of Ontario and part of the Province of Quebec. The present archbishopric of Kingston will be reduced to a bishopric, and the Bishop of Peterborough will be transferred to Ottawa. Both will be under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Ottawa, who will thus divide with the Archbishop of Toronto the whole Roman Catholic ecclesiastical Province of Ontario.

In order to meet the objections of the French-Canadians on the Quebec side of the Ottawa River against being placed under a non-French bishop (for though Archbishop Gauthier has a French name, he is more English than French), the Vatican has decided upon the creation of a new see to be called the Diocese of Hull. This will be placed under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Montreal. Monseigneur Bruchesi, who, it is stated, will be created a cardinal at the next consistory.

The names of Father Carriere, of Hull, and of Father Raymond, of the Brook, are mentioned as possible nominees for the new bishopric of Hull.

Gauthier Gets Word.

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 22.—Archbishop Gauthier has at last received official notification from the Holy See of his promotion to the Metropolitan Province of Ottawa.

Without Foundation.

Note—On application being made by the Examiner at the Peterborough Diocesan headquarters, it was learned that the statement regarding the abolition of the Archbishopric of Kingston and of the Bishopric of Peterborough are without foundation. It was learned that there was no possibility of the Bishop of Peterborough being transferred to Ottawa. It would at best be three months before an appointment would be made of a successor to Archbishop Gauthier at Kingston, in consequence of his being transferred to Ottawa.

"MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS"

Extraordinary Engagement is Announced For Grand Opera House

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, managers of the Grand Opera House make the following announcement to-day of an extraordinary engagement that has just been made for the Grand in the appearance here on Oct. 13th of "Mr. Preedy and the Countess", one of the most successful English plays of the decade which has just completed a remarkable London run of two years. The entire original English company with Weedon Grossmith and Charlotte Granville in the principal roles will be seen here and the engagement will be one of the features of the theatrical season Peterborough is especially favoured in getting this premier attraction as the company is only spending three weeks in Canada two of which will be taken up in Montreal and Toronto after which it goes to New York for the winter. "With Mr. Preedy and the Countess", Blanche Ring in "A Yankee Girl", "Seven Days", the hilarious New York farce comedy success and other similar offerings already booked, it looks as if Peterborough was to have the best season in its history.

PARTRIDGE SEEN IN CITY MOST UNUSUAL VISITOR

Peterborough has put on City clothes and its citizens are priding themselves upon the cosmopolitan aspect of life here. But our city pride has received a quietjolt when a real live partridge is discovered in our midst. The other day Mr. William Hillman, of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartridge Company was astonished to come across a partridge calmly feeding in the grass at the corner of Stewart and Dublin Sts. It was so close that he could have knocked it over with a stone or stick but the open season is not yet on and beside Mr. Hillman is too much of a sportsman to hunt partridges in that manner. The bird is a very unusual visitor in Peterborough.

WERE REMEMBERED BY THE GEORGE STREET CHOIR BEFORE LEAVING CITY

Enjoyable Affair to Say Good-bye to Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McCann, at Hooper's Last Evening---Presentation of a Clock and Tea Service to Them---Mr. McCann to be Organist of Jarvis St. Presbyterian Church, Toronto.

The members of the choir of the George St. Methodist Church met last evening at Hooper's Palm Gardens to say Good-bye to Mr. W. A. McCann, the organist and choir leader, who leaves in a few days to accept the position of organist of the Jarvis Street Presbyterian church, Toronto. After enjoying a splendid repast, Mr. W. Cole called the gathering to order, and addressed those present as to the object of their meeting. He referred to the active part Mr. McCann had taken in the work of the church, in addition to his splendid work as organist. The choir had benefitted by his capable leadership, and he would be greatly missed. However the best wishes of his many friends went with him to Toronto. The presentation was made by Miss Higgins and Mr. M. McCarroll. It consisted of a beautiful mantle clock to Mr. McCann and to Mrs. McCann a china tea service on a brass tray. Mr. McCann made a suitable reply in which he expressed his appreciation of his friends' kind thoughtfulness. Other short speeches were made by Mr. W. Stocker, Miss M. Armstrong, Rev. Mr. Couch and others.

Mr. McCann has been associated with the George St. Church for four and a half years and during that time he has made many friends who will learn with deep regret of his departure. He goes to Toronto in order that he may complete his musical education.

Business Man Makes Generous Offer in The Y.M.C.A. Campaign

The men who are out on the fighting line in the big campaign for 500 new members of the local Y.M.C.A. are meeting with the greatest success on all hands, sometimes in the most unlikely places they receive the greatest encouragement. This campaign is proving again that the Young Men's Christian Association is a popular and necessary organization in the city life.

One of the most popular young business men in Peterborough was asked yesterday to join and his answer was "Yes, I will, I wish I could get out with you and get members, but I am too busy just now; however I will pay for eight boys who cannot afford to pay for their own membership in the Y.M.C.A., and I will also take a list of men whom I will try to influence to join." That is the spirit that helps a community. There are many boys in this city who would appreciate the privilege of membership in the Y.M.C.A., and there are men in this city who have no boys who could pay for such. The man quoted above is one of the good contributors to the Association, because he knows that the Y. M. C. A. cannot be financed by the monies received from the fees of members.

To-night will see a big addition to the list of new members, for a great many of the men who have been approached have signified their intention of joining on Friday and Saturday night.

The campaigners spent a social hour at the building last evening. This had been prepared for them by the Reception Committee, and they complained that they had no time to be eating and drinking when there were men to be seen. One man confessed that he was glad to get something to eat, for he had not taken time to eat any supper. The meal hour is often the best hour to see men.

He stated that there were one or two lessons for them to learn in his text. First, the miracle which the Lord performed, when He fed five thousand people on five loaves of bread and two fishes. "The Lord was not anxious or desirous of performing any miracles. He had gone to seek repose with His disciples in the mountains, and the multitude had followed Him around the shore, and His compassion of heart went out to them." Dr. Macklem very explicitly drew a picture of the scene which followed. Our Lord had healed many of the sick, but they were to be fed and His disciples had only five loaves of bread and two fishes wherewith to feed them. No other food was obtainable, so Jesus commanded the disciples to give what they had, to the multitude. They gave what they had, and strange, as it might seem, the food kept increasing and they had some left. He spoke of Canada's prosperity, and the bountiful harvest with which God has blessed us.

Dr. Macklem drew the attention of his hearers to the restraint our Lord exercised in performing miracles, the restraint of power, the hiding of the supernatural. There was no unnecessary display. Our Lord did not seek the miracle. The multitude were unaware that they were being fed by miraculous means. The fact that after they were fed, the scraps were picked up, was another veiling of the supernatural. God uses men and natural agencies, rather than supernatural means, to gain the desired end. The set purpose of God is to use men as His colleagues for doing of work that He cares to do. The Lord can perform a miracle, if necessary; He can use supernatural powers when occasion demands. What the people bring to Christ He will multiply.

Rev. Dr. Macklem told the congregation that if God sends them anything to do, He is using them as His agents and that they are to do it without asking Him for any supernatural assistance. "Christ saves the world, not directly, but through the agency of His church. His elect body, to which He entrusts the trust which is so dear to Him. The truth is one great practical power. Christ gives to His own, and His own must give to them unto whom God sent them in Christ's name." "You ask yourself the question," said the preacher, "why did not Christ reveal Himself to all at once? The only answer is that Holy Scripture makes it plain: God has chosen to show the world, through the church. It is astounding when you think of it in that way. The preacher pointed out how much of the world was in ignorance of the true God, even to-day, even after two thousand years, over half the world is yet in ignorance of the word of God. And there is only such a small force to preach to the great multitude. The best of us are so weak that we are quite inadequate to the task. But yield it up to Christ, our Helper, and He will suffice. Bring to God what we have and He will use it, or enable us to use it.

In his closing remarks, Dr. Macklem said that there were two points he wished those present to remember: The call to Christian service, and the need of a stout front to despondency.

IS SUSPENDED

Special to The Examiner:

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 23rd.—Following investigations by constable Foster of the Dominion Police, the Department of Customs has ordered suspension of J. M. Bowell, collector of Customs and Immigration Officer here on the ground that he assisted Chinese in without exacting head tax. Bowell, who has held position for 21 years is a son of Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

TO GIVE CONCERT

The Peterborough Silver Band, assisted by the Songsters and Boy's Band, will give a musical programme in the Salvation Army Temple, Simcoe street, in connection with the Harvest Thanksgiving Sale on Monday evening next. The sale promises to be a great success. The Temple will be open Saturday and Monday, to receive saleable goods of all kinds, to be sold for the benefit of the work.

SPRAINED WRIST

Rev. Father Casey Met With Accident This Morning

Rev. Father Casey, of St. Peter's Cathedral staff, was the victim of a rather serious bicycle accident early this morning. The reverend gentleman was returning from the celebration of the usual seven o'clock mass at St. Joseph's Hospital, when the accident occurred. He was travelling at a pretty good speed down grade on the hospital drive, when in trying to avoid some loose stones, he took a sharp turn, with the result that he was thrown heavily to the ground, sustaining a severe sprain of the left wrist. He was afterward treated at the hospital, after which he was able to return to the rectory.

MADE IN CANADA.

The directors of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company have been taking stock of their mine assets, and in their Nova Scotia mines they find that, in the words of the president, there is enough ore to last, at the greatest activity of mining for a thousand years. Whether this will or will not, apply to the coal deposits, it is an important fact. We have the iron in abundance, sufficient to enable Canada to become a very important steel producing country. If the coal supply should prove inadequate, which it will not do for many years to come, we have our water power supply to fall back upon. Our water supply, like Tennyson's brook, will go on forever; and the developments of practical science are rapidly bringing electricity as a smelting medium into practical availability. We can thus contemplate a large expansion of our domestic industrial enterprise. We are encouraged to make the building of Canadian ships an actuality by the action of Parliament in adopting a plan of naval construction with the provisothat the ships for the Canadian navy shall be built in Canada. Already large docks and dockyards are in advanced course of contemplation, and the possibility if a Canadian ship-building industry are coming very close. True, Mr. Perks says that ships cannot be built as cheaply in Canada as in the Old Country. But conditions may change. The strikes in Great Britain show that the British artizan will not always be contented with low wages, and the relative cost of domestic and British ship construction may change [illegible]. At any rate Canadian [illegible] a goal to work for. [illegible] the policy of utipeople of this [illegible]anadian resources popular price. [illegible] Canada should [illegible]versal entertain[illegible]n as far as posics to make [illegible] spection? We [illegible] wants to know BEGINNING. exact measure & its innings in particular, and [illegible]ns for breach of being particul[illegible]s. Complaint is give such a sty[illegible]ested in the work measure garm[illegible] part in procurthan guessing[illegible]ver the disappointatch of 108 charges Judge Bazin yesterand it is stated that [illegible]n was created among [illegible]orkers by the statement that:

Why Pay To-morrow Monday made-to- the associations should not Ac in public prosecutions, unless they summoned witnesses of repute, whereas the Dominion Alliance in prosecuting hotel keepers has employed palpable perjurers."

The judge then dismissed thirty of the 108 actions, which the Alliance had entered against license holders for the alleged illegal sale of liquor. This was to be expected. It was natural that the judge would distrust the word of men whom even their employers would not trust, or employ in any other capacity, than the odious capacity of informer. There is no more striking instance of doing evil that good may come than the employment of whisky detectives, or spies. To succeed their favourite way is to themselves break the law, and to induce others to break it. Their dupes are prosecuted while they are rewarded.

This is said with no sympathy with license holders who break the law. For doing this they deserve punishment. Law-abiding citizens are the strength of a community, and lawbreakers, no matter of what kind should be punished. Licenses are given on condition that their conditions be observed. The man who fails to observe the conditions of restriction his license contains, in order to gather profit from sales at forbidden hours, when honourable license holders are doing no business, is false to his fellow dealers, as well as a breaker of the law, and of his contract with the state. It is the black sheep among the license holders that do most to discredit the traffic; it is persistent and flagrant breaches of the law by dishonest license holders that arouse public indignation and create the demand for prohibition and local option measures, to the injury of the innocent, so far as law observance is concerned, and of the guilty alike.

Progress in moral reform, so far as the liquor traffic is concerned, is discouragingly slow and difficult. Not because the evil is not frankly and generally, if not universally, recognized, but because work is begun at the wrong end. The man is the cause, intemperance is the effect. Make the man right and there is not only hope, but certainty of improvement. Men sin with all the faculties of their nature; employ all the best gifts of Providence to commit sin and crime. To remove all these things to keep temptation from the man would make the world and life in it impossible. Reformers do not propose to abolish property to prevent stealing, nor to suppress men and women to prevent crimes of violence and lust. The central point of support of all reform movements, the church, at the head, is regeneration of the man. Make the man right and intemperance and the ghastly and foul stream of evils that attend it will disappear. Make the man right and the liquor traffic, in its most evil manifestations, will be a thing of the past—it will die of inanition. We have the evidence in this city, of an organization that, beginning with the man, has done more to promote soberiety and the resumption of the habits of good citizenship, in its area of operation, than all repressive measures, than all the whiskey detectives that ever earned a dishonest dollar. If organizations like St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society were established in connection with all our Christian churches and did a numerically proportionate and effective work, we should soon have only whiskey detectives buying strong drink. The mass of the people would become morally sane and all the intemperate drinking would be done by the small proportion of predestintd and irreclaimable degenerates, whom, like the poor, we have always with us, in spite of all that earth or Heaven, or human, or, apparently, divine effort can accomplish.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It may be, says the Montreal Herald, that twenty years ago Canada could have had the American market if she were willing to pay the price, but the way it looks to us, it is the United States that is to-day trying to get the Canadian market, which means that Canada can have most to say about naming the terms.

It is to be hoped, says the Ottawa Free Press, that Hon. William Pugsley will appeal the decision of the New Brunswick Court refusing his request for an accounting of the affairs of the New Brunswick Coal and Railway Company. Meanwhile the Hazen Government stands before the country as in the position of having made charges against a public man and then using all his influence to prevent the investigation which he demanded as a matter of right.

FOOD GROWING DEARER.

(Toronto Star)

Evidence of the increase in the cost of living is furnished by the Toronto Weekly Sun, in a table headed "Top quotations for this week and comparisons with previous years." We select the figures for this week and the corresponding week in 1901. In cattle the increase is from $4.50 to $6.25 per hundred pounds; in sheep, from $3.25 to $5; in lambs, from $4.00 to $6.25; in hogs, from $7.40 to $9.25. Fall wheat has increased from 74 cents a bushel to 95; oats, from 39½ to 43; eggs, from 14 cents to 23 cents a dozen; live chicken, from 7 cents to 12 cents a pound; butter, from 18 cents to 23 cents for separator prints, and from 19 cents to 24 cents for creamery prints. Cheese shows a very slight increase, from 10 cents to 11 cents.

These are the prices paid to farmers. By the time the beef, lamb, poultry, cheese, and butter finds its way to the table of the Toronto house holder, it has experienced a much greater increase. Dealers say that the cause is a difference in taste, that everybody now wants the finest cuts of meat, the freshest eggs and butter. But we do not think this is a complete explanation. There has been a rise in the price, of every kind of food. If fastidious people pay more for the best, people who cannot choose pay more for the worst. And the increase does not all find its way into the farmer's pocket.

Work Awaiting Cruiser Rainbow In British Columbia Fishery Waters

One of the uses of the cruisers of the Canadian Navy will be to protect our fisheries—worth about twenty-five million yearly—from the depredations of poachers, who steal annually many millions of dollars worth of fish. All the present protection in British Columbia waters is afforded by a little slow eight-knot wooden cutter. The work this little warship fails to do and the work to be done is thus set forth by B. B. Cooke, in the Toronto Star:

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 10.—She looks like a man-eater, but then she can do only the eight knots, and that is the first of the tragedy. It is breaking an honest skipper's heart. The engineer is risking wrecking his boilers and his soul every time she tries—and cannot. And the gunner mopes over her one little brass cannon; pets her and polishes her and oils her with sewing machine oil till the crew is afraid he may develop a mania and lose his wits some day. But it is of no avail to any one of them. It is the tragedy of the officers, the tragedy of the ship, of the whole British Columbia coast.

She is only wood, but she has a lovely bow, with an aggressive cutwater like the lower three-fourths of the letter "S". Her funnel sits low and has a rakish slant. Her foremast gives her a brave bold front. Her decks are white as holy-stone can make them, and they have painted her a dull steel grey, so as to help poachers in Canadian waters, and she do, with only eight knots an hour, when the Pacific comes rampaging across Queen Charlotte Sound, and half a hundred of the sneaking beggars are forever sailing rings around her and making unholy American jokes about her by their wireless equipment? They say she "waddles" and call her "The Battleship"—which is a galling insult for a respectable vessel of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and, besides, she has not any wireless and she simply can't help her eight knots an hour.

Poachers Get The Fish.

The half a hundred are American poachers in Canadian waters and she is the Government's representative, stationed outside Prince Rupert to catch the sinners. Last year the halibut catch in the Canadian Islands and off the coast was 35,000,000 pounds, and out of that 25,000,000 are alleged to have been taken by the American poachers, the fellows the Government vessel is set to catch. But she can't catch them, and she knows it, and the whole coast knows it, and the poachers know it, and that is where the shame comes in. It would break the heart of any ship.

Day after day she does her best. The skipper takes her, sneaking, catlike, into unexpected places on the hunt for poachers. The chief engineer polishes her engines and fills the oil cups; and he talks violence to the stokers till they love him. The gunner, for practice, draws beads on imaginary poachers, and rubs the cannon down with chamois. But it counts for nothing. For they only see the heels of the quarry heating out beyond the three-mile limit which the international law allows, and where he can't be touched. It is written in the book of Vancouver, where she is registered, that she can do so many knots and no more, while the poachers are good for about twice as much, and can warn one another by wireless.

They are no small fry, these British Columbia poaching vessels, but are agents of a powerful corporation in the land of corporations, the United States. They obey the masters of the Fish Trust. The Fish Trust has made them swift and has given them the Marconi machine, by which one warns the other of the police boat's approach, and with a showing of white petticoats under the stern and the wheel hard over, they get out of it swiftly, for the open sea, while the Canadian ship drops tears from her nose as she sloshes into the sea.

Probably one day she discovers a poacher hovering near the forbidden line. She watches him, scouts all his movements, and he, leading her on probably for the whole day, sends ribald messages by his wireless to the other poachers: "Have got the old battleship watching me. Fish like——"

Whereupon the other poachers fish with a will, and haul out the honest Canadian Halibut, to be taken to Seattle and fried by Yankee housewives in New England.

And this is the final cruelty of the thing.

One day in the narrow channel between two islands, the "battleship" saw a poacher sneaking down the line. It was in indisputable Canadian waters, not three miles wide.

Skipper passed the word to the engineer; engineer swore lovingly, and the gunner produced his sewing machine oil and invited the little old cannon to "liquor up."

The skipper's binoculars absorbed everything. Not a man on the deck of the poacher. Poacher running low in the water with Canadian halibut.

"Fire!" he whispered to the gunner, and the little old brass gun coughed a bit of lead across the American bows.

Never a bit of heed did the Yankee show; never turned an eyelash.

Skipper got red about the ears at that insolence.

"Fire again," says he, after a due pause, "and get his mast this time."

"Aye, aye sir," said the gunner, and he prepared.

Down below the engineer was petting each valve and coaxing each bit of straining steel. The stoker's heaved. The boilers hummed, and the shaft took the last ounce of expansion out of the steam till the thrustcollar came near getting too hot, and the engineer opened a little more cooling water on her and listened hopelessly. He knew by the valves that she was doing her right and no more. Outside her skin he could hear the Pacific sloshing past at the same old gait.

Above, the gunner calculated his distance and the wind. He allowed for the speed of two vessels and the pitch, and then he fired. And the poacher's foremast pitched over the side.

She heaved-to, humbled suddenly. Her captain and her cook stuck their heads out and threw up their sneaking hands, so to speak, for mercy.

And they received it. That was what almost finished the tragedy. For it cost over $500 to tow her and her heavy cargo to Vancouver and carry out the departmental routine and in the end the poacher paid a fine of about $100.

Rainbow Will Stop It.

Of course there is an explanation but that does not save the captain or the engineer or the gunner. They never say a word. They never tell. Only the dreary monotony of the departmental reports officially confirms the story. But the Government knows that a question of international law hangs in abeyance and that it would not be wise, by the imposition of drastic measures on the poachers, to bring matters to an undiplomatic crisis. They have created the Canadian navy, and the Rainbow and her mids will do what the present vessel just now cannot do—overawe the poachers. But it is hard on the little ship, for she is ambitious and wants to do her duty; but how can any ship when her legs are only only good for eight knots and her gunner dare not shoot as he would like to shoot, on account of international relations?

MEN'S MEETING

At Y. M. C. A. on Sunday Will be Addressed by Rev. H. J. Keith

It isn't all membership campaign at the Y.M.C.A. these days. The general work is not being neglected. A visitor to the building will find the departments working away better than usual. One of the proofs of this is found in the fact that the men's meeting next Sunday will be a good, strong feature. Rev. H. J. Keith will give a special address to men that will be worth coming a long way to hear, and he will be assisted by the Park Street Church Male Quartette. This men's meeting is to be one of the popular gatherings for men this season. There will be a good orchestra to help with the music and those who were at the meeting last Sunday can testify to the nature of the singing. The meetings will commence and close sharp on time. All men welcome.

DEATH AFTER A SCRATCH

Morris Quatzman, an eleven-year-old Windsor boy, fell off his bicycle and scratched his wrist. He thought nothing of the injury, but blood poison set in and he is dead.

Such incidents as these—by no means infrequent—ought to make people realize the danger that may lie even in the smallest flesh wound.

Take a simple illustration. When a knife, a rusty needle, a splinter of dirty wood, a barbed wire fence, or a thorn, scratches the hand, the latter is inoculated with germs, of which the air about us is full. Directly these germs are introduced through the breach in the skin, a battle royal ensues between them, and certain organisms in our blood.

The way to avoid serious results is to cleanse the wound and apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is a powerful, yet painless germ-killer, and when applied to the broken skin is absorbed into the tissue, instantly destroying the germs that spread disease and inflammation.

As soon as applied to a sore or a cut Zam-Buk stops the pain and smarting. That is why it is so popular with children.

The flesh thus soothed and purified, the wound is made perfectly healthy, and all poison, and cause of festering, removed. Having done this Zam-Buk then proceeds to heal the wound or sore, and new healthy tissue is built up in a quick, painless and perfect manner.

Zam-Buk must not be confused with ordinary ointments. Zam-Buk is a unique preparation, possessing anti-septic, soothing and healing qualities that are not to be found together in any other preparation. It is not only a unique healing balm, but it is also a skin food. For all skin diseases and injuries—cuts, bruises, burns, eczma, chafing, ulcers, ringworm, etc., it is without equal. It is also used widely for piles, for which it may be regarded as a specific. All druggists and stores sell at 50 cents a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Harmful imitations should be always refused.

PLAYERS WILL DEFY THE ORDERS OF THE COMMISSION

Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 22.—D. A. Fletcher, promoter of the all-star series of games between National and American League clubs, to be played after the world's series, has arranged to play the games despite the National Commission's action prohibiting them.

Fletcher says he has letters from practically all the players, including one from Manager McGraw, of the New York Giants, saying they will report and carry out their part of the contract.

Only one of the 34 certified checks sent out by Fletcher with the contracts has been returned.

Johnny Evers and Artie Hoffman of the Cubs; Eddie Collins of the Athletics, Mullin, Crawford, Stanage, and Bush of the Detroit Tigers; Walter Johnson of the Washington Club and other players have assured Fletcher that will make the trip.

Champion Eater Of South Is Out With A Challenge

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—"Boots" Repetti, "champion long distance eater of the South," is hungry again. He has vanquished all Washington and Baltimore feeders. The restaurant keepers are scared—so he says—and he hasn't had a square meal for a month. Now he would invade New York and the New England States and fill and fatten in the pies and pastry, chowder, beef and beans and other comestibles of the North. There is nothing secretive about "Boots's" gastronomic feats. He invites all who can crowd around him to view the show—free of charge. All he asks is that some one pay for the meal that he eats.

Up to the last week, between Baltimore and Washington, Boots has had no trouble finding backers or restaurant keepers willing to furnish a number of ordinary meals to him at one sitting for the advertising in it. This form of publicity has been abandoned, being too expensive. Boots has become too well known to find unsuspecting financial supporters, and as he must eat he is now looking to territory north of the Mason and Dixon line for a new supply of free provender.

Through The World he hopes to get in touch with some New Yorker with a similarly elastic digestive apparatus, who thinks he can eat himself away from Boots.

"You write de New York World for me dat if theys got any champeen on tap who tinks he can eat more dan me, to trot him out. Make de bet wort while an' I'll go to New York to meet him. Dese kids around here is all pikers, anyhow."

SOME PORCINE STUNTS

Boots's porcine stunts are almost too numerous to mention. With that deceptive looking pair of lower jaws and those long, yellow teeth he has, if stories current are to be believed, wrecked oyster houses, eaten whole hogs and demoralized waiters with startling frequency.

His latest feat rather "lays it over" any recent record. At 7.45 o'clock Thursday night in a little back room in a saloon in Southeast Washington Boots leaned back in his chair, wiped his mouth with the back of his hand, bit off a piece of chewing tobacco and voiced a few scathing remarks anent the regardly hospitality of his hosts. The latter in the preceding two hours and forty-five minutes had furnished the following repast to him: One boiled ham, unlimited water, one barrel of kale and two gallons of beer.

Boots had no bet on the result, but others had, and several hundred dollars changed hands in the room after he had finished.

In a small room, so crowded that his jaws, it is said, were the only parts of his person he could move unimpeded, he munched and munched, took a fresh start and munched some more, almost oblivious to the jests and exclamations of wonder passing between the several hundred spectators of the performance. Occasionally he would smile at some sally directed at him, but as a rule he was too busily occupied to reply.

ATE THE RIND ALSO

The ham supplied by a central Market butcher for the occasion came first on the menu. Armed with a knife, fork and a gallon bottle of catsup and a gallon pitcher of water, Boots attacked it gorously. In exactly 42 minutes he had despatched all that part usually eaten of the ham. Then he ate the skin and fat. He washed it down with a gallon of water. While waiting for the kale to be brought to his table, Boots called for his first gallon of beer. His manager sampled it for him, a proceeding Boots eyed jealously. After some one else had tasted the beverage Boots called it "no bunt," and he demanded a fresh pitcher, which he guarded carefully. The kale, which when boiled down filled six platters, was brought on at 6.15 o'clock. The last empty platter was taken from the table an hour and a half later. A half-pint of vinegar and a pint of olive oil had been consumed as a seasoning. The second gallon of beer washed it down.

Repetti is a former employee of the Navy Yard. At present he is working for a building contractor. He is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, weighs 165 pounds, and is forty years old. He measures less than forty-five inches around the waist.

Another famous bout in the list of Boots's banquets took place on the Mayflower last winter. To determine a wager he ate a meal sufficient for a family of twelve, at the behest of the crew of the Mayflower. The meal was prepared by John Schuerger, and comprised one roast turkey, weighing ten pounds; one quart of cranberries; three quarts of sauerkraut, one loaf of bread, one-half pint of olive oil; one-half gallon of raw oysters, one pint of catsup, twelve stalks of celery, and a gallon of beer. On another occasion he ate out an oyster house and a few days later stowed away a good sized roast pig at one sitting.

Repetti eats slowly but effectively. He masticates his food carefully and will take part in no levity while "banqueting." One of his favorite breakfasts consists of pie and milk.

Belleghem's rink was 7 down and R. J. Soden's was 14 up, therefore Peterborough won by 7 shots.

Fielder Jones Going Back To White Sox, So Reads Chicago Paper

Fielder Jones is coming back to the White Sox—maybe, so reads a Chicago story.

The occasional report of the return of the marvellous leader of the 1906 world's champions was sprung yesterday at Tacoma, Wash., and there is a ring of truth to the report in view of recent talks by President Comiskey, of the Southside team. The old Roman has confided to friends that he was tired of bench managers and that in case of trouble next year Jones would be back to play his old berth in centre and direct the destinies of the team.

Comiskey can't stand for a losing team, and it is known that he has been angling for the return of Jones ever since Fielder packed up his things in the winter of 1908 and went to Washington to locate. The owner of the Sox could not be reached last night, he being at Excelsior Springs, Mo., so no confirmation of the story from him was obtainable.

The report from Tacoma says Jones has accepted Comiskey's terms, which call for a salary of $20,000 a year, the highest sum ever paid a baseball manmanager, and 10 per cent. interest in the profits of the team. Jones, it is said, figures that his annual earnings would be $35,000 under the contract.

"Cooney" Starkell, a team mate of Jones on the Chehalis (Wash.) team, is authority for the report that Jones is coming oak. According to Starkell after a game at Chehalis the other day, Jones pulled a letter from his pocket and handed it to Starkell to read.

The letter was from Comiskey and offered Jones the contract mentioned above. Starkell asked Jones what he would do and Fielder replied that it meant $25,000 a year or more, and that he would accept.

Football In Ye Olden Time

As far back as 1583 the question of brutality in football was under discussion. The following is an extract from "Anatomie of Abuses," by Philip Stubbs, printed in London in 1583:

"For as concerning football play, I protest unto you it may rather be called a friendly kinde of fight than a play or recreation; a bloody and murthering practice, than a felowly sporte or pastime. For dooth not every one lye in waight for his adversarie, seeking to overthrow him and to picke him on his nose, though it be upon hard stones? In ditch or dale, in valley or hill, or what place soever it be, he careth not, so he have him down. And he that can serve the most in this fashion, he is counted the only felow, and who but he? So by this meanes sometime their legs, sometime their armes, sometime one part thrust out of joint, sometime an other, sometime the noses gush out with bloed, sometime their eyes start out, and sometime hurt in one place, sometime in another.

"But whosoever escapeth away the best goeth not scotfree, but is either sore wounded, craised and bruised, so as he dyeth or it or cis scapeth very hardly. And no marvaile, for they have the sleight to meet one betwixt two, to dashe him against the hart with their elbowes, to hit him under the shut ribbes with their griped fists, and with their knees to catch him upon the hip, and to pick him on his neck, with a hundred such murthering devices; and hereof groweth envie, malice, rancour, choler, hatred, displeasure, enmitie, and what els; and sometime fighting, brawling, contention, quarrel, picking, murther, homicide and great effusion of blood, as experience dayly teacheth."

Refined taste satisfied; comfortable elegance assured—while wearing a Fashion-Craft Tuxedo. Suitable for all semi-dress functions. Prices $18 and $20. Material and Fit Satisfying.

Captain Bunn

He Made a Change In the Name of His Boat.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Captain Benjamin Bunn scrubbed down the deck of the Lovely Eva, opened the cabin windows wide to the fresh breese blowing across the bay, hustled the coffeapot on to the little stove in the spotless galley, planted the frying pan beside it and then went and sat on the bowsprit and waited for the baker's boy to bring the breakfast rolls.

The Lovely Eva lay in wooden cradles just above high water mark. Salt grass and the white sandy beach formed her garden plot. Beach plum trees, pungent bayberry bushes and, in season, the tall pink marshmallow clustered about her black hull.

Above deck all was shipshape. In summer comfortable chairs and a table under a sail awning made an open air lounging place for Captain Bunn and his associates. In winter they gathered about a glowing stove in the cozy cabin.

While the coffee frothed in the pot and the bacon sizzled crisply in the pan in the galley, wheels crunched down the beach road, and the baker's wagon rolled down on the sand, turned and went helter skelter back again under the bow of the Lovely Eva.

Several hours passed in this congenial labor, while the sun mounted higher and the beach became a blazing white stretch. A woman stepped slowly along the sand holding her lilac print skirts primly above her neat shoe tops. She wore a wide lilac sunbonnet, and her bright brown hair and fresh, youthfully pretty face were framed in it like a pleasant picture. Her brown eyes changed expression as she came upon the busy captain in the lee of the sailboat.

"Howdy—howdy, Miss Willie?" chirruped the captain delightedly. "Tell me how she looks—fine as silk, eh?"

"It looks beautiful, captain," said Miss Willie Deems critically. "It shines like a frosted cake. What have you named her?"

"Nothing—as yet," returned the captain uneasily.

"What are you going to name her?" insisted Miss Willie.

"I haven't thought of a name. I've been trying to think of something pretty."

"I must say I'm interested in what you're going to call your new boat," said Miss Willie. The captain's blue eyes met hers in puzzled inquiry. "I dare say—I dare say!" he murmured, looking away from the lilac sunbonnet. "I never was good at naming a boat, Miss Willie!"

Miss Willie turned slightly and surveyed the nautical home of Captain Bunn with a quizzical eye that lingered on the name painted in small gilt letters under the bow. "So long as you've named the sloop after Eva Raymond you ought to name the sailboat after somebody else." Her gaze came back to the captain's reddening face.

The color spread under the gray whiskers, mounted to his forehead and disappeared under the peak of his white duck cap. He removed his pipe and waved it fiercely in the air, his eyes blazing ominously.

"Eva Raymond!" he snorted. "Who said I'd named the sloop after her?"

"She said so," returned Miss Willie complacently, "and Evangeline Cook says it was named after her, and Evaline Taylor says it was named for her; they all three fit it out five years ago at the missionary society, and they're not through talking about the mean things that was passed to and fro to this very day. They hate each other like poison, all on account of the naming of that sloop!"

"That sloop's been named Lovely Eva for the last ten years."

"But what you going to name the new boat?" asked Miss Willie sweetly.

Captain Bunn tramped through the sand until he stood beside Miss Willie. "I've been wanting to tell you something for a long time, Miss Willie. I thought maybe I could say it better out on the bay with a good stiff breeze filling the sails and the water running under the keel of the new boat. I've thought of a name for the boat, but I wanted you to suggest it." He was looking very red and uncomfortable indeed, but his square shoulders were set youthfully erect, and his handsome face was deadly in earnest.

Miss Willie saw all this through her long eyelashes, and her voice was a little shaky as she replied: "Seeing as the big boat is called Lovely Eva, why don't you name the new one Beautiful Eva? And the skiff you can call Little Eva. Then the whole three would be satisfied. That's my suggestion."

The captain stared dazedly. "Then you believe I named the big boat after one of them women?" he demanded.

"I haven't thought much about it," lied Miss Willie carelessly. "They're your boats. Name 'em to suit yourself."

"All right, Miss Willie. Then I shall call the new boat Wilhelmina after you, because, you know, Miss Willie, I was going to ask you to—marry me and come and live here with me forever!" The captain's bold hand rested on Miss Willie's slender shoulder with a caressing touch.

Her face grew pink and then paled wistfully. What a refuge the quaint home on the beach would be to her, the village dressmaker, whose days were spent in going from house to house and whose ears were wearied with much gossip and whose eyes were tired of flashing needles and the whir of the sewing machine! What a blissfully happy existence would be hers in the snug shelter of the sloop, with its perfect arrangements for housekeeping, the indulgent captain for a husband! And—here Miss Willie's head drooped—there was nobody quite so lovable as Captain Benjamin Bunn! That was Miss Willie's carefully guarded secret, that and her jealousy of the three Evas of Little River village. Her face grew quite pale again as she shook off Captain Bunn's hand.

"I couldn't live in a house or a boat that was named after another woman. You can see how they'd all talk, especially if they didn't marry you themselves," she said resolutely.

"Marry me themselves!" roared the captain. "You don't mean them three women wanted to marry me?"

Miss Willie nodded proudly. "Every one of 'em has laid claim to you ever since you sailed into harbor with 'Lovely Eva' painted on the sloop."

"She had that name when I bought her down to Rockport. What can I do? It's bad luck to change a boat's name," said the captain helplessly.

"Perhaps you'll think it good luck not to change it," retorted Miss Willie stiffly, once more turning away. And this time Captain Bunn did not detain her.

He watched her with grave blue eyes from which all the happiness had fled until her lilac skirts had fluttered around a pile of great bowlders, and then, with a long sigh, he picked up his painting materials and trudged up to the sloop.

The result of a long meditation was visible the next morning when Captain Bunn rigged a small scaffolding and swung himself to a seat under the bow of the Lovely Eva. Cheerfully he worked, and he sang lustily the chorus of "Ben Bowline." It was a short job, but one requiring delicacy and skill. When it was finished he performed a similar operation on the port bow and then hurried to the stern, where he stood on a barrel and carefully repainted the worn letters that announced the name of "Lovely Eva, Little River."

Then he flew down to the sailboat and with loving care lettered the name of "Wilhelmina B." on stem and stern. He had long finished his work and was fresh and clean in a suit of white drill when a man came along the beach from Little Village. He was the editor of the weekly newspaper.

"Good morning, captain," he hailed cheerily. "I received your message about the new boat, so I've come down to have a look at her. A beauty, isn't she?" He stood still and examined the boat with a critical eye.

"I think she's pretty fine, Mr. Brown. I'll take you out tomorrow. Perhaps we can get a few blues outside, eh?" The captain beamed happily. Everything would be well now, and in the distance he could see Miss Willie Deems picking her way down the beach toward him.

"Makes the old sloop look some shabby," he remarked, calling attention to the boat on the sand above them.

Mr. Brown turned and looked at the sloop. He squinted long at her and then went up closer. "What's the matter with her name, captain? I thought"— He turned a puzzled look on the captain, who was watching him with twinkling eyes.

"What is the matter with her name?" repeated Captain Bunn innocently.

"Why, I thought her name was Lovely Eva, but, by George, it's Lonely Eva!"

The captain laughed. "It's always been Lonely Eva—queer name, isn't it?—but somehow the first stroke of the 'n' wore off and left a 'v.' It's never been painted back again till awhile ago. You see, that's her real name."

"Now that is quite a joke," mused Mr. Brown, with eyes mirthfully reminiscent of two spinsters and an ambitious widow who laid claim to the name of Eva. "I wonder if you'd object to my writing that up for the paper. I never heard the sloop called anything except Lovely, although I guess it's been mighty lonely sometimes." He laughed at his own joke.

"Write her up; write her up!" agreed the captain heartily, with a wave of his hand to the departing editor.

He saw Mr. Brown greet Miss Willie with great deference, and then he stood quietly waiting until she reached his side.

"I expect I'm acting like a fool over the name of that boat," she began hurriedly, when Captain Bunn's pointing finger brought her to an abrupt pause.

"Do you think any woman 'll ever lay claim to having that sloop named after her, Willie? Any woman in Little River going to acknowledge her name to be Lonely Eva? Not on your life!"

Miss Willie saw and blushed and then laughed merrily. Then her face sobered. "I suppose it might seem an awful mean thing if you had ever been—had ever shown them any attention," she hesitated.

"I never did," asserted the captain stoutly. "Why, Willie, I never even called to see one of 'em. It lets everybody out of it very neatly, I think. And now how do you like the name of the new boat?" He turned her about, and she looked at it in silence for a few moments.

Then happy tears filled her eyes. "Why—why have you named her Wilhelmina B., captain?" she asked, although she knew the answer.

"It means Wilhelmina Bunn. That's to be your name after this, eh, dear?"

In the shadow of the Lovely Eva Captain Bunn leaned over and kissed Miss Willie on the lips.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Do you—the you to-day means mothers and fathers—ever romp with your children.

I don't mean just play with them in dignified fashion, or walk or talk with them, but really romp—throw aside your dignity and become one of them in a glorious car-splitting riot of nonsense?

If you don't, I think you are missing one of your greatest opportunities to bind your children to you.

"I don't think I'll ever forget one Christmas afternoon," I heard a man say the other day when a group of us were discussing the Christmases of our childhood. "It stands out from all the rest because of a great time we children had with father. Just after breakfast father told us all to be in the living room at three o'clock because there was going to be an entertainment there. He wouldn't tell us any more than that, and you can imagine how excited we got over it. Well, at three o'clock, we were all there, you can just bet, and father came in and started the most glorious romp we ever had. He got right down on his hands and knees and played with us and made faces and said funny things until we laughed so we were almost sick.

"The pater has been dead twenty Christmases now, but never a Christmas passes but I think of that afternoon."

Most of us have some such memory, I think.

Look back over your childhood and see if the high light doesn't fall on some such occasion, some gala day when father or mother, or both, came back down the years to be just children with you.

You like to dwell on that day, don't you?

Then why not make such memories as numerous as possible for the youngsters about you that are going to reach that point so sadly soon, when they, too, shall begin to look back on their childhood.

Orison Swett Marden, the new thought writer, advocates fun as one of the most important elements in child training.

"Fun is the cheapest and best medicine in the world for your children as well as yourself," he says. "Give it to them in good large doses. It will not only save your doctor's bills but it will also help to make your children happier, and will improve their chances in life. The first duty we owe a child is to teach it to fling out its inborn gladness and joy with the same freedom and abandon as the bobolink does when it makes the meadow joyous with its song.

"There is an irrepressible longing for amusement, for rollicking fun, in young people, and if these longings were more fully met in the home, it would not be so difficult to keep the boy and girl under the parental roof. I always think there is something wrong when the father or the children are so very uneasy to get out of the house at night and to go off "somewhere" where they will have a good time. A happy, joyous home is a powerful magnet to child and man."

Sounds pretty reasonable, doesn't it?

Tungsten Lamps Are Coming To The Front Again---Save Electricity

Tungsten lamps are coming to the front because they save electricity. In appearance, their only difference from the ordinary carbon filament incandescent lamp is that the filament is constructed of tungsten instead of carbon. But in actual use it has been proved that they use only about one-third as much current as a carbon lamp to produce a light of the same illuminating power. True, their first cost is greater (approximately three times as much), but this is counterbalanced by the saving in current effected. They have one weak point, however. That is the ease with which the delicate tungsten filament is broken. On this account great care has to be exercised n installing them, and it is for this reason, too, that they cannot be economically used as portable lamps. Yet, when carefully handled, they have a long lease of life. In England, where they are used much more extensively than here, it is quite common for them to last 3,000 hours, and one instance is on record where a tungsten lamp burned continuously for over 15,000 hours. Even when allowance is made for more frequent breakage, the tungsten lamp shows a saving over the carbon of about fifty per cent. That is an economy not to be despised and points to the much greater use for stationary lighting purposes.

Dufferin Block, Havelock Was Destroyed By Fire

POLICE COURT

This must be the season for Blackbirds, for another one broke the monotony of the Police Court this morning. He was making merry on the 17th of September and got pinched, that is the reason he turned up at the court looking very sober, this morning. He pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk while on the blacklist and was fined $10.00 and costs, total amounting to $13.35 in default of which he will have to face imprisonment for 20 days. He got the days in which to pay his fine.

SECOND LETTER OF WALFORD HATTON, WHO IS WITH Q.O.R.

Writes Interestingly of the Regiment's Stay in England ---Spent a Week-end in London and Saw Many Historic Places --- Fine Receptions at Every Village---English People Can't Do Too Much for Visiting Soldiers.

Below is the second letter from "The Front," written by Mr. Walford Hatton, of the Queen's Own, which has captured Great Britain, if not vi et armis, yet by their soldierly bearing and plucky endurance of hardship and by the representative relation to Canada as the most important outpost of the Empire. It gives a good idea of the work cut out for, and so creditably done, by our boys. Another letter will appear to-morrow.

Rushmoor Camp,
Aldershot, 5-9-10.

Dear mother,—Wrote you yesterday from London, where nearly all the boys had leave from Saturday to Monday morning. It is one hour's run to the City. We got on a 'bus and went to the Strand, where (Johnston and I) put up in a hotel equal to, or better than the King Edward, for eleven shillings per day, the two of us. Then we walked all through the central part of the city, saw Nelson's monument, Trafalgar Square, went through the National Art Gallery, the War Office, the Cecil and Savoy Hotels, the National Liberal Club, the Life Guards, and went to a music hall in the evening. Wherever we went "Ours" were very prominent.

Sunday morning we were late for church, some officers sat at our table and talked to us and told us what to see. We then wrote home and afterwards took a 'bus to Hyde Park, Kensington, and the Serpentine. We had a great walk, had lunch, and then went back to the hotel, where we met our business manager. Then we went out to Hampton Court, built in the year 1515 by Wolsey, and used as a Royal residence up to the time of the Georges. The gardens and history of this place are the most beautiful and interesting in the country. London is a great surprise to us on account of the fine streets, the speed of traffic, and the people, and the fine modern buildings. We went to St. Paul's in the evening, and, although this does not sound much, our time was fully taken up, and, in fact, rushed.

We went back to camp Sunday night, and to-day went out and saw a company of regulars use the moving targets. It was wonderful the way they picked up the range. Later on we went back to camp, and the Buffs had a sham battle for our edification. I bet they said things as they went running, shooting and taking cover, as we sat or lay on the grass looking on. To-morrow morning we leave camp for the first manoeuvres, and are tied to camp to-night.

On Manoeuvres.

Don't know where we are, but set out from camp yesterday in the van of seven thousand soldiers, and marched thirteen and a half miles at quite a rip. We were very stiff and sore wh we arrived in camp. My feet trated me a good deal. I suppose onecount of the additional weight I toted, but I stuck to it, though. Our sister regiment, the Buffs, etped right beside us on the estate ofquire Knight. We turned in at 9.got up at five, and to-day I was pton the baggage. I had to help loand took turns, hour in and hout, riding. This is written while onthe march, and the worst writing itchen I walk, and the other when on my halt.

We gethe receptions at every village we ss through. My feet are much bet to-day, but I seem to be getting st again. Am going to post this at th next post-office. We are now twenfour hours behind the enemy. We ft camp last to-day, as it is the cstom to march first, then last. Hucters follow us for miles, trying to ell stuff, which, we are told, not tbuy, and we are not allowed to ake cigarettes either. Six of our offics are away sick, some of them are ry sick; don't know what the troubles, but think it is influenza, and ne of the boys has typhoid.. Were not allowed to drink any water ecept from the water filter cart. I wearing two pairs of socks to-day with lots of soap rubbed on the bottms, as it is the best stunt to pvent blisters. Our feet burn like fe, after marching eight miles or so and we almost think we will have to all out, but after coming to camp we get all right. We have had fit weather since the first three days, and we are all right. We have tents with us this time, but will not have this next time. We sleep twelve in a tt. Our mess tins came into use for e first time. It is just about as hat here as on transport, except for the hour's ride. The English regiments look down on the Territorials, but can't do enough for us, in fact no one can.

Well, will close now, with love,

OBITUARY

MARY HOLLAND

The death occurred yesterday at 12 o'clock of Mary Leahy, wife of the late William Holland, in Douro. Deceased was almost a life long resident of Douro and was highly respected. She had a host of friends and the news of her death was received with genuine sorrow by her many friends.

The late Mrs. Leahy is survived by two daughters, three sons, one sister and three brothers. The daughters are Mrs. J. J. Allen, of Douro, Gertrude Leahy Douro. The sons are Frank and John of Peterborough and Joseph of Sulmo, B.C.

The sister is Mrs. James Mahony, Douro. The brothers are: Daniel and John of Peterborough and Michael of Sodusk, Mich.

The funeral will be held to-morrow at 9 o'clock to St. Joseph's church, when requiem mass will be celebrated by Rev. Father McGuire, after which the remains will be taken to St. Joseph's cemetery for burial.

CHILDREN SHOULD HAVE A REGULAR ALLOWANCE

From Farm and Dairy.

It is a capital plan to provide children, as soon as they are able to write neatly and do addition easily, with a weekly or monthly allowance, and an account book. With this money the child should be expected to provide himself with some small necessaries: a girl should be expected to buy gloves and small ribbons; a boy, ties and school necessaries, such as pencils, copying books, etc.

There is nothing more required in the present day than that children should be taught early what true economy is, and to exercise their judgment, not only their fancy, in making purchases. A little early instruction, and experience, if need be, of the great discomforts of extravagance may save them from much suffering in after years.

ONE WOMAN'S WAY

One of the members of the West Victoria Women's Institute in conversation with the Household Editor of Farm and Dairy recently, stated: "I gave my eldest daughter when she left school all the eggs gathered on Sunday. Out of the money she procured from selling these eggs, she had to buy her own gloves, hair ribbons, collars and little accessories that every girl seems to need these days. As I keep upwards of 100 hens, she very often has a neat little sum for herself at the end of the month. My other girl is still at school but she gets five cents each Saturday and all the coppers that come into the house are given to her at the end of the week. She has only her Sunday School collection to take out of her money. The girls are both pleased and do not have to ask their father or me for every cent they want. The oldest girl has had over $15 this summer for knick-knacks. I believe some such arrangement as this with the youngest daughters teaches them to value money and keeps them contented."

Boy Thief Changes Attire With Sleeping Damsel And Tries To Escape

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 21st.—"I wanted to go home to Chicago. I had no money and I thought the railroad people would have pity on a penniless girl rather than pass, free, a half-starved boy."

Such was Gustave Edwards' excuse for masquerading as a girl that he might escape the easier after playing the burglar in Brooklyn. It took a girl's sharp eye to discover that Edwards was following the newest fashion and wearing the garments of the opposite sex.

Miss Nellie Grimm was looking out the window of her home, 134 Buffalo Avenue, and saw a moving figure that roused her suspicions.

"Willie, come here," Miss Nellie cried to her brother. "Somebody carrying a suit case has just run from Mrs. Scully's house next door. She looks like a girl but runs like a man."

Young Grimm rushed out, down the street sped a figure that certainly did look like a girl. "She," as Miss Grimm said, wore a shirt waist and skirt which she gripped high with her free hands. She also had on pale blue stockings and patent leather pumps that shone as she ran.

FLEES ON A BICYCLE

Shouting "Stop thief!" Grimm took up the chase; the seeming young woman jumped on a man's bicycle that waited at the curb and, while hosiery and pumps twinkled in the early morning sun, pedalled away, still grasping the suit case. Grimm doggedly pursued; four blocks were passed; at Rochester and St. Marks Avenue the bicycle wheels skidded, and milady of the pumps fell sprawling. Instantly she was on her feet and as Willie Grimm rushed in, she struck him a sounding blow on the face, adding a round oath to make it smart more.

"Runs like a man, fights like a man, swears like a man," Grimm says he thought as he pitched in.

The fight was a very pretty one until Patrolman Roy Jayne and William Feder interrupted. Then, figuratively, Edwards dropped his skirts. "I thought my disguise was perfect," said he, grinning.

At the Atlantic Avenue station the police found in the suit case two shirt waists, two skirts, two hats of the kind that are worn with hat pins, a brush and comb, a nightdress, and even a diamond ring for the penniless girl to wear.

"Your trousseau would have carried you to Chicago very nicely," said Lieutenant Eggers, sardonically, after hearing Edwards' excuses.

CLOCK HIS UNDOING

Some of the clothes belonged to Mrs. Grimm and her daughters. Nellie and Mamie, for Edwards got in the Grimm house first by sliding down the coal chute. The alarm clock sounded at six loud enough to wake a mummy. Edwards left, jumped the back fence, and entered Mrs. Scully's house.

There reposed Miss Nellie Cullinan, a guest, who visited Mrs. Scully Sunday evening. Edwards vows he had no idea of posing as a girl until he saw Miss Cullinan's outfit neatly disposed on a chair, the long blue stockings and the shiny pumps at the chair's feet. Hurriedly he exchanged clothes and packed his booty in the guest's suit case, picked up the diamond ring and left by the front door. The noisy alarm clock had awakened the Grimm family. Miss Grimm was looking out the window—the rest is history.

Edwards declared he is 15 years old. He looks five or six years older. He said he had to get to Chicago somehow or he without a roof over his head, for he owes $18.50 room rent at an hotel on Broadway, Manhattan.

The police stripped Edwards of most of his stolen plumes, but let him wear the blue stockings and pumps, exhibits A and B, as the lawyers say. Over his own clothes the police put the nightdress they found in the suit case. Thus arrayed Edwards was arraigned in the Gates Avenue police court.

"Probably crazy," said Magistrate Harris tersely, after holding him in $2,000 bond. "Take him to the King's County Hospital and let the surgeons try to learn why he wants to wear patent leather pumps."

Missing Seventeen Years Is Found On The age

Examiner Special.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 19. — Emil Jarrow, who for nearly seventeen years had been thought dead by friends in Wooster, has surprised them with the news that he is still in the land of the living. Jarrow had never forgotten those who had once rescued and befriended him.

Jarrow broke the news of his "return to life" when he sent an invitation to several residents of Wooster offering to pay all expenses and inviting them to visit him in Cleveland, where he is playing a comedy sketch in Keith's Hippodrome. The invitation was accepted and Jarrow held a reunion.

Jarrow was born in Berlin, Germany, and is a brother of George Jarrow, sewing machine manufacturer, of Chicago . When a boy he started out alone to join his brother. On reaching New York he was nearly penniless and decided to ride through to Chicago on a Pennsylvania freight train. Near Wooster he fell in with tramps. They beat him into unconsciousness, stripped him and threw him bodily from the moving train. Early the next morning Phillip Ellsperman, the marshal, and George Kettler, editor of a Wooster paper, found him and provided medical attention.

Upon his recovery Jarrow was given a home by George Fry, baker. After two years with Fry the boy suddenly disappeared. search proving fruitless he was finally given up for dead. He drifted to Chicago and went out with Buffalo Bill's show, in charge of the ammition.

One day, in Ambrose Park, Brooklyn, during a performance, a British Lancer, weighing 240 pounds, dropped dead astride his horse. Jarrow ran into the arena, picked the man from the horse's back carried him to the dressing room. Mention of this in the New York papers showed Jarrow the possibilities of his strength and he went on the stage as a strong man.

He appeared in this until one night, while juggling a barrel of water at the Chicago Opera House, the stage caved in under him and he dropped into the basement with the barrel on top of him. His injuries he received $12,000 and the one-time penniless runway boy "salted" it down and climbed on his way to prosperity.

WOMAN'S SCREAMS

Frustrated Kidnapper's Plans—Became Scared and Ran

Special to The Examiner.

PEMBROKE, SEPT. 23.—Four men in an automobile drove up to the homestead of Mrs. Egg, near here, yesterday, seized her young daughter, and attempted to get away with her, but the screams of the woman attracted attention and the men went away without the girl. The whole countryside is very much alarmed. The kidnapping had been well planned, the rural telephone wires to the house having been cut. One of the men threatened to shoot.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY

NEGLECTING TO DEVELOP THE APPLE MARKET

From Farm and Dairy.

A large and profitable market which might be developed for early varieties of apples has been for the most part neglected by our apple growers. As early as August there is a large market for apples in Canada. The Northwest would use immense quantities of fall apples could they get them. Even in the larger centres of population in Old Ontario, surrounded as they are by the best apple growing districts, there is a scarcity of early apples of a kind that consumers care to buy.

Horticultural experts have for years been advocating the planting of more early and fall varieties. Some of our more progressive orchardists years ago recognized the profit to be derived from the early apple trade and are, in consequence, from having acted on their faith, reaping satisfactory profits therefrom. More fruit growers who are considering the matter of setting out new orchards would do well to plant some early and fall varieties. Alexander, Snow, McIntosh and Blenheim should not be neglected as they have been in past years.

The old orchards throughout the country are composed almost entirely of winter varieties. These orchards under proper methods of cultivation, pruning and spraying, will to a large extent meet increased demands for winter apples for some years to come. The market for the earlier sorts only awaits development and when growers have learned how to handle and pack fall apples, and there is established a good system of cold storage on railroads and steamship lines, there is an unlimited market awaiting the early varieties, for if they are not wanted in this country there is a demand in Europe to be supplied.

Music Maxims.

Music is an invisible dance, as dancing is a silent music.—Jean Paul Richter.

Such as the music is, such are the people of the commonwealth.—Turkish Proverb.

All music is the poetry of sound; so is painting the poetry of sight, and the subject matter has nothing to do with harmony of sound or of color.—Whistler.

Train and Track.

At 10 a.m. every day the entire Great Western railway system of England receives the exact Greenwich time.

There are 2,039 miles of government railways in operation in Canada, constructed at the capital cost of $111,545,903.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

the vessel. The Lord saved me only to punish me. My heart will break. What shall I do. Where shall I hide?

And her sobbing only ceased when the noise of ascending foot-steps drove her into the company of sorrowful women who would nevertheless have forgotten some of their own woes did they but realize her greater anguish.

CHAPTER XIV.

THE WAY THEY HAVE IN THE NAVY.

"Some people are never satisfied," said Pyne, whilst he helped the cooks by smashing a ham bone with a hammer. The bone had been picked clean of meat and marrow on the first day after the wreck, but it occurred to Enid that if it were broken up and boiled she might procure some sort of nourishment for the two children, who were fast running down in condition.

"What is the matter now?" inquired Constance, whose attentive eyes were hovering between the cooking stove and a distilling kettle.

All the flour and biscuits, with the exception of two tins reserved for extremities, had been used. She was striving to concoct cakes of chocolate out of cocoa, an article more plentiful than any other food of its kind in stock, but water could not be spared, and eating dry powder was difficult to parched palates.

"There are two tug-boats, a trawler, and a Trinity service-boat not half a mile away," said Pyne, "and the cliffs at Land's End are peppered with people."

"Surely that is satisfactory. Dad told me that the Falcon signalled this morning he was to expect a special effort to be made at half tide on the flow, and not on the ebb as was arranged yesterday."

"Yes, that is all right so far as it goes." Pyne leaned forward with the air of one about to impart information of great value. "But the extraordinary thing is that whilst every man on board those vessels is thinking like steam how best to get into the lighthouse, we are most desperately anxious to get out of it. So you see, as I said before, some people—"

"Oh, dash!" cried Enid. "I've gone and burnt my finger all through listening to your nonsense."

"Are there really many people on the cliffs?" demanded Constance.

Pyne pounded the bone viciously.

"I got out of my way to inform you of a number of interesting and strictly accurate facts," he protested, "and one of you burns her finger and the other doubts my word. Yet, if I called your skepticism unfeeling, Miss Enid would be angry."

"I don't know why kettle lids are so cantankerous," said Enid. "They seem to get hot long before the water does."

"The hottest part of any boil is on top," said Pyne.

Enid smiled forgiveness. "I believe you would be cheerful if you were going to be electrocuted," she said, pensively. "Yet, goodness knows, it is hard to keep one's spirits up this morning. The sea is as bad as ever. What will become of us if we get no relief to-day."

"Mr. Pyne," interrupted Constance suddenly, "do you think that any of the men can have gained access to the store-room during the night?"

"I can't say for sure," he replied. "What has put that into your mind?"

"The purser and I examined all that was left this morning, and we both agreed that some of the things had disappeared. It is very strange."

Pyne was not wholly prepared for this mine being sprung on him. So he essayed to gain time.

"It doesn't appeal to me in that light. There was a miscalculation about the water. Why not about the food?"

"Because my father went through all the stores personally and portioned them out. Some flour and tinned meat have gone; I am quite sure of it. The question is—who can have taken them. The flour, at least, must have attracted attention if anybody tried to eat it."

"Did you say all that to the purser?" he asked, suspending his labours and looking at her steadily.

"No. We could not remember exactly what proportion of the various articles there ought to be left."

"Then take my advice, Miss Constance, and keep on forgetting," he said.

A quick flash came into her pale cheeks.

"You are not saying that without good cause?" she murmured.

"I have the best of reasons. If the least hint of such a thing goes round among the men there will be ructions."

Constance went to the door and closed it.

"Enid," she said, "I believe father and Mr. Pyne have got some dreadful plan in their minds which they dare not tell us about."

But the American was not to be cornered in such fashion. He opened the door again and went out, pausing on the threshold to say:

"I wouldn't venture to guess what might be troubling Mr. Brand, but you can take it from me that what he says, goes. Talk about grasping a nettle firmly, I believe your father would grab a scorpion by the tail if he felt that way."

And with this cryptic utterance he quitted them, intending to warn Brand at the first opportunity that the time was at hand when he must harden his heart and take the decisive step of cutting off communication between the service-room and the remainder of the building.

This could be done easily. The flanges of the uppermost iron staircase were screwed to the floor above and below. A few minutes' labour would remove the screws; the steps could be lifted bodily into the service room and there utilized to seal the well.

"What a howling menagerie will break loose here when they find out" thought Pyne. "It's a hard thing to say, but we ought to have the door open. Quite a stack of folks will need to be pitched outside."

A comforting reflection truly, yet his face bore no token thereof as he joined the lighthouse-keeper and several of the Chinook's officers and men on the gallery.

The wind had shifted another couple of points to the north, and the sea, apart from the reef, was running in a heavy unbroken swell. That was the tantalizing part of it. An ordinary ship's boat, properly manned, could live in perfect safety in the open.

But the iron-toothed reef, with its tortuous channels and battling currents changing with every stage of the tide, surrounded the pillar with an apparently impassable barrier, whilst the lighthouse itself offered as frowning a front as any of the black rocks which reared their weed-covered crests at low water.

Signals were being exchanged between the gallery and the Trinity tender. Brand seemed to be very emphatic in his answers to the communications made to him by Stanhope.

"No, no," he muttered aloud, whilst the anxious man near him wondered why he was so impatient.

"It is utterly impossible!" he said again. "No boat can do it—some one should stop him. It means certain loss of life."

At last, becoming aware that his companions could not understand what was going on, he turned to them with passionate explanation.

"That brave fellow, Stanhope, says that, with two others at the oars, he intends to row near enough to the rock at half flood to endeavour to spring into the ladder. I cannot persuade him that no man has ever yet succeeded in such a mad project. Look below, and see how each wave climbs around eighteen or twenty feet of the base. The thing is wildly impracticable. He will be swept off and smashed to pieces before our eyes, even if the boat escapes."

"If the boat can come near enough for that purpose, couldn't we heave a line aboard her?" asked one of the ship's officers.

"We can try. I shall signal them to that effect. Anything is better than to sanction an attempt which is foredoomed to failure, and must result in the death of the man who tries it."

Thereupon more energetic flag-waving took place. Finally Brand desisted in sheer exasperation.

"I cannot convince him," he cried. "He has made up his mind. May the Lord preserve him from a peril which I consider to be a mortal one."

"Has he put forward any theory?" asked Pyne. "He was doing a lot of talking."

"Yes," explained Brand. "He believes that a strong boat, rowed to the verge of the broken water, might watch her opportunity and dart in close to the ladder on the backwash of a big wave, allowing its successor to lift her high enough for an active man to jump on to the rungs. The rowers must pull for their lives the instant the wave breaks and leave him clinging to the ladder as best he can. There is more chance of success in that way, he thinks, than in trying to make fast a line thrown by us, even if it fell over the boat. It is all a question of time, he argues, and I have failed to convince him that not only he but his companions will be lost."

"Is there no chance?" inquired the second officer.

"Look below" repeated Brand hopelessly, and indeed, when they obeyed him, craning their necks over the rail to examine the seething cauldron from which the granite tower tapered up to them, no man could say that the lighthouse-keeper deplored Stanhope's decision without good reason.

They understood matters a little better, perhaps, when, one by one, they re-entered the lantern, the Falcon having flitted away to make her final preparations. Brand asked them not to make known the nature of the pending undertaking.

"If I thought it would do any good to the suffering people I would gladly see them enlivened by the news," he said. "I confess, however, I expect nothing but disastrous failure—and — gentlemen—Lieutenant Stanhope is practically engaged to be married to one of my daughters."

What was to be said? They quitted him in the silence that was the dominant note of their lives just then. Pyne alone remained. He wondered why one man should be called on to endure so much.

Though each of those present on the gallery was loyal to Brand's sorrowful request, it was impossible to prevent others from seeing that something of exceptional interest was in progress afloat and on the rock.

Brand did not know that the officials of the Trinity House had only agreed to help Stanhope's hazardous project under compulsion. The sailor informed them that he was determined to carry out his scheme, with or without their assistance. So, when the Falcon, the tender, and a strong tug hired by Mr. Traill, rounded the distant Carn du headland at eleven o'clock, the lighthouse-keeper felt that further protest was unavailing. It behooved him to take all possible measures to help the men who were about to dare so much to help him.

In the first place, he caused a rope to be swung from the gallery to the doorway. If any doubt were entertained as to the grave risk attending Stanhope's enterprise it was promptly dispelled by the extreme difficulty met with in accomplishing this comparatively simple task. Even a heavy piece of wood, slung to the end of the ninety odd feet of cord necessary did not prevent the wind from lashing the weighted end in furious plunges seaward. At last a sailor caught the swinging block with a boat-hook. The man would have been carried away by a climbing wave had not his mates perceived his danger, and held him. Then two life-buoys were attached to other ropes, in case there might be some slight chance of using them. The tackle which the unfortunate captain of the Chinook had cast adrift was utilized to construct safety lines in the entrance way. Loops were fastened to them, in which six of the strongest men available were secured against the chance of being swept through the door to instant death.

Meanwhile, the three vessels had steamed close to the mooring buoy, which, it will be remembered, lay in full view of the kitchen window. Constance gave them a casual glance. Being versed in the ways of the sea, she instantly discovered that some unusual event was afoot.

She called her sister's attention to the manoeuvres of the steamers; one, the Trinity tender [illegible] end-ide on the incoming tide.

"They are lowering a boat, I do declare," she announced, after they had watched the proceedings for a little while with growing curiosity. At the distance, nearly six hundred yards, it was difficult to discern exactly what was taking place.

"No boat can live if it comes near the rock," cried Enid. And then a wild thought brought her heart to her mouth.

"Oh, Connie!" she cried in a sudden access of terror, "I feel sure that Jack is doing something desperate to save us. Dad knows. They all know, but they would not tell us. That is why Mr. Pyne has not been near us for hours."

"It cannot be. No one would permit it. Father would never give his sanction. Enid, my dear one, why do you say such things? You frighten me!"

But Constance's lips were bloodless, and her eyes dilated with the

HAND WITH A MISSING THUMB

It Was Important Evidence, but Came In Late.

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

William Burch was graduated at the scientific school of the —— university and became an assistant in an institution for original scientific research. Having a rich uncle, unmarried and childless, who was intending to make him his heir, he had laid out a career for himself by which he might devote his time to study and investigation.

T. s uncle, a Mr. Trevor, was cashier in a bank.

One m rning young Burch received a note from his uncle asking him to call that afternoon at 3 o'clock. Burch called. Half an hour later he was seen to leave his uncle's house very red in the face and muttering to himself. The only person living in the house with the uncle was an old woman who took care of it. She heard Mr. Trevor say during Burch's visit:

"That's the best I can do for you."

Burch replied angrily: "You have placed me in a very trying position. Having advised me to follow a career that pays nothing and promised to back me up, you put me off with"—

Here the door was closed, and the housekeeper heard no more.

Mr. Trevor always went out to dinner—usually at his club—at 6 o'clock. Mrs. Morton, his housekeeper, noticed that he did not ride out during the afternoon of his nephew's call, and at 7 o'clock he had not gone to dinner. She went to his room, knocked and received no reply. Entering, she saw his dead body on the bed.

Running to the telephone, she called up William Burch and told him to come at once—something had happened to his uncle. Burch came and with Mrs. Morton went to his uncle's room.

He did not speak for some time, being evidently under strong emotion. Then he said:

"Mrs. Morton, who has been with my uncle this afternoon besides myself?"

"I have seen no one come or go."

On the table stood a decanter of whisky, a glass and a soda bottle in a silver holder. The dead man had been drinking some whisky and soda and had left a part of it in the glass. Burch took up the glass and examined the contents critically. Then, stooping so as to get very near the holder, he examined it closely.

"When was it polished?" he asked.

"This morning. I polished all the silver this morning."

A part of the surface was blurred; the rest was bright.

"Did you handle it after polishing it?"

"Only by the bottom."

Burch put his mouth nearer the holder and breathed on it. Then, taking a little hand microscope from his vest pocket, he brought it to bear on the blurred surface.

"U'm!" he said.

"Well?" said Mrs. Morton interrogatively.

"Where can I lock up this bottle holder?"

"In any of the closets. There's one on each floor."

"No. Every nook and cranny of the house will be searched."

He threw himself into a chair and thought. Mrs. Morton stood waiting. The dead body lay on the bed. Finally Burch, rising, said:

"I must risk it."

"Risk what?"

"Before reporting my uncle's death I must remove the bottle holder. Promise me that you will say nothing about it."

For the first time Mrs. Morton cast a suspicious glance at Mr. Burch.

"If I'm questioned about it I shall be obliged to tell."

"If you are questioned, yes."

Mrs. Morton gave a reluctant consent.

"Get me a pasteboard box that will hold it."

She went out of the room and presently returned with a box. Burch cut a hole in it large enough to let through the stand of the bottle holder, by which he grasped it, using the box as a protector, so that nothing could touch the silver surface.

"Call a cab."

Mrs. Morton did as directed, and Burch, carrying the bottle holder by its stand part, left the house, promising to return soon. Within twenty minutes he was back. Then he went to the telephone, called up the police and reported that his uncle had died suddenly under very suspicious circumstances. The coroner was not long in coming and, after carefully inspecting everything in the room, went out, locking the door behind him and putting a policeman on guard.

While this was in progress William Burch was locked in his own room with a detective.

"My uncle has been poisoned," he said, "by some one whose left thumb is missing. I wish you to find that person. If you don't I shall either be executed for murder or imprisoned for life or go forth a man with a blighted reputation. I was the last person known to be with my uncle before his death. In a few days or at most a few weeks I shall be arrested.

"These are my disadvantages. On the other side, I am heir to my uncle's estate and can pay my lawyers and you well. I care nothing for them provided you succeed. Go. Find the man with the missing thumb."

In just two days from that day William Burch was arrested for the murder of his uncle, John Trevor. After the usual delay the case came to trial. Mrs. Morton was the first witness for the prosecution, and one of the first questions asked her was if there had been a holder for the soda bottle found in the deceased's room. She replied that there had been and when questioned further testified that the accused had taken it away.

This witness's other evidence was enough to convict Burch. Another feature alone was also sufficient to that end. Burch was his uncle's heir. A third feature admitted by Burch himself clinched the other two. Being put on the stand by his counsel and asked what had passed between him and his uncle at their last interview, Burch said:

"My uncle sent for me to tell me that he was intending to marry. This would turn his property away from me. He proposed to make my interest in it dependent upon the will of the lady he intended to marry. He said I could [illegible]

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Columbus, Ohio.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during change of life. My doctor told me it was good, and since taking it I feel so much better that I can do all my work again. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fine remedy for all woman's troubles, and I never forget to tell my friends what it has done for me."—Mrs. E. HANSON, 304 East Long St., Columbus, Ohio.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

London's Town Hall.

The guildhall is an important public building in London, which may be regarded as the town hall, and is the place of assembly of several courts, as the court of common council, the court of aldermen, the chamberlain's court and a police court presided over by one of the aldermen. The construction of the building was begun in 1411. It was partially destroyed in the great fire of 1666, but was soon restored, and in 1789 it was altered to its present form. The hall proper is 153 feet in length, 48 in breadth and 55 in height. It has been famous for centuries for the magnificence of its civic feasts. The first time it was used for this purpose was in 1500, when Sir John Shaw, goldsmith, who had been knighted on the field of Bosworth, first gave here the lord mayor's feast.

MASCAGNI'S PLAN STIRS ALL ITALY

Press Expresses National Indignation Because "Ysobel" Will First Be Given Here.

MEDIATION IS PROPOSED

Mr. Edmunds, for Messrs. Liebler & Co., Goes to Milan to Save the Composer Worry.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

It seems that there is a great deal of bitterness in Italy over the fact that Mascagni and Puccini have both contracted to give their new operas for the first time in America instead of in Italy, as has always been the case. The newspapers are waging a furious campaign against both of them and are threatening all sorts of reprisals when the operas, "Ysobel" and "The Girl of the Golden West," are performed in Rome during the exposition next spring.

To try and smooth this trouble out so far as Mascagni is concerned Mr. Ralph Edmunds, representing Liebler & Co., has just arrived in Europe. He was on his way to Italy to camp on Mascagni's trail when I met him to-day.

COMPOSER QUASI OFFICIAL.

"You see, Mascagni is a way is a sort of a government official," said Mr. Edmunds. "He is the court director of music and directs all musical functions given by the King of Italy. In that position he is under the Minister of Fine Arts, and that official is now being appealed to to restrain Mascagni from going to America this winter and giving his opera for the first time there.

"It seems that there is a law that prevents any Italian subject from disposing of any important work of art to a foreign purchaser without the sanction of the government. This law was drafted years ago to prevent impecunious Italian noblemen from selling their famous pictures to Pittsburg millionaires. Now the newspapers are trying to use this law against Mascagni, claiming that any composition by the author of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' should be considered in the light of a masterpiece. Can you beat it?

ABIDES BY HIS CONTRACT.

"Mascagni has declared his intention to abide by his contract with Liebler & Co., but all this agitation has naturally disturbed him, and retarded the completion of 'Ysobel.' So now I am on my way to Milan and Rome to see if we can't pour a little oil on this sea of trouble. As the highest theatrical authority in an international capacity I have come over armed with letters to the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs and to the American Ambassador to Italy in the hope that they will use their good offices to settle this matter amicably and not to have Mascagni worried.

"Mascagni is now in seclusion in a little place near Milan. I'm going to stick to him until he finishes that opera. The librettist, Signor Luigi Illica, is with him. Another title is 'The Rosary Abbot,' for whom the opera is written and who is studying hard there. We are holding time at the New Theatre in New York in November for the first production. As soon as I have conferred with Mascagni and Miss Farrar we will decide definitely on the date."

REAL JOCKEYS WILL RIDE IN RACE SCENE

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

"The Whip" has proved to be the most successful melodrama ever produced at Drury Lane. Its first anniversary is close at hand. On that occasion Mr. Arthur Collins, according to the Era, has invited Stanley Lupino, William Griggs, J. H. Martin and Fanny Wootton to ride in the race scene. They have all consented to do so, too. This long run of "The Whip" means that the Drury Lane melodrama will not be given until next winter, after the pantomime season is finished.

The Pall Mall states that Miss Cecilia Loftus is still in the doctor's hands. It is hoped that she will be able to return to the stage in a few weeks.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree, who was stricken with paralysis while conducting a rehearsal of "The Mountebank Maid," is progressing as well as could be expected. One leg is still paralyzed, but it is thought that in a day or two he will be removed from the nursing home in Hanover square, where he now is, to his apartments in the Queen Anne mansions.

The Rev. Harry Jones, the American "star" Young Buffalo, will begin an English tour at Stratford on September 26 in a play called "Kings of the Wild West." The cast includes real cowboys, among them Johnny Grimes and Miss Caroline Mathews, who rides astride. It is also stated that it was Miss Ellen Terry who induced Young Buffalo to come over to England. If so, it is to be hoped that the cowboys will not lasso the fashionable West End, as they seem to have had the wild notion that he meant to do.

Mr. Robertson Hall, who was speaking the title rôle of about five months with Miss Gertrude Elliott, as Miss Hall-Caine's leading man, at Drury Lane, will create the title rôle in the American production of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" at Toronto on September 26.

Miss Lily Brayton, who has been playing the part of Lady Macbeth to Mr. Ben Greet's Macbeth at the Old Vic, will appear in the same rôle at the Lyceum on October 3.

Mr. Frederick Kerr and Miss Dorothy Dorr have been re-engaged for Mr. Alexander's forthcoming production at the Globe.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

THE "German war scare" bids fair to make everybody in England a soldier. The Territorials, who have just finished their manoeuvres, which continued for several weeks, have been criticised severely in some quarters, where it seems to have been expected that these volunteers would become equal to the regulars after a few weekly drills.

As a result various agitations have been set afoot. It is proposed that citizens who will not join the Territorials should be specially taxed. Columns of correspondence in newspapers throughout England are devoted to the problem of compulsory military service.

The Boy Scouts, whose organisation extends throughout England, Wales and Scotland, are seen on practically every highway at nearly all hours of the day and night. In addition, it now is proposed to organise naval boy scouts, to watch Great Britain's coast line for any approaching enemy.

Women, too, have caught the military craze, and just to show that they are every whit as patriotic as mere men the Women's Sick and Wounded Convoy Corps has been organised. They have held manoeuvres of their own, and have been in camp for training and practice at Studland Bay, Dorset. Throughout this period of living under canvas the strictest military discipline prevailed.

Briefly, the corps is formed to tend wounded soldiers during their transfer from the field hospital to the base hospital, a period during which the wounded warrior at present is attended by comparatively imperfect organisations. Lectures were given at the camp daily, as well as demonstrations in anatomy, physiology, first aid, home and field nursing, sanitation, hygiene and prevention of disease. The drills ranged from ambulance work to signalling, laundry, cooking, demonstrations in improvising stretchers, splints and bandages, adapting buildings for hospitals and fitting vehicles for the most comfortable carriage of sick and wounded.

Members of the corps are all women who have leisure for the work. A course of special instruction will be afforded to make them familiar with the care and handling of horses which would necessarily be brought into constant use by the corps in the event of active service. The corps just at present is centred in London, but it is proposed to open branches all over Great Britain. When at work the members, whose uniform is chiefly distinguished by the mushroom helmet with the regulation chin strap, may be seen down Buckingham Gate way signalling and doing stretcher drill from five to seven o'clock any Wednesday afternoon. A real man is utilized as the "dummy" in the stretcher drill, being carried about on this support and having imaginary wounds examined and bound up with yards of bandages. The founder of the corps is Mrs. St. Clair Stobart.

15 TON ANCHOR FOR GIANT SHIP

Marvels of Mechanism Are Shown in "Hall of Ten Thousand Wheels" at London Olympia.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

"THE Hall of Ten Thousand Wheels," into which Olympia has been transformed for the Naval, Mercantile, Marine and General Machinery Exhibition, is an object lesson of the remarkable progress that has been made in all things mechanical since the last exhibition of the kind was held there three years ago.

Among the curiosities of most interest to the lay mind is the largest anchor ever made. It weighs fifteen and a half tons and has a chain of which each link weighs several hundred pounds. It is intended for the Olympic, the new giant White Star steamship, which Messrs. Harland & Wolff, of Belfast, are building. Twelve horses were required to drag it to its place in Olympia. By its side is a bar of Staffordshire wrought iron, five inches in diameter, tied by some new sort of mechanism in a true lovers' knot when the bar was cold.

CABLE A MONSTER.

A portion of a cable intended to hold a Hamburg-American steamship is close by. Every link is two feet long and weighs 200 pounds. As a contrast to this display of strength is a delicate recording instrument used on large liners which shows to a hair's breadth every motion of the vessel, even when she is hurling herself through the ocean at a speed of twenty-five knots. Another remarkable exhibit is the oxy-acetylene blowpipe, which melts a-morplate like butter, and can eat a hole in a steel safe as quickly as can a mouse in a cheese. The blowpipe is a long, thin nozzle of brass with a down-turned burner through which a jet of acetylene gas produces a white heat. A tiny spray of oxygen forced through the centre oxidises any metal the jet touches. Eight-inch steel can be cut through in half a minute.

THE DIVING EXHIBITS.

Divers in helmets and outfits which make air tubes unnecessary descend into glass fronted tanks in full view of visitors and walk under the water as comfortably as though strolling in the street. A "room of death," which is filled at intervals with dense sulphur fumes, in which no unprotected man could live for an instant, is another of the sensations of the exhibition. Every now and then a man with a patent smoke helmet enters this room and takes a seat. He could remain there for six hours without the slightest discomfort. It is this ingenious invention which has saved many lives in recent colliery disasters.

"Wireless" apparatus, Herculean lathes, which can "turn" a great gun as easily as a broomstick, and a novel instrument by which a captain in his cabin can check every turn or twist of the men at the wheel, are other marvels of the exhibition.

TO RAZE TAVERN 600 YEARS OLD

Modern Improvements Sweep Away "Ye Olde Whyte Harte," a Landmark of Ancient London.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

HISTORIC London continues to make way for modern London. The latest sacrifice to the wreckers is to be "Ye Olde Whyte Harte," which stands at the Holborn end of Drury lane and whose claim to be the oldest tavern in the metropolis has passed unchallenged. The ancient sign over the doorway of the unpretentious building bears the words "Established 1419."

Records in the British Museum tell that the "Whyte Harte" stood in Drury lane a century before a certain tournament was held by Richard II. in Smithfield in 1390. The tavern is then recorded as having stood on the edge of Mary-le-bone Forest, where roamed the wild boar and the red deer. The "Whyte Harte" appears in a plan of London published in 1560, in Rowland Dobbe's "History of St. Giles-in-the-Fields," published in 1639, there is a passage referring to the ancient deed by which old St. Giles' Hospital made an exchange of estates to King Henry VIII. The property is described as "one messuage called the 'Whyte Harte,' with eighteen acres of pasture, as the same messuage belonging. It stood at the N. E. corner of Aldwych at Holborn end of Drury Lane, and was an inn as early as 1756 (see View of London, 1766) and Strype's Stow, in whose plan it is shown under the name of the 'Whyte Harte,' 1720."

Nell Gwynn was born in the vicinity, while Jack Sheppard and Jonathan Wild were one time residents in the neighborhood. Hogarth, as an adjoining shareholder, duly established his favorite academy for training Cits and, it being remembered, lived in Drayton Street "the second house from the corner of Broad Street." The Rev. Laurence Sterne, in Shandy-ana and his pleasantries, is known to have visited the "Whyte Harte" in 1760, and it is recorded that it was the favorite resort of the two Foresters. The terrible Plague from Holland in 1664 raged, inevitably.

They are now at the head of the Zambesi river, and will proceed to Salisbury. They will visit the Victoria Falls and Bulawayo, and will return to England by way of the Cape.

NO GROG TUB FOR CANADIAN FLEET

Dominion Navy as Far as Official Dietary Is Concerned To Be on Teetotal Lines.

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

MARKING the inauguration of a Canadian fleet, the cruiser Niobe has been transferred to the Canadian government and the Rainbow already has arrived at Halifax after her voyage from British home waters. But what has chiefly aroused discussion among the officers and men of Britain's fleets has been the fact that the Rainbow departed for her new field of service without having a "grog-tub" for the benefit of the crew. The Dominion Navy, so far as its official dietary is concerned, is to be run on teetotal lines.

Curiously enough this departure from British custom appears to have occasioned no regret among the men who have volunteered for service in the Niobe and Rainbow. They are represented as bidding goodby to that time honored institution, the "grog tub," without sorrow. Speculation is rife as to what may be the result of this example set by the Dominion.

VICAR RAPS MOTOR GARB OF WOMEN

(Special Dispatch.)
London, Saturday.

Seaside dress and holiday attire in general as it has been worn this summer has attracted the caustic comment of the Rev. W. J. Stothert, vicar of Christchurch, Isle of Wight.

"While many people we have enjoyed the presence of the summer visitors, whose visit to the Wight engenders their custom," he says in his denunciation of "the devices they employ to lure the English girl was a most attractive creature. Look at Landor's goddess in the old costumes of Greece—gaily, lightly and airily, they used a shadowy to hint at, but not to conceal charms to be displayed as in a vision of grace. With the male these ideals were the rule and not under our clime.

"On this island the climate is much of the cloudy and rainy kind, there has to be a close and grey-toned veil of fact; and the fashionable lady would think there was something unfeminine about her if she appeared in the streets of London or anywhere else without the protection of a heap of useless clothing. Hence the ungainly motor garb and the exaggerated hat, which is a perfect abomination. Mrs. John Bruce Dodd
Founder of Fathers' Day.

MRS. JOHN BRUCE DODD.

No longer will "mother's day" have to do double duty in honor of mothers and fathers in Spokane, for Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Washington state set apart a certain Sunday (last June 19) to celebrate father's day. On this Sunday a rose was worn by all persons in sympathy with the movement, and in the churches there were appropriate sermons, such as "The Influence of Father," in which one pastor explained that the influence of the father should be as great as the mother.

Fathers' day is likely to be observed in all the states of the Union next year, and as the matter now stands the third Sunday in June has been selected as the day of commemoration.

The "Chanteeler" Bow.

The following protest against subjecting birds to the whim of fashion appeared recently in a New York city daily:

"Yesterday I had occasion to visit one of the department stores and saw displayed for sale 'something new' in ladies' neckwear'—the 'Chanteeler' bow, the name evidently suggested by Rostand's animal play. A technical description of this silken, fluted creation is quite beyond my knowledge of such matters, but what I did understand was the little brown bird's head which stood out from the center of the bow. I could hardly believe my eyes, and I looked again to make sure that it was nothing less than the head of that world famous songster the European skylark.

"Hail to thee, blythe spirit
(Bird thou never wert)
That from heaven or near it
Pourest thy full heart.

"Shelley's lines ran mockingly through my head as I looked at that pathetic tiny bunch of brown feathers, with its staring glass eyes and shrivelled bill, all that was left of the most joy giving bird that ever sprinkled the air with its song.

"And the price of it, bow and all, was 50 cents—in another store it was 40—and for a title, then, of this paltry sum there had been destroyed such beauty, such poetry, such joy, as could not be replaced by a syndicate of billionaires. No bird in the world perhaps has inspired so many poets. The 'British Shepherd' sang:

"Bird of the wilderness,
Blythesome and symbolless,
Sweet be thy matin o'er moorland and lea.

"And here we find the mummied head of the tweest little bird for sale on a piece of cheap ribbon in the crush and hubbub of department stores. Could degradation be carried further? And there were scores of such bows, each bearing the head of a skylark.

"Appeals to sentiment are good when there is any sentiment to appeal to, but think of trying to appeal to the sentiment of a woman who will wear a 'Chanteeler bow! She wouldn't understand your language. If we are to preserve our birds we must have more good, farreaching laws and see that they are enforced. The Audubon societies know what laws are needed and know how to drag them up and present them. Those societies are working for us. Let us stand behind them and back them up."

Venice Fashions.

The ladies of Venice have formed a league to discourage Paris fashions and bring back the mediaeval Italian styles. They hold that the vices of a Venetian woman attired in the latest Paris creation and seated in a gondola in one of the picturesque canals of the city is a sight so ridiculous as to become pathetic. Headed by Signora Rosa Giacosi, the novelist, these delegates of Venice have started a crusade that promises to bring masquerade styles back to Italy. Fortunately for Paris, American women do not care for our aboriginal costumes.

How to Water Plants When Away.

House plants and ferns kept well watered during a three weeks' absence of the householder, according to an ingenious English device. Set a bowl of water well above the level of the plant or fern to be watered by means of a box or a pile of books. Twist several strands of cotton—darning wool together or braid them in form of a long wick and soak them in water. Drop one end of the wick reaching to the bottom of the bowl and the other hangs over the plant's pot. A steady drip will continue until the bowl is emptied.

ORDER OF "WAR CHIEF"

CANADA HAS A KNIGHTHOOD THAT IS UNIQUE.

Many Notable Men Have Proudly Worn the Distinction of Having Been Made Chiefs of the Six Nations Indians, Including King Edward, King George, the Duke of Connaught and Others.

A few weeks ago Sir Henry Pellatt was made a chief of the Six Nations at the Q.O.R. reunion and pageant. More recently the honor was conferred on Count de Lesseps, the daring French aviator.

Apart from the picturesqueness of the ceremony it is one that by reason of its associations that makes it an honor comparable to the decorations of European countries.

The Indians do not choose carelessly, and among their honorary chieftains are men in the list of whose names no man need be ashamed to find himself enrolled.

It may not be generally known that His Majesty King George V. is entitled to wear the buckskin coat, the moccasins, and the flowing plumes of an Indian chief. At the Council of the Six Nations of Indians at Brantford, Ontario, about a year ago, a letter was read from King George, then Prince of Wales, acknowledging the receipt of an address appointing him one of the war chiefs of the Mohawk nation. The letter ran as follows:

"I am glad to learn that the Six Nations are just as loyal to the British cause and British institutions as their forefathers were in the past, and that they are just as willing to take up arms in defence of the British Empire as their forefathers were. I have no doubt that should the occasion arise for the British Crown to demand similar services from the Nations in the future, they would not fail to maintain worthily the glorious traditions bequeathed to them by their ancestors."

Our late monarch, King Edward, was raised to the honor of chieftainship of the redskins when he was Prince of Wales. His Majesty's Indian name was almost unpronounceable, but in English it signified "Son of the Great White Mother." Another royal Indian chief, who can carry unquestioned in any part of the world both tomahawk and scalping knife, is the Duke of Connaught.

Perhaps the most famous Mohawk war chief among the "palefaces" is Mr. Percy Wood, the well-known sculptor. As head of the Turtle Clan of the Upper Mohawks he bears the title of Rah-rih-wa-pas-du, which, translated, means "The Lasting One." Mr. Wood was raised to this honor through a monument. In the days when the whites and the redskins were about to go to war for the possession of land which the redskins considered their property, a Mohawk chief, called Thayendanegea, fooled the Grand River at great risk, and the city which grew up on the borderland of the Indian reservation which he had saved by his courage was named in his honor. The short name for Thayendanegea is Brant, and the city was named Brantford.

Many years later Mr. Percy Wood was commissioned by the British Government to go to Canada and erect there a monument in honor of Thayendanegea and the tribes of Mohawks, Senecas, Onondogs, Tuscaroro, Oneida, and Cayuga, representing the Six Nations. As Thayendanegea was chief of the Six Nations when the American Colonies threw off the English yoke, it was thought proper that he should occupy the place of honor on the summit of the monument. It took Mr. Wood three years to complete the monument, and when it was unveiled the descendants of the Six Nations Indians were so pleased with it that they there and then made the sculptor chief of the Turtle Clan of the Upper Mohawks, he being christened Chief Rah-rih-wa-pas-du in the usual Indian manner, and presented with a string of wampum, war-paints, tomahawks, scalping-knife, shields and robes.

Mr. Wood is very proud of his moccasins and plumes, and has worn them on many notable occasions. Being invited to witness the Diamond Jubilee procession in 1897, Mr. Wood turned up at the grand stand which had been specially erected for distinguished visitors in all the glory of an Indian chief.

Mr. Robert Barr, the novelist, accompanied the Canadian Minister to the hunting grounds of the Iroquois Indians, and the redskins were so pleased with him that they made him one of their chieftains, giving him the title of the "White Raven."

Conventions of Victoria.

To be the convention city of the coast, is Victoria's ambition. The Outpost City of the Empire has just made a bold bid for the most important meeting which has yet appeared on the interests of drifting Canadawards this year. The invitation signed by the mayor, backed by the Board of Trade, the Vancouver Island Development League, and the Canadian Club, has been duly forwarded to the American Library Association. President Carnegie's interests and other big bodies whose fraternity visit Toronto. These latter don't do a city any harm. Generally there is a few days in the old town tonight—music, dancing, sight-seeing and speeches, but the difference is not altogether trivial. When the last committeeman has packed away his badge there still remains new ideas permeating through the deserted hospital hall. Maybe some citizens will have a flip at the pipes they never felt before. The spell of the American Library Association will be purely literary; six hundred men of letters discussing the architecture of Ontario libraries and the making of the books, perhaps on the side getting inspiration for the coming—exciting Spring Chaunt in the evening.—Canadian Courier.

Do your baking with flour made exclusively of the HIGH-GRADE constituents of the HARD-WHEAT berry

Have you ever baked with flour made exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the hard wheat berry? If you haven't, now is the time to try PURITY Flour.

Only the cream of the Manitoba hard wheat—the best wheat in the world—is used for PURITY Flour. More than that, only a portion of the flour milled from this wheat goes into the sacks and barrels branded PURITY.

PURITY Flour consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents or portions of the Manitoba hard wheat berry.

Every wheat berry has both low-grade and high-grade constituents which are separated during our process of milling. So exact is our process that it entirely eliminates all the low-grade portions from the flour which is finally branded PURITY.

The greater strength of PURITY Flour makes it go farther in the baking. With it you can make more loaves to the sack or barrel than you have ever succeeded in doing before. The loaves will be more nutritious, too, because they contain the high-quality gluten, starch, phosphates and other muscle-building and blood-enriching elements of the hard wheat berry.

Naturally flour that consists exclusively of the high-grade constituents of the best hard wheat has greater strength and nutriment, superior color, more delicate flavor.

If you'll just try to realize fully what it means to your cooking-reputation you'll soon be using PURITY Flour.

Of course, PURITY Flour will cost you a few cents more than lower-grade hard wheat flour or soft wheat flour.

But PURITY is very economical because it makes "More bread and better bread." The cost per loaf is no more than when using weaker flour, and the food value is much greater.

Tell your grocer you are in a hurry to try PURITY Flour. He will supply you promptly.

When you see the batch of beautiful snow-white loaves, with their soft, evenly-textured crumb and dainty golden-brown crust, you'll be proud of your success with PURITY Flour. When you taste and enjoy the superb flavor of such high-class bread you'll be prouder still.

If you don't want to buy a large sack or barrel, you can get a small bag. PURITY is packed in 7, 14, 24, 49 and 98 pound sacks. Also in barrels and half-barrels.

Make certain the PURITY trade-mark is on the sack or barrel you buy, for that is your guide to the strong, reliable, high-quality flour that makes

"More bread & better bread"

Miscegenous.

When Meisel wrote his charming rhyme
He never made the least mistake
Of laying off in summer time.
But smote right on without a break,
For he had heard by hap and fate
The setting of Daly's another hard
Getting into his string again,
And knew under that it was hard.

Beside the Thracian chord he set
With hearing them at most a time
Would carry to meet a soft
Sympathetic chord that rhyme.
Set to the soft music daily smile,
The Master drew perfect dues.
And Heller names had type the while,
Quite understanding best it was.

Household Hints.

If you get a scratch on your hardwood furniture, rub it with salt butter.

Put a few drops of ammonia on a piece of bread and rub over your gilt frames. They will look like new.

Do not put salt in cut glass fruit dishes. Milk cloudy glass so that its original brilliancy cannot be restored.

Is it the Hair or the Face that makes the Woman?

If you think it is the face, take another look at the two heads pictured here. One shows a girl which the most critical would pronounce beautiful.

While her features are fairly perfect her greatest charm lies in a mass of fine lustrous hair. The opposite picture is identical as to features and other detail except that the wealth of hair is wanting.

Both of these ladies would attract attention anywhere but each for a different reason, one on account of her superb beauty and the other on account of her comical appearance.

The hair makes all the difference. woman loses her good looks in exact proportion as she loses her hair.

Newbro's Herpicide Saves the Hair

There is nothing which is so destructive to the hair as dandruff.

This annoying trouble to which everyone is more or less exposed is due to the working of an invisible growth or microbe called the Dandruff Germ.

It robs the hair of the snap and luster of health, burrows down into the follicle and eventually loosens the hair, allowing it to fall out.
Newbro's Herpicide applied regularly and intelligently kills this germ, keeps the scalp clean and hair healthy.

Falling hair is thus prevented and, if the hair follicles have not become atrophied, a new growth of hair may be anticipated.

The life and luster of Herpicide hair is beautiful to see, is unmistakable.

An abundance of fluffy, glittering hair is woman's chiefest beauty and to permit its needless destruction is unpardonable.

SIRES AND SONS.

Thomas A. Edison started life as a newsboy on the Grand Trunk railroad.

John Clarke of Portland, Me., is believed to be the only living survivor of the crew of 400 on the famous Great Eastern.

Earl Grey, the governor general of Canada, will make an expedition into the foreign fastnesses of his dominions this fall and will be the first ruler of Canada to see Hudson bay.

H. W. Child, who owns and runs the hotels and stages in the Yellowstone park, is a great judge of horses and owns 1,200 or 1,500 of them.

Robert Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln, has had a distinguished and unreproachable career, having served on Grant's staff during the war, been United States ambassador to Great Britain and secretary of war under Garfield. Aside from these twelve years of public life, his time has been devoted entirely to commercial interests in Chicago.

Captain H. H. Pentecost, commander of the Cunard liner Saxonia, has retired from the company's service. Captain Pentecost has had a remarkable and varied career, and his escapes from death have been many and thrilling. Captain Pentecost, who is now in the prime of life, recently married an American woman and intends to make his future home in this country.

The Writers.

G. K. Chesterton is to venture into the field where Conan Doyle is supreme. He will write a series of detective stories.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, the novelist, is preparing to come to America for a visit to the home of his American wife, near Boston, and to confer with his publishers, Little, Brown & Co.

Before Byron was sent to Harrow he was for a time a pupil of the grammar school in Aberdeen. Near that school a bronze statue of the poet has just been erected. The money for it was raised by public subscription.

Chatlis Lemonnier, the leading novelist of Belgium, the author of fifty books, has written stories of war, of nature, of sex, of the labor struggle, that won the admiration of Flaubert and Maupassant a generation ago and are still regarded as supreme in their own field.

Current Comment.

A power which, like Nicaragua, can buy a converted yacht and call it a navy must at least be credited with a vivid imagination.—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

After all, the bobble skirt may be a good thing. So long as women are the slaves of fashion they will not become the masters of men. Cheer up, brethren!—Washington Post.

That one who prays for another can be accused for practising medicine illegally is a feature of medical jurisprudence which is causing considerable comment among laymen. A recent suit in New York city is an example of the contention, and if the case is won by the complainants its effects are likely to be widespread.—New York Tribune.

No Wonder.

The ancients thought the world was flat;
I'm really not surprised at that;
We'd find it flat, I dare to say,
If we were living in their day.
Just think, they had no autos then,
No show girls to delight the men,
No pipes to smoke and no cigars,
No cocktails served at handsome bars,
No bridge to play and no pink teas,
No liners speeding o'er the seas,
No yellow journals and no flats,
No women's monstrous picture hats,
No tariff problem to attack,
No gowns that button up the back,
No end seat hogs with manners rude,
No monkeying with the price of food,
No ice bills, no cold storage eggs,
No banko steerers and no yeggs,
No trolley cars with clang and whiz,
No Teddy to keep things astir—
Say, is it any wonder that
The ancients thought the world was flat?
—Vancouver Province.

The Other Extreme.

"Well," sighs the man with the wash tie, "now that the aeroplane is becoming popular the women won't spend so much money for automobile hats and veils."

"No," growls the man with the ingrowing mustache, "but they'll blow in just as much on silk stockings and high heeled shoes."—Judge.

The After Dinner Speaker.

Oh, the soups I have drunk and the fish I have devoured,
The capons and the scallops and clams,
The sherbet and junk and the tenderloins, browned,
The ventres, chickens and hams,
The asparagus tips and the vegetable slaw,
The various dishes of yore,
The bumblebees' hips and the dromedary ham,
The pastry and Neufchatel cheese!
Oh, the junk that I ate and the times and the dates
I've blissfully carried a "bun,"
Though I knew she would walk and quit
I grant unplain—
Thank heaven the season is done!
—Kansas City Star.

Giving Him a Line.

"Are you good at measurements?" asked Fat.

"I am that!" said Fat quickly.

"Then could you tell me how many shirts I could get out of a yard?" said Pat.

"Sure," said Fat, "that depends on whom you get me!"—Baltimore American.

Stirrups.

Stirrups were unknown to the ancients. Along the roads there were placed stands to enable the horsemen to mount. Where such stones were not to be found they built up upon their horses as best they could. Stirrups were used to some extent in the fifth century, but were not generally in use in the eighth century.

Recent Inventions.

The inventor of an air buffer for locomotives, recently patented, claims it will prevent a serious wreck in the event of a collision.

A German inventor has designed an electro-magnetic drill, two magnets holding it against the metal to be bored while a motor drives the drill.

A convertible wagon bed which can be changed into sixteen different kinds of bodies for as many uses about a farm without adding to or taking from it a single piece has been invented.

Science Sittings.

Paper may be made a good electrical conductor by impregnating it with carbon.

Russian and Dutch scientists are advancing the theory that there is vegetation on Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune.

Lightning flashes vary in thickness, but one photographed recently by Herr Rumker of Hamburg observatory was estimated by him to be only one-fifth of an inch.

Usury Extraordinary.

Moneylending is sometimes a profitable business, but not to the borrower. A Birmingham man, who has found it necessary to seek court protection, explains that he borrowed $40 four years ago, has repaid $160, and still owes $44.

No Danger of That.

Mrs. Stubbs—John, no true man will smoke up his wife's curtains. Mr. Stubbs—I should say not. Anybody that smokes curtains would be a freak. I prefer cigars.—Chicago News.

Those who can command themselves command others.—Shakespeare.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.

Career of Robespierre, Head of the Revolutionary Tribunal.

One of the most striking figures in the French revolution was Maximilien Robespierre, who was born on May 6, 1758. He was the head and shoulders of the French revolution, frequently remaining in the background, however, leaving the work of carrying out his plans with Danton and Marat.

There had been turbulent political times in France for several years. The king had made repeated concessions to the Republicans, while he cherished schemes for escaping their control, but each month added to his humiliations and to the boldness of his enemies. Finally in September, 1792, the national convention was organized the monarchy abolished, and France was declared a republic.

The convention was divided into two parties, bitterly hostile to each other, one called the "Mountain party" and the other the "Girondists." Of the former the leaders were Robespierre, Danton and Marat, noted for their wickedness and cruelty. One of the most eminent of the Girondists was Vergniaud, distinguished for his eloquence.

The Mountain party having triumphed in the convention, the Girondist leaders were guillotined. The reign of terror was then inaugurated, during which the revolutionary tribunal, controlled by Robespierre, caused thousands to be seized and hurried to the guillotine. Among these victims was the unfortunate Marie Antoinette (October, 1793).

Alison in his "History of Europe" says: "Night and day the cars incessantly discharged victims into the prison. Weeping mothers and trembling orphans were thrust in without mercy with the brave and the powerful. The young, the beautiful, the unfortunate, seemed in a peculiar manner the prey of the assassins. Fifteen only were at first placed on the chariot, but their number was soon augmented to thirty and gradually rose to eighty persons who daily went forth to the place of execution.

When the fall of Robespierre put a stop to the murders arrangements had been made for increasing it to 150. An immense aqueduct to remove the gore had been dug as far as the Place St. Antoine, and four men were daily employed in emptying the blood of the victims into that reservoir.

The cruel and wicked men concerned in these atrocities almost invariably met with a violent death. Marat was assassinated by Charlotte Corday. The faction of Robespierre, triumphing over that of Danton, caused him and his adherents to be guillotined, and a few months afterward this dreadful period closed by the execution of Robespierre himself in 1794.

When Robespierre ascended the fatal car to go to his death his head was enveloped in a bloody cloth, his color was livid and his eyes sunk. When the procession came opposite his house it stopped, and a group of women danced around the bier of him whose chariot wheels they would have dragged the day before over a thousand victims. Robespierre mounted the scaffold last, and the moment his head fell the applause was tremendous. In some cases the event was announced to the prisoners by the waving of handkerchiefs from the tops of houses.

Didn't Want It Flattened.

This story is told of Jerome K. Jerome, the humorist. Returning from abroad one time, he fell into good company, with the exception of one man, who was what is known as "a walking encyclopedia." This man persisted in giving all sorts of information, much to the annoyance of Mr. Jerome and others. One morning, as the travelers leaned over the rail, admiring the rising sun, the man with the information turned to them and said almost solemnly:

"Gentlemen, if the earth were flattened out the sea would be two miles deep over the whole world."

Mr. Jerome turned around, seemingly stunned. Then he grew indignant, and, walking over to the other man, he said, shaking his finger menacingly:

"Look here, man, if you catch any fellow trying to flatten out the earth about him on the spot. I can't swim."—Philadelphia Times.

Her Sweeping Abilities.

Mrs. Neurich—Did you notice how grandly our daughter swept into the room at Mrs. Puppson's reception last night?

Neurich—Sure I did! When it comes to sweeping into a room Mamie wins in a walk. But when it comes to sweeping out a room she goes lame.

Wanted It Plain.

Mrs. Youngwife—I want to get some salad. Dealer—Yes'm. How many heads? Mrs. Youngwife—Oh, goodness! I thought you took the heads off. I just want plain chicken salad.

Baby Nearly Died with Itching Rash

Mrs. M. C. Maitland, of Jasper, Ont., tells in the following letter of her child's remarkable cure by the Cuticura Remedies:

"When my boy was about three months old his head broke out with a rash which was very itchy and ran a watery fluid. We tried everything we could but he got worse all the time, till it spread to his arms, legs and then to his entire body. He got so bad that he came near dying. The rash would itch so that he would scratch till the blood ran and a thin yellowish stuff would be all over his pillow in the morning. I had to put mittens on his hands to prevent him tearing his skin. He was almost a skeleton and his little hands were thin like claws.

"He was bad about eight months when we tried Cuticura Remedies. I had him laid him down in his cradle in the day-time for a long while. I washed him with Cuticura Soap and put on one application of Cuticura Ointment and he was so soothed that he could sleep. You don't know how glad I was he felt better. I took one box of Cuticura Ointment and pretty near one cake of Cuticura Soap to cure him. I think our boy would have died but for the Cuticura Remedies and I shall always remain a firm friend of them. He was cured more than twenty years ago and there has been no return of the trouble."

(Signed) Mrs. M. C. Maitland, Jasper, Ont.

No more convincing proof of the efficacy and economy of the Cuticura Remedies could be given. As in this instance a single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, U.S.A. Send for free Cuticura Booklet on skin and scalp diseases.

Unconscious Humor.

Mark Twain, as an example of unconscious humor, used to quote a Hartford woman who said one day in the late spring:

"My husband is the dearest fellow.

"'Jim,' I said to him this morning, 'are you very hard up just now?'

"'I certainly am hard up,' he replied soberly. 'This high cost of living is terrible. I don't know what I'm going to do.'

"'Then, Jim,' said I, 'I'll give up all thought of going to the country for July and August this year.'

"But the dear fellow's face changed, and he said:

"'Indeed, then, you won't, darling. I thought you wanted to buy a hat with an aigret or some such foolishness. No, no, my darling! Jim can always find the money to let his dear little wife go to the country."—Washington Star.

Looking For "the Crazy Ones."

A woman got off a Darby car at Thirty-fourth street and Woodland avenue the other day, entered the university campus and started toward College hall, walking with brisk determination, yet looking wonderingly about her the while.

In front of the library a university youth met her, and she accosted him quickly.

"Young man," she said, "will you please tell me where they keep the crazy ones?"

"Wh-what?" stammered the college man.

She repeated her question in somewhat different form.

"I want the insane department," she said. "I have a friend who is a nurse there. I thought I'd make her a little visit. Isn't this the Philadelphia hospital?"—Philadelphia Times.

The New Page.

"Look here, Wilkins," said a doctor to his boy in bottoms, whom he had occasion to reprimand, "I can't stand any more of this nonsense. You'll have to turn over a fresh leaf."

"All right, sir," was the witty response; "you shan't complain of me again, sir. I'll be an entirely new page."—London Opinion.

All on One Side.

"I am told your bride is very pretty," said Miss Peppery.

"Yes, indeed!" replied Mr. Coo Seet. "Several of the guests at the ceremony were pleased to call it a 'wedding of beauty and brains.'"

"Well, well! She must be a remarkable woman! That's an unusual combination in one person."

In the Stilly Night.

"What is it?" the druggist sleepily inquired from his bedroom window.

"This ish drug store, ain't it?" asked the man who had rung the night bell.

"Yes. What do you want?"

"Want to look in your city directory minute an' shee where I live."—Philadelphia Ledger.

SUNDAY AT THE COTTAGE.

Sunday at the cottage,
Where the skies are blue above—
It's the day that all the week time
You are idly dreaming of.
It's the day of rest and loafing
Underneath the shady trees,
When you'll stretch out in the hammock
And just woo the cooling breeze.

So the poet and the dreamer
Picture Sunday at the lake,
But the restful cottage Sunday
Is a horrible mistake,
For there's some one in the hammock,
And there's some one in the chair,
There's some one in the shady spots
And some one everywhere.

From the city they come rushing
At the very break of day.
Some are asked and some unbidden,
But they're with you anyway.
You must teach the children swimming,
Take the men on fishing trips,
Take the women folks out rowing,
Tell the names of passing ships,

Borrow bathing suits from neighbors,
Go for extra food supplies,
Help dear wife with the cooking,
Clear the dining room of flies,
And you never reach the hammock,
And you never reach a chair,
For you're on the jump on Sunday
Every minute they are there.

And at last when, fagged and weary,
You have put them on the car
And you draw a breath refreshing,
For alone once more you are,
You just mutter something dreadful,
Tell your wife you're nearly dead,
Then you help her with the dishes,
And you tumble into bed.

—Detroit Free Press.

On Account of Darkness.

Two baseball teams which were made up of negro players exhibited a great contest of the national game before a large [illegible] on the open lots.

The score stood 2 to 2 in the eighth inning. Two men were on bases, two players out, when the pitcher of one of the nines walloped the ball to mid-center. He sprinted around the bags as if in pursuit of a dozen chickens.

The center fielder of the opposing team shot the ball with terrific speed toward the fourth station, and as the runner was about to cross the plate the catcher toted him with the horsehide. The negro umpire shouted at the top of his voice:

"De runner am safe!" and as the word "safe" died away the many spectators began to crowd around the umpire.

"What's dat?" shouted one. "You done be blin'!" yelled another, and a few other remarks followed. The man argued for awhile, and when the entire mob was crowded around him the umpire's voice rang out in loud tones:

"Game's called on account of darkness!"—Philadelphia Times.

A Kneeling Proposition.

"Pony" Moore, the once famous minstrel, is dead at the age of eighty. He was one of the last of his kind.

"Moore," said a veteran Chicago manager, "used to make up his own jokes. Once when he played here he had his toes run over and limped on that night with a foot that resembled a white pillow.

"'Ah's en tendah hoofed as Lisa Johnsing,' he said to the audience, with a chuckle. 'Yo' know 'bout Lisa? Young Calhoun White, he sez to her, proposin':

"I FEEL IT MY DUTY

To Give You a Statement In Regard To Fruit-a-tives'"

HARDWICKE, MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world at large this unsolicited statement in respect to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.

I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by New Brunswick's 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-men. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefits derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices.

COIFFURE STYLES.

A Stunning Creation Seen at Paris Theater.

A PICTURESQUE HAIR ARRANGEMENT.

Simplicity is the keynote of good hairdressing for most occasions, but in the evening coiffure there is much license allowed. In fact, one may be as picturesque in the matter of arranging one's hair as the costume and face will stand.

For the girl who goes in for fanciful effects the illustration showing a smart style of hairdressing worn at a Paris theater recently may offer several valuable suggestions.

The Secret of the Neat Girl.

We all have among our acquaintances the girl who, without being in the least good looking, always manages to look neat and well dressed.

Perhaps she has only a small dress allowance, and whenever you happen to meet her she looks smart and attractive, while other girls, with twice the money at their command, too often look shabby and dowdy.

What is the neat girl's secret? Nothing more or less than taking care of her clothes. She has a place for everything and everything is kept in its place. Her ribbons, gloves, handkerchiefs, veils, etc., are not all huddled together in one drawer; neither do they lie about on the tables and chairs until they are wanted. Every article of apparel is put away with the most scrupulous care, first being dusted, shaken or mended, as the case may be.

There is a great difference, too, in the way in which girls put on their clothes, and very often a girl dressed in a shirt waist and plain skirt will look twice as neat as one clad in an expensive gown, the reason being simply and solely this—the one has put her dress on anyhow, the other has taken care that all shall be neat and fresh.

It is the duty of all parents to see that their children are taught from their babyhood to take proper care of their wearing apparel, for the child who lets her clothes drop off her and lie in a heap on the floor invariably grows into the careless, untidy woman with whom we are so familiar.

Recent Inventions.

By pressing a button behind the counter a new electrical thief catcher for stores locks all doors and rings a bell in the street.

To prevent the theft of an automobile a lock has been patented which, inserted in a gear shifting quadrant, prevents the lever being moved.

A double frying pan, hinged in the center, has been patented by an Iowa man so that two articles can be cooked at once and to save space by folding it when not in use.

Ordered to Hospital

FOR OPERATION FOR ACUTE INDIGESTION—DID NOT GO AND WAS CURED BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

A medicine that will save one from a surgical operation must be worth while.

The doctors seem to have made the common mistake of dosing the stomach when the real source of trouble was with the liver and kidneys. Anyway Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills made a complete cure and here is the record:

Mrs. F. O. Bacon, Baldwin's Mills, Que., writes: "I was very sick and the doctors said I must go to the hospital for a surgical operation. I had acute indigestion and the liver and kidneys did not act. I did not want to undergo an operation so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and have used them ever since. I am feeling well now and doing my own work for a family of seven. I think there is no equal for acute indigestion and liver and kidney troubles such as I had and they and nothing else made me well again. There is no medicine I like half so well, for this did wonders for me."

The real serious cause of indigestion almost always have their location in the bowels and can only be reached by making the liver and kidneys active. No medicine regulates the liver, kidneys and bowels so surely and so promptly as do Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson Bates & Co., Toronto. Do not be satisfied with a substitute as you will be disappointed.

"Black Bart," Road Agent.

Charles E. Bolles, known to fame as "Black Bart," was incomparably the most conspicuous character in the history of western stage robbers. From 1875 to 1883 "Black Bart" is known to have committed twenty-seven stage robberies single handed. Northern California stage drivers stood in constant fear of this unique desperado. On various occasions the drivers were able to give a good description of his figure, hair, feet and hands, yet no clew to his actual identity was gained during the eight years of his stage robbing career. He was finally betrayed by a laundry mark on a cuff which had dropped from his wrist when opening a treasure box which he had taken from a Wells Fargo stage in San Joaquin valley. When he was finally captured in San Francisco the detectives were amazed to find the famous "Black Bart" a slight, quiet mannered man of fifty-five, familiar in face to all the San Francisco detectives. He had for years frequented a little restaurant near police headquarters where many of the detectives dined.—W. C. Jenkins in National Magazine.

Got It at Last.

It is told of a distinguished professor of history that, in an address before a woman's club on "Obscure Heroes of the French Revolution," he had reached the point where one of them, nobly resolved to essay the rescue of a friend doomed to the guillotine, sought a parting interview with his sweetheart before making the almost hopeless attempt. The professor had a moving voice and was eloquent. The assembly of women, many of them already near tears, hung breathless upon his words.

"Biddy, diddy," said he pathetically, then coughed slightly and went back. "Hiddy biddy"— Something was evidently amiss. He tried again.

"Biddy hiddy diddy doo."

By this time the ladies looked puzzled and the orator desperate. Drawing a long breath and speaking with painful deliberation, he at length conquered the elusive syllables and said: "Did he bid adieu?"—Youth's Companion.

black patent leather chapeaux which all summer have done service as outing headgear.

The hat seen in the cut is of this material in one of the modish shapes of the season. The sole trimming consists of two black and one white uncut ostrich pompons.

Use For Samples.

Samples of colored silk embroideries and cambric or lawn patterns, as well, make effective covers for buttons, when the embroidery figure is small and complete. These samples are often for sale in the shops. When two or more large buttons are to be used on a suit, these samples are specially useful. They may also be turned to account in making straps to go across a lace vest or cuff, or to finish the line of a vest. Larger pieces will cover a buckle for a hat or dress. The Persian pieces are being picked out by discriminating buyers.

Colors Her Tongue.

Mlle. Polaire, the Parisian actress who has won fame as the homeliest woman in the world, with her wasp waist and big mouth and feet, has such a liking for cosmetics that even her tongue and gums are colored, while her face is made to look as white as possible. With her dark hair and eyes it is a combination curious and fascinating.

Marengo survived Napoleon nine years.

An Early Wall Paper.

On preparing a room in Bradbourne Hall, Derbyshire, in 1882, I found, partly covered by an old oak cupboard, considerable remains of quite early eighteenth century wall paper, of pale green tint, with a flowing pattern in darker color on it. This paper was made in squares of about twenty inches, and I was able to rescue two or more complete pieces. It had been printed on rather thick paper from woodcut blocks, and each square was nailed up with coarse iron tacks about one and a half inches apart, each tack being run through squares or washers of brown leather, so that both tack heads and washers showed all around each square of paper. It is possible that this wall paper was of late seventeenth century date. Bradbourne Hall, in the lower peak, is a picturesque house, almost unaltered, of the time of James I., having been then fashioned from the canonical house of the Augustins of Dunstable. It was just the place—"far from the madding crowd"—where curious details of domestic decorations would survive.—London Notes and Queries.

The Cynic's Point of View.

Of course we all like to know that our enemies are vulnerable, but it is only the cynical elect who can appreciate with fine epicurean fastidiousness the glorious revelation that their friends are human after all. And it is not only the weakness of those near and dear to us, but their misfortunes and annoyances, which give a thrill of illicit joy to those honest contortionists who can look in their own hearts. I once heard a young mother say that there was only one thing which gave her greater pleasure than hearing that the children of her friends were sick and that was to hear that they were bad. No one but a brom-idiot (to borrow the excellent root with which Mr Gelett Burgess has enriched us) would think of condemning this young woman for being malicious or unkind. Misery is not the only human quality that loves company. Some of her distant relatives—Anxiety, Discouragement, Annoyance—are equally sociable.—Atlantic.

Overfatigue.

Overfatigue lessens vitality and in consequence leaves the system more liable to fall a prey to any disease germs with which it comes in contact.

Boils.

Boils come from the staphylococcus pyogenes aureus and are very common in people with Bright's disease, diabetes, gout, tuberculosis and disorders of digestion and often appear after severe fevers. Boils are commonest in the spring, and sometimes epidemics of boils run through hospitals, jails, barracks and asylums.

THE PILLAR OF LIGHT

fear which she, too, would fain deny.

They were perched so high above the sea that the dancing hillocks of green water could not wholly obscure the stoutly built craft which bobbed into startling prominence round the stern of the tender.

"It is, it is!" shrieked Enid. Look, Connie! There is Jack kneeling in the bow. Oh, dear! oh, dear! Is he mad? Why don't they stop him? I cannot bear to look. Connie, tell me—shall I see him drowned before my eyes?"

The girl was distraught, and her sister was in little better plight. Fascinated, speechless, clinging to each other like panic-stricken children, they followed the leaping boat with the glassy stare of those who gaze, open-eyed, at remorseless death.

They scarce understood what was toward.

As the boat, a strong craft, yet such a mere speck of staunch life in the tumbling seas, was steadily impelled nearer, they saw the tug lurch ahead of the other vessels until a line was thrown and caught by Stanhope, who instantly fastened it round his waist. The rowers wore cork jackets, but he was quite unprotected. Bareheaded, with his well-knit limbs shielded only by a jersey, loose-fitting trousers and canvas shoes, he had declined to hamper his freedom of movement with the cumbrous equipment so essential for anyone who might be cast adrift in that dreadful sea.

The girls, even in their dumb agony, were dully conscious of a scurry of feet up and down the stairs. What did it matter? They paid heed to naught save the advancing boat, now deep in the trough of a wave, now perched precariously on a lofty crest. Whoever the rowers were, they trusted wholly to the instructions given by the gallant youth who peered so boldly into the wilderness ahead. The flying foam and high-tossed spray gave to the lighthouse the semblance of alternately lifting and lowering its huge frame amidst the furious torrents that encircled it. Nerves of steel, strong hearts and true, were needed by those who would voluntarily enter that watery inferno.

FASCINATING HAIR

Women Who Use Parisian Sage Have It and Keep It.

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charm of a beautiful woman lies in her hair.

Many women do not realize the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of Paris are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigour, lustre and strength to the hair.

Up to three years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in Canada. But now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in Canada. Wm. Madill sells it in Peterborough for 50 cents a large bottle and he guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand Wm. Madill will give you your money back if it fails. Made only in Canada by Giroux M'fg Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the auburn hair is on every bottle.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

The professional man who buys of an order house and a merchant who has his printing done out of town belong to the same lodge—same degree.

Houses are scarce in our city and hardly a week passes but what there are applications for a number of tenant houses. The town loses a number of good families each year who would like to locate here if they could find the house. Those who have the means to do so would find the erection of a number of tenant houses a good paying investment.

If there is one thing in which churches, as a rule, need to be more careful, it is the matter of preachers' salaries. With an indifference and an insensibility which we cannot understand many churches seem to think that a contract between themselves and the minister is no contract at all. They promise him a definite salary then pay him whatever is convenient. The gas man, the coal man and even the sexton must be paid, but the debt owing the minister is looked upon as altogether righteous and proper.

* * *

The best man we have in our town for the general good of the town is the one you will always see on the front seat in the progressive "band wagon." He is the first one to extend an open and warm hand to greet the stranger and welcome him to the best town in the state. He will resent an insult to our town as quickly as he would a slur at a member of his family. He very politely invites the chronic croaker to "move on." He is ever ready to give his just proportion to every public enterprise. He talks up our town at home and abroad and believes it is the best place upon God's green earth to live and desires to be buried here when he dies. Let us all try and be like this man for one year and our little city will take on new life and improve as never before in its history.

Possibly no town in our state with a population not greater than is claimed here, can boast of as many good horses as are owned by our local horsemen. Great as has been the future predicted for the automobile, man has manifested no great desire to forsake his old friend, the horse, and to-day fine roadsters are in greater demand than ever. Not only are good roadsters eagerly sought, but those standard bred and of acknowledged speed are also coming in for their share of the honours.

A town is greatly judged by its schools and churches. Our churches are a credit to a city of this size. Our church buildings are not large but neat and inviting and our pastors are pulpit orators, the equal of metropolitan cities. Our schools are whom one seldom finds outside the equally good in most respects. Our buildings are all that could be desired; our teachers are the best that money and careful and wise school board can employ and if our schools do not come up to the perfection line the fault can be traced to the pupils themselves who fail to appreciate the advantages a generous public has given them.

"Keep it out of the paper" is the cry which the local newspaper publisher daily hears. To oblige often costs considerable, though the party who makes the request thinks the granting scarcely worth saying "thank you" for. A newspaper is a peculiar thing in the public's eye. The news-gatherer is stormed at because he gets hold of one item and is abused because he does not get another. Young men, and often young women, as well as older persons, perform acts which become legitimate items for publication and then rush to the newspaper office and beg the editor not to notice their escapades. The next day they condemn the same paper for not having published another party doing the same thing they were guilty of, forgetting apparently their late visit to the printing office.

We still have one or two men in this community who stand around on the street corners and from morning until night complain about the town, their neighbors, their taxes and the weather. Such men are mighty common clay and it is fortunate we have so few of them. Such men are of no use to the town, their families or their God. They seem to live, but no one can tell how. Like mosquitoes and flies, they are not fatal but disagreeable to have about. It is not necessary to publish the names of the two or three who infest this community for you all know them.

If every business man in our town could do business on a strictly cash system it would be a blessing to us all. If we all had to pay cash we would learn to live within our means. It would save business men the expense of bookkeepers and the loss of bad debts all of which some one has to pay for. If our town could gradually work into a strictly cash system it would be better for us all.

* * *

If you want to ruin your boy just take his side on every question and dispute he has with his teacher or your neighbor's children. Just let him know you are with him right or wrong, in all his disputes. This will give him a good start in the downward path.

* * *

Don't stand around on street corners and grow at the weather, but milk your cows, or in other terms, do what your hands may find to do. You will fare much better, be healthier and more contented and have far greater possibilities of becoming a millionaire doing something for small pay than doing nothing and squandering the little you have got.

VERSES FOR THE KIDDIES

We are back again with pencils, we are back again with pens, we are rhyming up the ciphers on the board,
But we sigh for velvet meadows and the sense of treetop wrens, and we long to wade the swiftly rushing ford.

We are back again with grammars, we are back again with maps, we are tracing China's musty wall,
But our thoughts are in the timbers, where the gold-wing pecker taps, and the saucy blue-winged jaybirds loudly call.

We are back again with lessons, we are back again with slates, we are poring over half a dozen books;
But we wish that we were fishing with the little fat grub baits in the brooks.
shadow of the meadow minnow

We are back again with studies, we we are back again with rules, and the multiplication tables we now bear;
But we'll dream of some Utopia where there aren't any schools, and vacation is a dozen months a year.

STUDENT SHOWERS

Give a shower for the girl friend who leaves for school or college this fall.

If you do not want an elaborate entertainment have a shower tea. Have a dainty tea table spread in a corner of the drawing room and serve sandwiches, tea, chocolate, cake, nuts, candy. An ice is acceptable, but not essential.

Have the table set beforehand, and ask an older sister or married friend to pour tea. When ready to serve, the kettle, filled with boiling water and the chocolate pitcher, with bowl of whipped cream, are brought from the kitchen.

Ices are served in sherbet glasses, brought in on trays by the maid. They should stand on a plate on which is placed a small lace doily. Cake is passed with the ices.

The shower feature can be before or after tea is served. If later, invite the guests for a fixed hour, as "tea at 4 o'clock." That means they do not straggle in. If earlier, invite the guests from 4 to 6, and serve tea when the fun is over.

SENDING INVITATIONS

Invitations may be sent on a visiting card, with "Tea" in one corner and "To meet Miss Blank" across the top. On all the invitations save that of the guest of honor put above the "Tea at Four o'clock." "Student Shower" or "Schoolgirl Shower."

Unless you wish to be besieged for explanations it may be well to send the invitation in the form of informal notes, explaining that you expect to give this shower for Mary Blank, the kind of articles you wish brought and when to send them in—preferably the day before the party.

An artistic girl can embellish her note paper with a sketch of a school girl with bag of books on her shoulder, bending under a rain of neatly tied packages, pencils, note books, reference books and so on.

LIMIT COST OF GIFTS

The shower part can be of any kind. As girls with none too much pocket money are the givers, it may be well to limit the cost of each gift. These can be anything that a schoolgirl would like to find useful for her room or in the class room.

If she has any particular bent or is to specialize in her school life, it would be nice, especially if the girl is poor, to give along those lines. Consult her family to discover what she needs.

The gifts are sent in the day before, neatly tied in tissue paper and each provided with a loop or ring by which they may be hung. The hostess attends to their disposal.

USE MESSENGER BOY

One way would be to have a small boy dressed as a messenger boy appear at frequent intervals with a parcel addressed to the guest of honor. Sometimes instead of the parcel there can be a telegram or immediate delivery letter containing a quotation which bears upon a hiding place as: "Your clue you'd find? It mirrored lies within the sight of sharp blue eyes."

Following this clue leads to a gift tucked behind a mirror.

THE FIRST WITNESS

Mrs. Margaret Newell (sworn) said: "I am the wife of Samuel Newell and live in Belmont about half a mile from Deline's house. There is no direct road between the two. I was at home on Thursday night last. Deline called at my house after I had retired. He tapped at the door and I asked who was there. I asked him what he wanted and he replied that his wife was dead. He said that she had complained of a pain in her head that morning. I went to bed at twenty minutes to 10 o'clock that night and had not gone to sleep when he came. I don't think it was very long after I had retired, about 10 minutes I should think. I told him I would go and get Mr. and Mrs. Lytle and go over. I had to go north to Lytle's about a file from our place. They had not retired. Mr. and Mrs. Lytle's about a mile from our place. found Deline in the house with the baby on his arms. I don't remember what Deline said when we came in. There were two rooms and a kitchen down stairs. He was in the living room. I think Deline said the body was in the back kitchen. We went ther and saw Mrs. Deline lying on the floor. We did not examine the body or ascertain if it was cold or not. Deline made no statement about the death that I heard. Deline and Lytle went to get some more of the neighbours, bringing Mr. and Mrs. McMullen and Miss Buchanan back with them. Deline did not come back with them. It was sometime after before he came in alone. He did not make any statement. No one went to the body when the others came.

Did Not Examine Body

How did you know she was dead" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I did not know whether she was or not," replied the witness.

"Did any one ask Deline any questions?"

"Not that I heard."

"How long before any one went to look at the body?"

"Not until after day-light next morning."

The body was lying on the east side of the kitchen not far from the outdoor with the head towards the side door. The body was dressed in a flannel wrapper, her ordinary wearing apparel. She had stockings. I saw

CHANGE IN TIME TABLE

A slight change has been made in the G.T.R. timetable on the Lakefield branch. The change is as follows:

The early morning train which leaves for Lakefield at 5.40, and arrives from Lakefield at 6.40 p.m., has been cancelled.

The noon train for Lakefield will leave at 12.20, instead of 11.55.

Other trains will run on the same schedule with the exception of the early morning train from Lakefield, on Mondays, which has also been withdrawn.

OPEN ON OCT. 23

Arrangements Are Being Made For the Opening of New All Saints' Church

The opening of the new All Saints' Church will (D.V.) be held Sunday, October 23rd. The special services will, it is expected, extend over four Sundays. Two Bishops have already promised to come, and arrangements are being made to get also two leading clergymen of the Church. A men's mass meeting will probably be held on one of the opening Sundays—to be addressed by one of the leading laymen of the Anglican Church.

SUICIDE MURDER

Examiner Special.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 24.—Another sensational suicide and murder this morning when Paul Mueller aged 35, a Romantic artist, shot and killed Mrs. Martha Distel, 42 and then shot himself. The woman's husband and children were sleeping in other rooms of the same house at the time.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

Of All Saints' Church Will Be Held on Thursday Evening Next

The annual Harvest Thanksgiving services of All Saints' Church will be held Thursday next, Sept. 29th, at 8 p.m. The church will be decorated and special music rendered. The preacher will be Rev. W. L. Armitage, Vicar of Picton, well known in Peterboro as the first Rector of All Saints'. He was invited this year, because this will be the last harvest service in the old church, the chancel of which was built during his Rectorship.

SPLENDID PROGRAMME FOR OPENING CONCERT

The first of a series of popular concerts will be given by the 57th Regimental Band in the armouries on Friday night next and a decidedly high-class programme has been arranged. A notable feature will be the appearance of the popular local vocalist, Miss Lavina Hallihan, who will sing "The Holy City," and "Killarney." This may be the last public opportunity for the people of Peterborough to hear Miss Hallihan, as she is leaving for New York in a short time to study. The band will play several new numbers among them a grand pastoral hunting scene, "Le Fremersberg," a really magnificent selection. A new descriptive selection, "The Mill in the Black Forest" by Eilenberg will also be offered for the first time and another number that should be popular will be a medley of Harry Lauder's song hits. These ditties have been hummed and whistled everywhere and make a very catchy band number. Among the songs included in the medley are these well known Lauder melodies: "I Love a Lassie", "She's Ma Daisy" "The Daftest of the Family," "Fou the Noo" "The Wedding O' Sandy McNabb", "When I Get Back Again to Bonnie Scotland" an "She was Very Good to Me."

Arrangements have been made to provide seating accommodation for a very large crowd and the series of concerts should undoubtedly be well patronized.

WILL THE STREET PAVING BE GONE ON WITH, IN VIEW OF THE STRONG OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSAL?

Mayor Morrow Suggests That the City Pave the First Street That the Property Owners Petition For---Ratepayers Will Likely be Given a Chance to Discuss the Proposition in Council---Meeting of Board of Works Last Evening.

THE OILING OF THE STREETS WILL BE GENERAL NEXT YEAR

At the meeting of the Board of Works last evening the question of street paving was brought up. So many ratepayers have petitioned against the proposal that the committee thought it best to refer it back to the Council, when the ratepayers could come and discuss it. Ald. Duffus thought it was a mistake if the paving was not proceeded with. Mayor Morrow suggested that a resolution be passed that the first street petitioned for by ratepayers to be paved, be done. Ald. Bradburn said that if that was done he would send in a petition from Louis street. He was prepared to have it done and pay for it on the sixty and forty plan proposed by the city. Mayor Morrow thought Louis street was too small a one to start with.

It was decided to give Rubidge street another sprinkling of oil. The opinion is that the oil is doing the streets a great deal of good, and it is likely that it will be used all over the city next summer. It is also a great saving. Ald. Graham thought that probably if they allowed the oil to stand awhile before using, it would not smell so badly. The chairman suggested that they purchase a barrel of rose water to mix with it.

Those present at the meeting were Ald. Hicks, chairman, Mayor Morrow Ald. Graham, Duffus, Gillespie, Phelland and Metheral.

The Peterborough Canoe Company wrote the Board asking the city to loan them an old engine which the city at the present time is not using. The Canoe Company is having theirs replaced. The Company's request was granted.

It was pointed out that no more expensive work should be done this year, as the appropriations would not permit of any very heavy expenditures. J. M. Greene wrote asking to have the gully repaired over the creek, where he is at present building. The matter was referred to the engineer to report.

Mr. Willis Chipman, C. E., was present and spoke regarding the machinery for the new pumping station. He said that he extended the time for receiving it, and it was decided to leave the matter open for a while yet. Mr. Chipman stated that he had ordered one carload of pipes and it would be here on Monday. He wanted authority to purchase valves and pipings, and it was granted him. The C. G. E. agreement with the city regarding the laying of pipes on Albert street was read and on motion of Ald. Graham and Phelan the agreement was approved, of.

The Thos. Bradburn Estate wrote saying that they intended improving their property 88 and 90 Hunter St., by building a cement wall to match that of St. John's church grounds, and erecting cement steps. In order to carry out this project it will be necessary to encroach upon the street line some 30 inches to make a satisfactory job of the entrance steps to the houses in question for which privileges the estate asked the board's permission.

This request was granted subject to the engineer's supervision.

F. Sandy wrote, saying that he had leased the Chamberlain Estate property at the corner of King and Stewart streets, and asked that an entrance be made on King street at the east corner. This was left in the hands of the chairman and the engineer.

The matter of acquiring some three acres and more of Mr. Best's property for park purposes in South City, was left over for the Parks Committee to take up next year jointly with other propositions.

The engineer will be asked to report on a request for concrete crossings on Aylmer street, at Edinburgh and Dublin streets.

The Otonabee Power Company's request for permission to erect a temporary pole on Charlotte street, was referred to the chairman and the engineer with power to act.

Mr. Thompson asked for a sewer on GSmith street, from 160 feet west of George to Benson street, supported by a recommendation to this effect by the Board of Health. On motion of Ald. Graham, this request was granted.

The Dominion Railway Board, through Mr. Armstrong, reposited that the Toronto and Eastern Railway's route map from Peterborough to Lindsay will be submitted for approval on October 4th. The city solicitor was instructed to get all necessary information on this matter.

Ald. Bradburn on behalf of Mr. R. H. Bradburn, complained that on Perry street, the water in the spring floods rose up 12 or 14 inches, and over the sidewalk. He asked that some provision be made to get rid of this surface water.

The street commissioner will be asked to report upon this matter, and on the nuisance arising from water lying on Gilmour street. Also on similar conditions on Dublin and Water streets.

Great Progress in the Y.M.C.A. Membership Campaign

The office of the General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. was the scene of great excitement last evening. Each of the Committee were anxious to be first in getting in their new members and it kept the office staff busy taking in applications and making out receipts. That the men are working is very evident. All over town the talk is about joining and wherever the Campaign is mentioned it is with the kindliest sympathy.

One of the encouraging features about the Campaign and one that is quite logical is to be found in the fact that as soon as a young man joins he brings in a few more. This makes it difficult to tell just where the increase is going to stop. One young man induced three of his friends to join since. Another boy who was presented with a ticket by his employer is bringing in two of his chums. Like an avalanche, it grows as it progresses.

Don't let anybody think that there are no discouraging features about this Campaign. It would be a strange Campaign if that was the case. One of these is found in the fact that some who were counted on to be leaders have not raised a finger as far to help. It is still expected, however, that these are just waiting until they see the need of re-enforcements and then they will add strength to the work.

Two of the Clergymen of the city have joined and one of them in joining, said: "I consider it a great privilege to become a member of the Young Men's Christian Association and to pay my fee like the rest. You are doing a good work and this is one way in which I can show my appreciation." Just in this connection it might not be out of place to say that the Y.M.C.A. rests its claim for a place among the agencies of the Christian Church upon two truths, the power of environment to mould character and the adaptation of religion to redeem man. Many young men who could not be induced to go to Church has joined the Y.M.C.A. for the use of its many privileges and has been led to serve in the Church through friends made there. Sixty years of existence has amply proved this. The leaders in the Church have been among the foremost to pay tribute to the efficiency of the Association to accomplish the task of teaching and holding young men for the church.

MRS. DELINE CAME TO HER DEATH BY FOUL PLAY SAYS CORONER'S JURY IN THE INQUEST HELD AT HAVELOCK

Evidence Strongly Points to the Husband and Warrants His Being Sent Up For Trial Sustains the Finding, Reached After Twenty Minutes Deliberation---Many Witnesses Were Examined Before Dr. Kindred---The Town Hall Was Packed to Suffocation With Many Women in Attendance.

CASE IS AROUSING THE LIVELIEST INTEREST IN THE DISTRICT

By a Staff Representative.

WE, THE JURY APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO THE CAUSE OF THE DEATH OF MRS. HUGH DELINE, CONCLUDE THAT SHE CAME TO HER DEATH BY FOUL PLAY. WE CONSIDER THE EVIDENCE POINTS STRONGLY TOWARDS HER HUSBAND, HUGH DELINE, HAVING COMMITTED THE FOUL PLAY, AND WE CONSIDER THE EVIDENCE WARRANTS HIM TO BE SENT UP FOR TRIAL FOR HAVING BEEN THE CAUSE OF HER DEATH.

HAVELOCK, SEPT. 23.—It took the Coroner's jury in the inquest into the causes of the death of Mrs. Hugh Deline, held in the Town Hall here, this afternoon, just twenty minutes to reach the above verdict, after three hours had been spent in hearing the evidence of some fifteen witnesses.

The keen interest in the case resulted in the town hall being packed to suffocation. Long before 1 o'clock people had commenced to gather, and when the inquest was opened every seat in the hall downstairs, and in the gallery was filled. Later, in the session the crowd began to jam the centre aisle, and finally there was a solid mass of people from the door up to the end of the large hall. A surprising feature was the number of women present. Some of the details of the evidence were not of a nature that one would expect women would care to listen to, but they remained, nevertheless. Small children, even down to the baby in arms were there, and there was so much noise in the hall that there was difficulty in hearing some of the witnesses. Certainly, the people at the back of the hall could not follow the testimony, but no one went away.

Coroner Dr. Kindred, of Havelock, presided, and Magistrate Joyce, of Havelock, sat beside him during the examination of the witnesses. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, of Peterborough, conducted the examination, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, of Peterborough, represented Deline, who in charge of High Constable Cochrane of Peterborough, sat near the jury, and followed the evidence closely, but with no signs of emotion. Detective Reburn was in attendance. There was quite a galaxy of newspaper men present. The Toronto Telegram, Toronto Star, Toronto News, Toronto Globe, Toronto Mail, Peterborough Review, Peterborough Examiner, Havelock Standard, and Norwood Register all had representatives present.

NOTHING SENSATIONAL IN EVIDENCE.

There was nothing sensational in the evidence offered, much of which was of a nature making it impossible to be published. Witnesses told of being informed by Deline that his wife was dead, and of going to the house and seeing the woman lying on the floor of the kitchen. No one touched the body until next morning. According to the testimony of one witness, Deline, on coming back after summoning some of the neighbours requested him to get another pair of trousers from the house, as he had torn the pair he was wearing in getting over a fence. The witness had complied with the request, and Deline had changed his trousers outside and left the pair he was wearing in the cellar window. Constable Williams testified to finding them in the cellar, and that they were stained in the same manner as the wrapper worn by Mrs. Deline, when found dead. Several witnesses related conversations with Deline, in which the suspected man had said that his wife had awful pains in her head, and that "he would not be surprised to go home some night and find her dead." A woman told a conversation she had with Mrs. Deline, in which the dead woman had said that she did not want to have any more of a family and wondered "if all men were like Mr. Deline." Mrs. Parks, mother of the deceased, swore that her daughter had remarked to her: "Oh, ma, you don't know the life I lead."

THE FIRST WITNESS

Mrs. Margaret Newell (sworn) said: "I am the wife of Samuel Newell and live in Belmont about half a mile from Deline's house. There is no direct road between the two. I was at home on Thursday night last. Deline called at my house after I had retired. He tapped at the door and I asked who was there. I asked him what he wanted and he replied that his wife was dead. He said that she had complained of a pain in her head that morning. I went to bed at twenty minutes to 10 o'clock that night and had not gone to sleep when he came. I don't think it was very long after I had retired, about 10 minutes I should think. I told him I would go and get Mr. and Mrs. Lytle and go over. I had to go north to Lytle's about a mile from our place. They had not retired. Mr. and Mrs. Lytle's about a mile from our place. found Deline in the house with the baby in his arms. I don't remember what Deline said when we came in. There were two rooms and a kitchen down stairs. He was in the living room. I think Deline said the body was in the back kitchen. We went there and saw Mrs. Deline lying on the floor. We did not examine the body or ascertain if it was cold or not. Deline made no statement about the death that I heard. Deline and Lytle went to get some more of the neighbours, bringing Mr. and Mrs. McMullen and Miss Buchanan back with them. Deline did not come back with them. It was sometime after before he came in alone. He did not make any statement. No one went to the body when the others came.

Did Not Examine Body

How did you know she was dead?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I did not know whether she was or not," replied the witness.

"Did any one ask Deline any questions?"

"N t that I heard."

"How long before any one went to look at the body?"

"No' until after day-light next morning."

The body was lying on the east side of the kitchen not far from the door with the head towards the outside door. The body was clothed in a flannel wrapper, her ordinary wearing apparel. She had no boots or stockings. I saw some marks on the left side of the face. I did not observe her clothing or touch it. I did not see any stains on it. There was a mark on her right wrist. I have visited her at her house.

Conversation With Deceased

Did you ever have any conversation with her," asked the Crown Attorney.

"She told me," remarked the witness, "that her husband and she were that she did not want to more family. She said ondered if all men were line and that she was not ield to him as often as the past."

said that Deline went to sleep that night at 10 er the neighbours came. 's legs were bare to the they saw the body. The not washed until 4:30 the on. Deline had not gone body while she was there,

Amng the songs included in the medley are these well known Lauder melodies: "I Love a Lassie", "She's Ma Daisy" "The Daftest of the Family," "Fou the Noo" "The Wedding O' Sandy McNabb", "When I Get Back Again to Bonnie Scotland" an "She was Very Good to Me."

Arrangements have been made to provide seating accommodation for a very large crowd and the series of concerts should undoubtedly be well patronized.

A COLLISION

Quebec, Sept. 24.—The Canadian Pacific Liner "Montcalm" was in collision with a coaling vessel in bad weather in the gulf of St. Lawrence this morning.

THE WEATHER

This is about the date when, according to popular belief, equinoctial storms are due. It is a question, however, if this common belief has any scientific basis. Severe storms frequently do occur about this time, and also the corresponding period of the spring (March 21st.) Fests are sometimes prone to knock out a lot of scientific theory Prospects are for bad weather at the present outlook. We have had temperatures down to freezing point (32 degrees) on two occasions this fall, but not below that. Some tender plants have, however, felt the blighting influence of Jack Frost.—W.P.

Peterborough, Ont.

Gentleman,—

The awning that you put up for me on the front of my store last week, is the best I have ever had. It fits perfectly and works very easily indeed, and it is a credit to your firm to turn out such work.

I remain,
Yours truly,

WILL THE STREET PAVING BE GONE ON WITH, IN VIEW OF THE STRONG OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSAL?

Mayor Morrow Suggests That the City Pave the First Street That the Property Owners Petition For---Ratepayers Will Likely be Given a Chance to Discuss the Proposition in Council---Meeting of Board of Works Last Evening.

THE OILING OF THE STREETS WILL BE GENERAL NEXT YEAR

At the meeting of the Board of Works last evening the question of street paving was brought up. So many ratepayers have petitioned against the proposal that the committee thought it best to refer it back to the Council, when the ratepayers could come and discuss it. Ald. Duffus thought it was a mistake if the paving was not proceeded with. Mayor Morrow suggested that a resolution be passed that the first street petitioned for by ratepayers to be paved, be done. Ald. Bradburn said that if that was done he would send in a petition from Louis street. He was prepared to have it done and pay for it on the sixty and forty plan proposed by the city. Mayor Morrow thought Louis street was too small a one to start with.

It was decided to give Rubidge street another sprinkling of oil. The opinion is that the oil is doing the streets a great deal of good, and it is likely that it will be used all over the city next summer. It is also a great saving. Ald. Graham thought that probably if they allowed the oil to stand awhile before using, it would not smell so badly. The chairman suggested that they purchase a barrel of rose water to mix with it.

Those present at the meeting were Ald. Hicks, chairman, Mayor Morrow Ald. Graham, Duffus, Gillespie, Phelland and Metheral.

The Peterborough Canoe Company wrote the Board asking the city to loan them an old engine which the city at the present time is not using. The Canoe Company is having theirs replaced. The Company's request was granted.

It was pointed out that no more expensive work should be done this year, as the appropriations would not permit of any very heavy expenditures. J. M. Greene wrote asking to have the gully repaired over the creek, where he is at present building. The matter was referred to the engineer to report.

Mr. Willis Chipman, C. E., was present and spoke regarding the machinery for the new pumping station. He said that he extended the time for receiving it, and it was decided to leave the matter open for a while yet. Mr. Chipman stated that he had ordered one carload of pipes and it would be here on Monday. He wanted authority to purchase valves and pipings, and it was granted him. The C. G. E. agreement with the city regarding the laying of pipes on Albert street was read and on motion of Ald. Graham and Phelan the agreement was approved of.

The Thos. Bradburn Estate wrote saying that they intended improving their property 88 and 90 Hunter St., by building a cement wall to match that of St. John's church grounds, and erecting cement steps. In order to carry out this project it will be necessary to encroach upon the street line some 30 inches to make a satisfactory job of the entrance steps to the houses in question for which privileges the estate asked the board's permission.

This request was granted subject to the engineer's supervision.

F. Sandy wrote, saying that he had leased the Chamberlain Estate property at the corner of King and Stewart streets, and asked that an entrance be made on King street at the east corner. This was left in the hands of the chairman and the engineer.

The matter of acquiring some three acres and more of Mr. Best's property for park purposes in South City, was left over for the Parks Committee to take up next year jointly with other propositions.

The engineer will be asked to report on a request for concrete crossings on Aylmer street, at Edinburgh and Dublin streets.

The Otonabee Power Company's request for permission to erect a temporary pole on Charlotte street, was referred to the chairman and the engineer with power to act.

Mr. Thompson asked for a sewer on GSmith street, from 180 feet west of George to Benson streets, supported by a recommendation to this effect by the Board of Health. On motion of Ald. Graham, this request was granted.

The Dominion Railway Board, through Mr. Armstrong, reported that the Toronto and Eastern Railway's route map from Peterborough to Lindsay will be submitted for approval on October 4th. The city solicitor was instructed to get all necessary information on this matter.

Ald. Bradburn on behalf of Mr. R. H. Bradburn, complained that on Perry street, the water in the spring floods rose up 12 or 14 inches, and over the sidewalk. He asked that some provision be made to get rid of this surface water.

The street commissioner will be asked to report upon this matter, and on the nuisance arising from water lying on Gilmour street. Also on similar conditions on Dublin and Water streets.

Great Progress in the Y.M.C.A. Membership Campaign

The office of the General Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. was the scene of great excitement last evening. Each of the Committee were anxious to be first in getting in their new members and it kept the office staff busy taking in applications and making out receipts. That the men are working is very evident. All over town the talk is about joining and wherever the Campaign is mentioned it is with the kindliest sympathy.

One of the encouraging features about the Campaign and one that is quite logical is to be found in the fact that as soon as a young man joins he brings in a few more. This makes it difficult to tell just where the increase is going to stop. One young man induced three of his friends to join since. Another boy who was presented with a ticket by his employer is bringing in two of his chums. Like an avalanche, it grows as it progresses.

Don't let anybody think that there are no discouraging features about this Campaign. It would be a strange Campaign if that was the case. One of these is found in the fact that some who were counted on to be leaders have not raised a finger so far to help. It is still expected, however, that these are just waiting until they see the need of re-enforcements and then they will add strength to the work.

Two of the Clergymen of the city have joined and one of them in joining, said: "I consider it a great privilige to become a member of the Young Men's Christian Association and to pay my fee like the rest. You are doing a good work and this is one way in which I can show my appreciation." Just in this connection it might not be out of place to say that the Y.M.C.A. rests its claim for a place among the agencies of the Christian Church upon two truths, the power of environment to mould character and the adaptation of religion to redeem man. Many young men who could not be induced to go to Church has joined the Y.M.C.A. for the use of its many privileges and has been led to serve in the Church through friends made there. Sixty years of existence has amply proved this. The leaders in the Church have been among the foremost to pay tribute to the efficiency of the Association to accomplish the task of teaching and holding young men for the church.

NEW OFFICE

In keeping with the railroad itself and all that pertains to it, the city offices just opened by the Grand Trunk Pacific in Grand Vancouver, is now, it is said, neither attractive. The offices, it is said every bit of furniture and fixtures are new and of the latest type. The large room is divided into three sections—in the first the people get office; in the second is the ticket office; and at the third is the Express office. The furniture is quartered oak, finished in mission and upon the walls are hung appropriately framed pictures, a wonderful new departure in the newest transcontinental.

A SPLENDID BENEFICENCE.

The other day the Kingston Standard commented adversely upon a statement of Mr. S. T. Bastedo, superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities. Mr. Bastedo, in one of his addresses had pointed out that under this annuity system a man beginning at 20 years of age, and paying into the Government fifty cents per week, or $26 a year till he was sixty years of age, would be entitled to an annuity of $259.82. That is, upon a total payment of $1,040 he would be drawing every year while he lived an amount equal to the interest, at over 25 per cent. on what he had paid in, or in four years, he would get back, in the form of annuity, the whole of the amount paid in, less a trifle of 18 cents. Or, to put it another way, he would be drawing upon his payments, or investment, $259.82 cents a year ,or an equivalent of the interest on $5,200 at 5 per cent.

The Standard could not dispute such a favourable result, but it hinted that Mr. Bastedo was negatively deceiving the public; that he did not state, as the Standard asserted, was the case, that the amount of compound interest on the long series of annual payments was not mentioned, and did not enter into the calculation upon which so large a return as promised, was based. The Standard is mistaken. In an official summary of the Annuity law, issued by authority of Sir Richard Cartwright, author of the scheme, it is thus stated:

No deductions of any kind will be made from the payments made, but all expenses of management, etc., will be borne by the Government.

and every cent paid in, with compound interest, at 4 per cent. will be placed to the credit of the payer for the purchase of an annuity.

Further, if a man dies before the age when his annuity becomes payable, every cent he has paid in, with the addition of three per cent. interest, compounded, will be paid to his heirs. If payments are interrupted by sickness, loss of employment, or other cause, payment can be resumed at any time. There are no lapses, no medical examinations, every annuity is exempt from seizure for debt, there is no possibility of loss, the security is absolute, the annuitant has the guarantee of the Government of the Dominion, of one of the largest countries in the world with the greatest wealth of national resources.

The Standard is mistaken. There is no desire, no intention, to inadequately, or otherwise, conceal any [illegible] to make any extravagant [illegible] regarding the advantages [illegible] Annuities. There [illegible] to do so. The more [illegible] the more the var[illegible] they contain for the be[illegible] Canadian people are [illegible] the numerous advant[illegible] the more strongly they [illegible] desiring to provide for a comfortable old age. If everybody would study and learn to appreciate the advantages the annuities offer, there would be a rush to realise upon them. No one who carefully studies the Government Annuities system can fail to know that it is a splendid scheme of beneficence.

AMALGAMATED CHARITIES.

In another place in this issue is to be found a report of a meeting to effect an amalgamation of the charitable efforts of the churches and others, the object being to give systematic direction to charitable activities. The essence of charity, outside of its altruistic spirit is help in its broadest sense; not mere relief, but the helping, heartening word of advice and cheer, the inspiration and the aid to self help; self reliance, and manly independence. We can easily appreciate the philosophy of avoiding to do evil that good may come, but in goodness of common sense and goodness of judgment we often do good and evil ensues. Indiscriminate charity, while it may bring present relief—and very often provide the means for vicious enjoyments—is responsible for a large amount of injury to the character of its object, the very worst form of injury, for the character is the real man. It humiliates real manhood and weakens manly independence, begets deceit, and leads to scheming to impose upon the sympathy of the too-ready giver. This is what commends the proposed association of charities, one of its objects being to prevent duplication of charitable work. This is a most important one, for without any intention on the part of the charitable, the same objects of relief may, and actually do, become beneficiaries, of duplicate, triplicate, and even multiplicate, so-called charitable relief. A case, for example, is known in this city, where a family were in distressed circumstances, largely through their own improvidence and idleness—when there was a meal in the house. There were several children in the family, and it was the habit to send them, in turn, from one Church Sunday School to another, in order to widen as much as possible, the area of charitable help. To prevent this and to concentrate effort upon really legitimate charitable work is one of the objects of the proposed amalgamation of charitable effort in the city. It is all very well for each church to look after its own needy, but with the loose church affiliations that obtain among many of this class it is difficult for each church to know its own. The object of the suggested city federation of charities are so important and appealing that we duplicate upon this page the concise list of objects appended to the article in another column:

To make employment the basis of relief.

To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.

To protect the community against imposition. To reduce vagrancy and pauperism, and ascertain their true causes.

To prevent children growing up as paupers.

To secure for all deserving cases of destitution prompt and adequate relief.

To elevate the home life, health and habits of the poor.

These objects are sought to be attained by bringing about co-operation among all charitable agencies and persons.

By a system of registration to prevent imposition.

By ascertaining, through investigation, the most suitable action in each and every case.

By obtaining from existing charities the precise help needed, or

By giving temporary relief in cases of extreme emergency, and when all other sources fail. By careful study of the causes of pauperism, and of the best methods of dealing with destitution and degradation.

By furnishing the needy with a friend who will counsel them, safeguard their self-respect, and inspire thrift and better living.

This is the expression of an apparently mature study of the several phases of the subject, and all are urgently invited to read the article, representing the report of the preliminary meeting printed elsewhere in this issue.

We are at the beginning of a hard winter—for all winters are hard, when the meal in the barrel and the oil in the [illegible] are low—the demands on our purses are many and in the matter of charitable ministration, especially, it is desirable that not one cent should be unnecessarily; unprofitably, or unwisely expended, and that we should avoid any course that might tend to put a premium upon poverty, and make pauperism a permanent characteristic.

SERVICES AT ST. PAUL'S

Services of a special character will be held in St. Paul's Church to-morrow in connection with the annual "Rally Day" of the Sabbath School. In the morning the Rector will preach a special sermon to parents on "The Religious Instruction of the Young." In the afternoon the "Rally Day" services themselves will be held, when addresses will be given by Sheriff Hall and Mr. George Molloy of Philadelphia. At four o'clock there will be a meeting of the boys of the congregation, which will be addressed by Rev. J. A. Stewart of Hespeler. In the evening the Pastor will preach a special sermon to young men, and at the close of the service, a meeting for men only will be held by the Brotherhood of St. Paul, when Mr. Molloy will give an address.

Vaccination As A Mitigant Of The Virulence Of Typhoid

(Montreal Witness)

In a month when typhoid fever is generally most active, it is interesting to learn that during the past eighteen months twelve thousand men of the United States army have been vaccinated for typhoid fever; and that of these twelve thousand only three men have since been attacked by the scourge; while there has not been a death from the disease in the whole number. In other blocks of the army containing twelve thousand men there have been an average of seventy-two cases of typhoid in the same time and seven deaths. These statistics have been compiled by the medical corps of the United States Army and they prove, according to that authority, "that the disease 'that is always with us, 'that scourge of the country districts, 'that worst of enemies in time of war 'may be met, muzzled and all but 'subjugated.' Mr. William Atherton Dupuy, in the New York Times, reminds us that the month of September is the worst month in the year for typhoid. 'Just now there are 'twice as many cases of it in all the 'cities as at any other season. This 'is because the summer vacationists 'have returned from the country, have 'brought the rural disease with them 'and have spread it to others. It is 'ever so in the fall, and every 'health department knows whence the 'disease comes. It is therefore timely 'that announcement of the great steps toward its eradication should be 'made.' As in so many other things for the good of the world the British have led in the successful war against typhoid. Mr. Dupuy gives them due credit. He recounts how the battle that the British were waging against the disease in India in the 90's led from inoculations for the prevention of cholera to the application of the same principles to typhoid. Sir Almroth E. Wright, of the British forces, made a vaccine, and tried it on two men. He was carried away with the results. The men became immune.

The English and the Germans began the long march toward developing the right serum and its right application to the individual. The most satisfactory check on results was obtained by Colonel Leishman, of the British army. Leishman vaccinated 5,473 men of the British army. These men all belonged to sixteen regiments which had been selected for a carefully controlled investigation on a large scale. As each of these regiments was in turn ordered to service in India, a medical officer, who had been especially trained for this particular duty, was attached. He lectured to the troops on the prevention of the disease and called for volunteers and immunised them. As this medical officer is always present with the regiment in all its journeys, he is able to keep careful records of all men immunized, and to care for and to vaccinate additional volunteers and recruits from time to time as opportunity offers. From his knowledge of typhoid fever and clinical laboratory methods he is enabled to make an accurate diagnosis in all suspicious cases. From his statistics the following results have been obtained: Among 12,083 men there were 5,475 inoculated and 6,610 uninoculated. Among the former there were 21 cases of typhoid, with 2 deaths, and among the latter 187 cases and 26 deaths. Among the exposed regiments which had been inoculated with the vaccine in use at present there were 3.7 cases per 1,000, against 32.8 per 1,000 among the untreated. The observations of this group of twelve thousand odd men,' says Mr. Dupuy, 'cover a period of more than three years, and no more perfect or convincing statistics are needed to show the value of this method of prophylaxis. It seems to show that beyond a doubt the death rate has been reduced 90 per cent. Yet the process was still young and the "Yankees" had not begun work."

To-day, however, the experts of the United States army are attacking the disease thoroughly through vaccination. We read that when an individual is found to have typhoid he is immediately vaccinated. This vaccination develops more rapidly than does this disease. The object and effect are the development of an [illegible] an element in the blood that will make the disease ineffective. The idea is new, and the men of science who are handling it refuse to make any statement until it has been demonstrated over and over again that it is effective. It may be said, however, that some marvellous cures have been effected in this way. They would indicate that vaccination may reduce typhoid to a disease with only half the force that it has had under the old methods. So the men of the medical school of the army, concludes Mr. Dupuy, are getting to the point where they are willing to stake their reputations on the benefit of vaccination. They believe that they have proved as a scientific fact that this is the method by which the disease should be fought. They believe that the system will be the means of saving some hundreds of thousands of good lives. In the United States the government has gone so far as to prepare vaccine in abundance, and furnishes it freely to practitioners in whom it has confidence; that is to say, men who it believes will handle it properly and will report results. It is being scattered broadcast, we are assured, in that way, and soon all the world, including Canada, is expected to come under its beneficent results.

THE FASHIONABLE FIGURE

In the smart silhouette to-day the lines are extremely straight and slender. The bust is neither high nor low, the waist is large in comparison with the hips, and the hips themselves are very small in comparison with their dimensions a few years ago. A woman ought to be slender; if that is impossible, she must at least look slender. It is easier than it sounds, for the modern corsets are cut so cleverly that they can accomplish miracles. They do not really reduce the actual figure, but they do reduce its actual measurements. If the flesh is loose and flabby they compress it to within reasonable limits. If it is hard and firm, they push it here and there as skilfully as a masseuse till it is out of harm's way. They do nothing to hurt the figure and a great deal to help it.

A BILIOUS HEADACHE

Bile in the blood is poison and causes pain. Mrs. Thomas Covert, Highland Grove, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered with biliousness, stomach trouble and terrible headaches. Having used Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills, will say unhesitatingly that this is the most effective treatment obtainable for these troubles."

CLIMBING FOR GIFTS

As tea can often be served on a porch at this season the messenger boy stunt is convenient and amusing. Or for an outdoor fete the gifts can be hung on the branches of a low tree. The guest of honor is handed an envelope containing this mystic rhyme:

The tree of knowledge with gifts galore,
Reserves them every time
For the student who is plucky enough
Is not afraid to climb.

The girl is then solemnly escorted to the laden tree and told the fruit is hers if she will "skin up" for it. After much merriment the hostess resorts to the subterfuge of providing a ladder for her friend to climb.

Perched on top of it she opens each package in turn, then hands them to her friends below as she reaches for a new one.

If the dinner is indoors the gifts can be hidden in out-of-the-way places on the lower floor. When the first one is found it has a big arrow on top that points in the direction of the next. Each gift is numbered.

A red dart means the hall; a black one in a closet or under a piece of furniture; a white one in full view, and a blue one the dining room. This makes the search not quite so long drawn out.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

SEPT. 25th, 1910
(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

Temperance Lesson, Gal. v.: 15-26. Golden Text—If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit. Gal. v.; 25.

Verse 15—What should be our attitude toward each other?

Why is it that, even among professed Christians, there is so much evil speaking of those who are absent?

What rule should govern our conversation about our fellows?

Why is it not legitimate to discuss an evil report about the absent, even if we have reason to believe it is true?

Verses 16-17—What does it imply to "walk in the Spirit?"

Do the natural and legitimate appetites, and desires of the body, necessarily war against the Spirit of God, or is the reference here to the flesh, or sinful mind?

Does God expect every man through the power of the Spirit, to succeed in resisting every sinful temptation, or is that the ideal only?

Verse 18—To what extent may we take the Spirit to direct us, as to what we should, and should not, do?

Verses 19-21—How many of the sins of this catalogue are sins of the body, and how many the sins of the soul?

How many of these sins are impossible of commission if we had no physical nature?.

If the use of the appetite and passions of the body, and the desires of the heart and mind, are fully under the control of the Spirit, how many of these sins would be possible of commission?

Is drunkenness, for example, a sin of the body, or the soul, or both?

When a drunkard is liberated from the body does he still have a craving for drink?

What is the best cure for drunkenness?

How long would a drunkard crave strong drink, if he could not procure any?

Who is it impossible for those who are controlled by the flesh to inherit the kingdom of God?

Verses 22-24—How many, or how much, of these fruits of the Spirit ripens on the day we first commit ourselves to be "led of the Spirit?"

A flower garden needs at least two things, viz., to be free of weeds and for the flowers to grow, the one being sudden and the other gradual; does this fairly represent the needs of a soul, and if so specify the process?

Verse 25—Do those who receive the Spirit have to learn to walk in Him, and if so, how is it done? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Verse 26—If a Christian, out of love, is engaged in good work, is it right or wrong for him to desire to know that his work is appreciated?

If one Christian worker is jealous of another worker, how would you characterize such a person?

Lesson for Sunday, October 2nd, 1910. The Wise and Foolish Virgins. Matt. xxv.: 1-13.

GOOD HEALTH FOR BABY AT VERY LITTLE COST

Baby's Own Tablets only cost 25 cents a box. A box bought now may save baby's life. Summer complaints come suddenly, and carry away thousands of little ones every year. If the stomach and bowels are kept in order there is little danger from these troubles. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world for preventing and curing stomach and bowel troubles. They can be given with perfect safety to the new-born baby or the well grown child. An occasional dose of the Tablets will regulate the stomach and bowels and prevent summer complaints. The mother who keeps these Tablets on hand may feel assured her little ones are safe. If you have not got a box of the Tablets get one without delay. Do not wait until trouble comes; it may then be too late. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I have evolved a slogan for housewives to be used during the fall housecleaning.

Housekeepers who observe that festival, please attend. I don't know whether you'll like it or not, but here it is:

"Clear house as well as clean house!"

How does that appeal to you as a slogan?

It seems to me if every housewife in the land would adopt that for her fall housecleaning it would be a happier land.

A newspaper friend of mine was recently sent out to get up an article on the necessity or non-necessity of this fall upheaval.

Some of the women whom she interviewed indulged. Some didn't. One who didn't, in explaining her freedom from the habit, let fall such a pearl of wisdom—no, "nugget of good common sense" would describe it better—that I borrowed it.

"In our house we aim to keep clean not to become clean" she said, "and one of our methods of keeping clean is not to have the house cluttered up with any unnecessary things. I thoroughly believe that if thinking women would make up their minds to have nothing in their houses but useful things, and those of value because of association, so-called drudgery would diminish to the vanishing point, and this semi-annual upheaval would not be needed."

Now, housewives, please don't say: "Here is some more of that housekeeping talk from someone who doesn't know anything about it," and refuse to read any further.

Please be open-minded and unprejudicedly consider if it isn't possible that the lady was very right, and then query how well your house stands her test.

That is, how much there is in your home besides useful things and those that have associations?

Useful, of course, ought to include beautiful, for beauty is certainly useful. A well-made chair rests your body. A truly beautiful object rests your eye.

With that definition of useful, test one room in your house. If it's an average house, I know just about what the result will be. Why not make the object of the fall cleaning to make it capable of passing that test?

I know a very sensible woman who one day decided that she was being possessed by her possessions instead of possessing them. Thereupon, she went through her house, and standing before each object, asked herself if she were getting her trouble's worth of utility and pleasure out of it. If she had to say no, she got rid of the object, and according to her testimony, she lived happier ever afterwards.

One of the greatest tendencies of life is accumulation. In many ways it is a good tendency. In other respects it is bad and needs to be checked, and this is one of them.

To know how to throw off, as well as accumulate, is one of the needs of a happy life. If you lack that ability, why not try this very fall to acquire it?

In other words, instead of letting your housecleaning be the regulation taking out and putting back, why not adopt the slogan:

"Clear house as well as clean house."

SERMON FROM SHAKESPEARE
(Copr. 1909, by Bradley-Garretson Co. Ltd.)

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Two Gentlemen of Verona, Act I., Sc. 1.

The Elisabethan age was an age of action. Before that time Englishmen had lived in a narrow world, but then the whole earth became their stage. The voyages of Drake and Raleigh inflame the imagination of old and young alike, and the little island kingdom began that career of conquest and exploration that was to make her master of the high seas, and controller of the destinies of nations—that was to plant her colonies, nations within an empire, in a circle girdling the earth. The learning of the Greeks and Latins; the culture, the art, the music of the Continent, were all appealing to the minds of Englishmen. English fathers were sending their sons abroad "to seek preferment out," some to "studious universities," some "to discover islands far away." In Shakespeare's time to any man of standing it "Would be great impeachment (reproach) to his age,
To have known no travelling in his youth."

Study is excellent. It broadens the mind and moulds character, but a man requires travel to give finish and polish to his education. It is all very well to read learned discussions on the Parthenon and the Coliseum, on the antiquities of Rome and of Greece, on the art of Florence and Paris. A visit to Greece or Italy or France makes the book learning a reality; the eye sees and retains what the mind only vaguely grasped. No matter how brilliantly Venice may be described on the pages of Ruskin or on the canvas of Turner it is not properly known until the eye has rested on the Bridge of Sighs, the gondolas and the palaces of the ancient princes and merchants. The pictures of Raphael, the statuary of Michael Angelo have been recording in copies and prints and scattered to the ends of the earth. Learned volumes have been published on the art of these intellectual giants. To fully appreciate their power it is necessary to visit the churches and galleries of Europe. Who can comprehend from books the glories of the Western plains with their innumerable herds and their miles and miles of golden grain, or the awful sublimity of the Rockies? Travel is necessary for a proper understanding of the external world and the world of art.

It is even more essential to the student of men and manners. The philosopher who said "Know thyself" was wise, but the only true way to do this is to learn about ourselves. If men "sluggardise" at home they will never gain this knowledge. No greater truth was ever uttered than that. "Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits." A man whose horizon is the fences of his farm, or the suburbs of his native town or city, or even the boundaries of his country, grows narrow in mind, his soul becomes dwarfed. Travel is the greatest of educators. It stores the mind, it sharpens the wits, it broadens the sympathies. "The proper study of mankind is man," sang Alexander Pope. How is a man going to study mankind by his own fireside? To enable him to take an intelligent part in the affairs of his country travel is essential. The statesmen and diplomats of the nations have been trained as much by travel as in the halls of learning.

Study and travel go hand in hand. Books tell you what to expect in the countries visited. Without this knowledge much is missed. There are thousands of travellers rushing over Europe at the present moment who have not made adequate preparation. Even have they and they ask not! The glories of the Old World have little meaning to them. Whether or not a man is to benefit by travel depends largely on his intellectual and moral training. Unless his mind has been prepared, lordly castles and vast cathedrals are to him nothing but piles of stone. The men and women of books are merely foreigners, to be despised because they speak an alien tongue and have other manners. Their vices too often are what attract, and instead of benefiting by foreign travel many men return to their country the worse for their sojourn abroad.

But there is vastly more good than harm done by foreign travel. England's greatness is due to the energy her sons have displayed in searching the corners of the earth and learning of all nations. In recent years Japan has leaped into the front rank of the powers. Why? In the universities of Europe and America Japanese youths have been studying. In all countries citizens of Japan have been travelling. In the factories and shipyards they have been learning. Contact with other nations has broken down the barrier that insulated Japan from the rest of the world.

The stay-at-home must drop behind in the race. The wise traveller, who learns of all men, is best fitted to achieve greatness. His mind has been broadened by contact with other men and other manners. From a narrow villager he becomes a citizen of the world. His soul grows cosmopolitan and his sympathies widen. Wherever men shut themselves up in institutions or communities a stunted spiritual life is to be found.

GAS, HEARTBURN AND DYSPEPSIA VANISH

Makes Your Out-of-Order Stomach Feel Fine in Five Minutes

You can eat anything your stomach craves without fear of Indigestion or Dyspepsia, or that your food will ferment or sour on your stomach, if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally.

Your meals will taste good, and anything you eat will be digested, nothing can ferment or turn into acid or poison or stomach gas, which causes Belching, Dizziness, a feeling of fulness after eating, Nausea, Indigestion (like a lump of lead in stomach), Billousness, Heartburn, Water brash, Pain in stomach and intestines or other symptoms.

Headaches from the stomach are absolutely unknown where this effective remedy is used. Diapepsin really does all the work of a healthy stomach. It digests your meals when your stomach can't. A single dose will digest all the food you eat and leave nothing to ferment or sour and upset the stomach.

Get a large 50 cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from your druggist and start taking now, and in a little while you will actually brag about your healthy, strong stomach, for you then can eat anything and everything you want without the slightest discomfort or misery, and every particle of impurity and gas that is in your stomach and intestines is going to be carried away without the use of laxatives, or any other assistance.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion or any stomach disorder, you can get relief within five minutes.

YOUNG WOMEN SHOULD KEEP OFF THE STREETS

Sensible Advice Given by Miss Addison, of Annesley Hall in Address at Re-opening of the Y.W.C.A.,—No Girl Who Promenades the Street Can Ever Make a Good Honest, Respectable Woman.

The re-opening of the Y.W.C.A. was attended by a large assemblage of ladies last night. The meeting was held in the gymnasium of the building, and the rooms were prettily decorated for the occasion. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Roger, who very ably filled the position.

The feature of the evening was an address given by Miss Addison, Dean of Annesley Hall, Toronto. She gave very good advice to those present, especially to the younger people, and those who enjoyed the privilege of hearing her instructive words will, or should, profit by them. She spoke of learning and training of the mind. She said that the mind was like a finger or hand; if it is not used, it becomes useless, just like any other organ. She pointed out the advisability and necessity of making a special study of something. She spoke of Latin and French, or some other language, as being good subjects of study, but mentioned the fact that the subject, which appertains to or is most adaptable to the work or position of the person, is the subject to study. She put special stress on the fact that people should not give up studying anything, just because it becomes tiresome, or discouraging, and advised that any person who met with a case like that and became despondent over the monotony of study, should just keep right on studying until they would be glad that they had not dropped it.

She said that any person who was fond of studying history or stories, or anything along that line would find the English Bible a very interesting book, containg every kind of literature a person could wish to study. And that every person should study the Bible from a literary, as well as a religious, point of view. She gave many reasons for this advice. She said that it gave biographies of both good and bad people, and everything that is interesting and instructive.

Miss Addison went on to say that the study of grammar was very useful. She said if they could store their minds with the best thoughts they would never have cause to regret it. There surely was never a Canadian, she said, who was so lacking in courage as to give up his studies because they were difficult.

The speaker then went on to describe the effect that walking on the streets had on young women. She said that no girl would ever make a good, honest, and respectable woman or would ever occupy a good home if she made a practice of promenading the streets in the evening. She also said that a woman who had the will power to abstain from this practice, should help others less fortunate, to do so; and that it was her duty to do so, and if she did not if she went so far as to go out and put a stumbling block, so to speak, in the path of others, she would have to answer for the sin before God.

In her closing remarks, Miss Addison told her audience that if they were willing to study, and wished to go in the right path, but lacked instruction and help, they would find everything they required at the Y. W. C. A., that the ladies in charge there would be delighted to help any young lady who was in such a plight.

A vote of thanks was then tendered Miss Addison, by those assembled, on the suggestion of Mrs. Roger.

Dr. McCullough then addressed the audience in a speech of some length, in which he pointed out the advantage of taking exercise, and its aid to those who are inclined to be affected with any disease, or those who are round shouldered. He stated that the exercise which a person can get at the "Y" gymnasium is superior to any common exercise, and helps and strengthens every organ of the body.

The next item in the proceedings was a piano solo by Miss Gumpricht. It was most effectively given and was much appreciated by all.

The audience was then favoured by a short address from Mrs. Roger, and after which the programme was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

After the programme, grapes and apples were served and a most sociable time was spent.

Statistics prove indisputably that the increased use of such a pure and wholesome beverage as Regal Lager ensures a decrease in any community's record of intemperance. That alone suggests the truth that Regal is NOT an intoxicant.

AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Good Music Will Be a Feature of the Men's Meeting To-morrow

The Men's meeting at the Y.M.C.A. will be addressed by Rev. H. J. Keith, M.A., to-morrow afternoon and the Male Quartette of the Park Street Church will sing. This ought to bring a good crowd of men out, for both of these features are popular in Peterborough. There will be bright singing for everybody. It is said that a man cannot help singing when he gets in a crowd like that. The meeting opens with a song service at 4.15 sharp and closes at exactly 5.15.

THESE $15.00 Suits Overthrow all Traditions in Regard To POPULAR PRICE GARMENTS

In many quarters the term "Popular Price" is synonymous with shoddy materials, crude making and doubtful style. Not so at this store. Some garment makers think anything from a poor lining to a two year old model is good enough for a suit that is intended to retail for a modest sum. But we don't patronize such makers

We have brough the same experienced judgment, the same exactin gdiscrimination to bear upon the selection of ALL of our garments stocks—from the most inexpensive to the most costly. The same ideals as to the dependable quality have prevailed. The $15.00 suits are as a rule less elaborate than the more costly suits, but they are the same correct, carefully made, serviceable garments that you have become accustomed to associate with this store. From the linings to the trimmings they are GOOD garments, that will give long and satisfactory service.

The above cut gives an idea of the advantages of the Automatic Transportation System

AUTOMATIC TRANSPORTATION AS IT IS IN ACTUAL USE

System is in Operation in Moss' Burg, Pa., and Has Proved Very Satisfactory, According to the Advertiser.

DESCRIPTION OF PLANT

The following is taken from the Blossburg, Pa., Advertiser:

Blossburg has a new industry, recently installed, that will yield an important influence in the coal mining community hereabouts. Jenkins Brothers and the Nowak Coal Company have until recently been confronted with almost insurmountable difficulties in the way of transporting coal from their mines down the mountain to the railroad tracks. The only means of transportation available heretofore being teaming the coal down the mountain road.

The Automatic Transportation Company, of Buffalo, N.Y., has constructed one of its electric automatic transportation lines from the mouth of the mine to tipples adjoining the railroad siding, a distance of about one mile.

The line consists of a series of iron posts resting on concrete foundations, capped with malleable iron Y's which support double-headed heavy steel rails. The electric cabriolet or motor cars, which draw several trailers, travel on the rails and by a new adaptation of electricity take the current directly into the motors from the rails upon which they travel, doing away with the third rail or overhead trolley. The standard gauge of the line is thirty inches between the rails. The point of contact, where the contact is taken, is in a "V" shaped groove from the underside of the rails thus making it possible to operate the line under all weather conditions, as snow and sleet on the rails will not interfere with the electrical contact.

The elevation varies from a few feet, at several points in passing down the mountain, to 51 feet near the foot of the mountain where the line leaves a high elevation of land and is carried to the top of the tipples at the railroad siding. A greater portion of the line is constructed on an eight per cent. grade. The means of construction employed by the Automatic Transportation Company does away with the tremendous cost of grading, the height of the uprights going varying with the contour of the surface of the earth.

The coal is transported in trains which consist of two motor cars that have a carrying capacity of a ton each and four trailers that each carry a load of a ton and a half. The trains of coal are controlled either by an operator who rides on the motor car or are operated automatically, it not being necessary to have an operator in attendance.

The time for a round trip, from loading the cars at the mouth of the mine, proceeding down the mountain to the railroad tipples, automatically dumping and climbing the mountain back to the mouth of the mine again, is fifteen minutes less. At present the mines of Jenkins Brothers and the Nowak Coal Company are transporting over the new electric automatic transportation line approximately 300 tons per day. Arrangements are being made by the mines now using the new line, as well as adjacent properties that will make connections with it, to greatly increase the tonnage. The line as now constructed has a capacity, with the installation of cars, of transporting 1,000 tons per day.

The location of the mine in the mountains is such that the Automatic Transportation Company's system has been found to be the only practical means of transportation available other than the tedious way of teaming the coal.

The Automatic Transportation Company has erected a thoroughly modern concrete power house adjoining the railroad tracks, which is equipped with the newest, up-to-date electrical machinery, and besides providing the power for operating the line, will furnish electricity for mines to which the line will be extended.

Practical miners of the neighborhood of Blossburg, as well as many mine experts from a distance, are loud in their praise of the splendid results attained by the Automatic Transportation Company's system, which making it possible for mining properties, heretofore far away from railroads, where the character of the country did not allow the construction of steam railroads prohibitive in cost, to secure a safe, speedy and economical means of transportation for coal or other minerals.

The transportation line has been constructed under the supervision of Wm. G. Carr, the inventor of these new transportation devices, who is President of the Automatic Transportation Company. The offices and factory of the company are located at Buffalo, N.Y.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

The Peterborough Exhibition

The exhibition which has just closed has been conceded on all sides to have been the best that has ever been held in Peterborough. The exhibits were good, the specialties were really first-class and the attendance splendid. Now that the directors have shown by indisputable evidence that they are capable of doing so well in the face of many difficulties, shown, moreover, that they are disinterested enough to work hard for the good of Peterborough, it is surely time for the citizens to strengthen their hands by helping towards the purchase of the grounds. There is no project that is calculated to return so much to the city as a well conducted annual fair, and it is the belief of many astute and capable business men that it would be the greatest of pities and the shortest sighted of policies to let slip such a chance as is yet presented of purchasing the present site of the Exhibition at a reasonable figure.

A correspondent has sent in the following communication in regard to the visit of the British Bowlers which will be read with interest by lovers of the good old game.

Sir,—

The tour of the British Bowlers is over and they have departed for their homes. Possibly a glance over the games played with Canadian Bowlers in the different towns and cities that they have visited will be interesting to a number of Peterborough readers. Taking the games in sequence, the visiting teams first played at Montreal, where they won, then at Ottawa where they also won and at Peterborough where they experienced their first defeat of the tour, being beaten by two shots. At Toronto they won on the grand total by seven shots; at Hamilton by four shots and at London by five shots. At Petrolea they won by 51 shots, at Windsor by 25, at Clinton by 3, at Stratford by 34, at Berlin and Waterloo by 32, at Owen Sound by 11 shots. It will be noticed therefore that in their tour through Canada, Peterborough was the only place where they were defeated. Hurrah for Peterborough.

Yours truly,
BOWLER.

THE Y.M.C.A.

All who have the good of the young men of Peterborough at heart will wish success to the efforts that are now being made to place the local branch of the Y.M.C.A. on a broad and substantial basis. The objects to be obtained are so valuable, and the principle at stake so grand that it behooves everyone to add his little quota to the cause. There are some amongst us, who, in the past have been inclined to be pessimistic and, whilst not exactly acting the part of croakers, have belittled the efforts that the upholders of the institution have put forth in its behalf. Such an attitude is an unworthy one, and utterly out of keeping with the spirit of manliness that we all pride ourselves in possessing. Mistakes have perhaps been made in the past, not only in matters of management but in those of outside organization as well. But it must be remembered that however willing people may be to help with their advice, however valuable such advice may be, it is of little use without money to help it to fruition. The lack of this very necessary ingredient do success has been very severely felt by the management. Let us hope that the present campaign will have the effect of setting the institution firmly on its legs.

CRICKET AND THE Y.M.C.A.

There are very many Englishmen in this city, engaged in various forms of employment. Amongst them are several cricketers of more than average ability. For the past few years there have been occasional games played with outside clubs, but, lack of organization and lack of means combined have rendered whatever efforts have been put forth almost nugatory in effect. As members of the Y.M.C.A. these players could be put on a recognized footing and an incentive given to the game, which in a very short time would restore to Peterborough the prestige that she once possessed in this branch of sport. Such an object is well worth attaining and it is to be hoped that the management of the Y.M.C.A. will use their best endeavours towards its accomplishment.

INTERFERED WITH ORDERS.

Vancouver Immigration Officials Is Suspended Because Trap Spoiled.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—John Moore Bowell, deputy controller of Chinese immigration at Vancouver, B.C., was yesterday suspended by the Minister of Trade and Commerce, as the result of investigations which have been conducted for some weeks past by Constable Foster of the Dominion police, under instructions from the Department.

There have been suspicions for some time that a conspiracy existed between the officials in charge of Chinese immigration at Vancouver, and Chinese, by which Chinese were enabled to enter Canada under false certificates.

Foster reported that it would be advisable to set a trap for the Chinese who were coming in on the C.P.R. steamer Empress of China, due at Vancouver on Saturday last. He asked that the regular interpreter, one Yippon, should be replaced by another, and it was expected that the Chinese would confide to the man supposed to be Yippon the stories of how they hoped to evade the payment of the $500 head tax. Yippon was accordingly suspend, and his substitute was engaged, but on Friday last Bowell reinstated Yippon, and so the trap was laid in vain.

It is for this interference that Bowell has been suspended. He is also collector of customs, an office which he has held since 1887, and is a son of Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

There were 449 Asiatics on the Empress of China, and even despite the failure of Foster's plan, 30 of them are held on a charge of attempting to enter Canada under false certificates.

Shipwrecked Sailors Home.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 42.—The Allan line steamer Siberian, from Liverpool brought yesterday three shipwrecked seamen, Joe Doylin, J. Christmas, and John Joe, who had shipped on the barquentine Harvest Queen at Dalhousie, N.B., bound for Buenos Ayres, lumber laden. They left Dalhousie on Aug. 10, and a few days afterward the ship sprang a leak and became waterlogged. The deckload was thrown off, and the pumps were worked day and night. The pumps became choked and the vessel was almost awash, when the German mail boat Koenigin Louise came along and took off the crew, nineteen all told. This was on Aug. 24. Captain Alex. Forgit, of Windsor, N.S., was in command of the Harvest Queen. The ship was set on fire, so as to prevent her being a dangerous derelict. The rescuing steamer was bound from New York to Genoa, and landed the shipwrecked crew at Gibraltar. The captain and mate went home via New York; and the three seamen were sent home on the Siberian.

Austen Chamberlain's Told-You-So.

London, Sept. 4.—Austen Chamberlain, speaking at Birmingham, declared that what he prophesied had happened with the Canadian Government, and that none could blame ministers for them. They had negotiated and were still negotiating those commercial treaties with foreign countries which they would have made with Great Britain if she had been ready to grasp the outstretched hand.

Cat With Human Disease.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—There's a case of infantile paralysis at Dr. Morphy's dog and cat hospital on VanKoughnet avenue. The patient is an infant, but not human—a kitten.

The kitten, owned in Toronto, was taken to the hospital with one hind leg paralysed. Then the other hind leg became affected. The paralysis crept up the body, and to-day a front leg and the muscles of the neck are shown symptoms of the disease.

Dr. Morphy has diagnosed the case as one of infantile paralysis, and it's a "beautiful case" from a medical standpoint. According to Dr. Morphy, this kitten's case is almost identical with infantile paralysis in children. To Dr. Morphy, this is an important fact.

Has Both Legs Broken

George Chavez Tries to Fly From Brig to Milan, But After Completing the Passage Over Napoleon's Famous Route Comes to Grief and is Badly Injured—Breaks Altitude Record Yesterday.

Domodossola, Italy, Sept. 24.—The George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator belongs the honor of being the first to fly across the Alps.

The daring feat was accomplished yesterday in an attempt to win the prize of $20,000 offered by the Italian Aviation Society, Milan, for a flight from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan.

Chavez, however, was unable to complete the trip, having sustained painful injuries when he alighted here. His machine was overturned and he was buried in the wreckage, both legs were broken and the left thigh fractured. Other parts of the body have bad contusions. The general condition of the airman, however, is not considered to be grave.

The cheering crowd had caught sight of the monoplane when it appeared as a mere speck in the sky far up the valley, and watched it with thrilling interest as it grew larger and larger, approaching at a tremendous speed.

When he was within about three-quarters of a mile of the aerodrome, Chavez cut the ignition, and was gliding earthwards when suddenly, as he was preparing to alight, a wing of the machine lifted as if caught by a gust of wind and the monoplane tumbled to the ground.

Henry Weyman, the American aviator, set out twice to follow Chavez. The first flight lasted four minutes, and on his second attempt he failed to reach the summit of the pass and turned back.

Chavez determined at noon to make his attempt and rose to a height estimated at nearly 7,000 feet. It was known that it would be necessary for him to attain nearly this altitude to clear the Simplon Pass, the summit of which rises 6,592 feet. He maintained apparently this altitude for at least a half hour, and followed over the road built by Napoleon in 1800 over the Simplon Pass. He accomplished the eight miles that brought him over the top of Simplon Pass and then sailed gracefully over the 18 miles down to Domodossola.

Arriving there, he had left the hardest part of his journey behind him, having escaped the high peaks and the jumble of rocky gorges on this side of the summit. The remaining distance to this city offers less difficulty but takes the aviator over Lake Maggiore, and a succession of plains to the goal.

The distance from Brig, Switzerland, to Milan, is 75 miles, and the prize was for the aviator who should make the first flight, starting from a table land 900 feet above sea level at the head of the Rhone Valley near Brig, Switzerland. In addition to reaching a height that would bring him over the Simplon summit, and in doing which he must suffer severely from the cold, the aviator was required to guide his frail craft over wide chasms, notably the Gorge of Ysette, where a safe descent would be quite impossible and an accident must mean almost certain death. Strong winds are the rule along the entire route.

Aviation experts had predicted freely that the only alternative to a successful flight across the Alps was the death of the aviator. Signal fires along the Napoleon road marked the way as far as Domodossola, and the rest of the course was indicated by flags and buoys anchored on Lake Maggiore. The summit of the pass at Moscera was illuminated with oxhydrique lights, and a captive balloon showed the finish line at the aerodrome here.

Chavez's most notable feat up to yesterday was in establishing a new altitude record. On September 3 he rose to a height of 8,271 feet.

Power For Falls.

Niagara Falls, Sept. 24.—Gen. F. V. Greene, president of the Ontario Power Co., met the City Council yesterday and the aldermen wanted the power company president to fix the price of power to the city after an agreement, which has about thirty months to run, expires. Under the terms of the agreement the power company enjoys exemption from taxation, and the city buys power at $10. It is understood that negotiations will at once be opened between the hydro-electric commission and the city for power supply after the expiration of the agreement.

Story Is Not Correct.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The story of a Canadian representative at Washington is not correct.

The Government has no intention of appointing anyone in the immediate future, although, as stated by Sir Wilfrid Laurier last session, the time will probably come when such an appointment will be made. The question is not now before the Government.

The Bristol Cruisers.

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Gerard Fiennes, in a criticism of the Canadian naval plans, says that Bristol cruisers are not effective for commerce protection. Canada, he says, is too anxious to stand alone, and has failed to realize that the safety of each part of the Empire can only be secured by the combined force of the whole nation.

Seeking Divorce.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—Notice of four applications for divorce will appear in today's Canada Gazette. The applicants are Lorne Forbes, Edinburgh; Mrs. Arthur Grant, Wellington; Mrs. Henry D. Hopkinson, Petrolea; and Mrs. Stanley E. Cottage Grove, Dauphin, Man.

New Electric Railway.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Niagara, Welland and Lake Erie Railway Co. will apply to Parliament next session for power to construct and operate an electric railway from Niagara Falls, N.Y., by way of Welland, Fort Colborne and Port Dover.

Officers Elected

Members of the Moral and Social Reform Meets In Toronto—Dr. A. D. Watson Favors a Recall System For Unsatisfactory Officials—Indians Need Examinations, Says the Executive Board.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—The interdenominational general board of moral and social reform had its annual meeting here yesterday, Rev. Dr. Carman presiding. Several matters of public interest received attention, and Supt. Rogers of the provincial police department was honored with the praise and support of the board, which was "delighted to be able to say" that law enforcement in New Ontario was considerably better under the new police system, and that the superintendent had "shown a determination to have these laws thoroughly enforced, and to insist upon incorruptibility and competency on the part of the members of his force." The resolution continues: "Your executive regrets to have to report an exception to this satisfactory condition of things in law enforcement in Ontario in the case of the City of Windsor and adjacent communities. The Lord's Day Act has been enforced so as to prevent the importation, sale, and distribution of American Sunday papers on Sunday, the Attorney-General having formally refused consent when application was made by the Lord's Day Alliance ; the enforcement of the act against this glaring infraction. And we regret to observe that prominent citizens of Windsor are at present taking action which, if effective, must inevitably result in weakening the discipline of the provincial force.

"Your executive would, therefore, recommend the council to take such action as it deems wise to support the Government in maintaining thorough discipline in this force, and a thorough enforcement of the laws in which we have special interest."

The King-Skill release was the subject of a memorial to the Prime Minister "in the hope that he will take such action as will avert as far as possible serious evils likely to result from the public utterances of the minister of justice in regard to the matter reported upon."

Dr. A. D. Watson suggested an application of the "recall" system in relation to certain public offices out of sympathy with popular sentiment. He mentioned license inspector, crown attorney, attorney-general or even occasionally to a minister of the crown.

The executive made a number of recommendations in regard to the Indians, among which was a clause condemning the exploiting of Indians at exhibitions, and one asking for an investigation into the conditions of Indian marriage. The executive recommendation also made references to the lands of the Indians. Hon. George E. Foster, however, claimed that this matter was outside the jurisdiction of the council.

"The law at present is a farce," said Rev. Mr. Burke of Kingston, in stating that most of the boats running down the St. Lawrence had open bars, and at the end of the season were fined $180, which simply amounted to purchasing a license.

The executive of the council were requested to prepare a new course in social science. It was stated that several of the books being used at the present time by the different denominations were opposed to prohibition, and the Presbyterian book was submitted as an example. Dr. Shearer, however, considered that the ministers should be able to read up both sides.

The following officers were elected: Hon. president, Most Rev. S. P. Matheson, D.D., LL.D., primate of the Church of England in Canada; president of the Trades and Labor Congress; secretary, Rev. J. D. Shearer; treasurer, Rev. Dr. W. T. Graham; other members of the executive, Dr. T. A. Moore, representing the Methodist Church; Archdeacon Inglis, Anglican Church; W. R. Raney, K.C., Presbyterian; Prof. E. M. Kierstead, D.D., Baptist; Charles J. Copp, M.D., Congregational; J. G. O'Donoghue, Trades and Labor Congress; Ernest Darle, Dominion Grange and Farmers' Association; Col. Mapp, Salvation Army; Dr. Watson, Canadian Purity Association.

Seal Gets Being Broken Up.

Regina, Sask., Sept. 24.—It is said that the energy with which the charge of chloroforming a woman passenger is being pushed again C.P.R. Brakeman Lynch, is due to the fact that several complaints of similar character had been made during the present season, and the company has, therefore, decided to break up what appears to be a gang operating on lady passengers in sleepers of transcontinental trains.

On the very train on which Mrs. Hawthorne claims an attempt was made to chloroform her, nine other similar complaints were alleged to have been made the object of which was undoubtedly robbery.

The Presbyterian Synod.

London, Sept. 24.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Chronicle says the protectionists are in dread of Canada's antipathy, especially as regards treaty-making, and claims that this fear is perceptible in the language of such a cardinal speaker as Austen Chamberlain. The Chronicle points out the futility of asserting Canadian whatever feeling (hope may be in Canada in favor of commercial preference, the decision and fate of that power for a

Another Woman Suicides.

Hamilton, Sept. 24.—The body of the woman who committed suicide off the revetment wall yesterday morning, the third woman to suicide at this spot inside a month, has been identified as that of Mrs. James Lancaster, whose husband resides in London. She was working as a housekeeper for E. T. Pritchard, King William street. So far the police have been unable to find out anything about her. She came to this city about a year ago. She claimed she had trouble with her husband.

New Bridge Company.

Ottawa, Sept. 24.—The Canada Gazette contains notice of the incorporation of "The British Empire Bridge Co." of Montreal, with a capital stock of five million dollars.

This is a combination of the British Consolidated Co. of Darlington, and the Railway Carriage Co. of Birmingham, which is securing Canadian incorporation, it is said, with the object of establishing works at Lachine. The company will tender for the superstructure of the Quebec bridge.

Fought for Woman's Body.

Montreal, Sept. 24.—There was a bitter fight yesterday over the body of Mrs. K. B. Mumford, who hanged herself in the Corona Hotel Thursday morning. The rivals were S. C. Bolgatti, a partner of Mumford's in their fashion dry goods house, and Mrs. Mary Smith, 2038A Mance street, Montreal, who claimed that the dead woman was her long-lost sister. In proof she produced a photo. The coroner decided that the husband had first claim.

Local Option Vaudeville, Other Things Discussed by Moral Reform League

The Temperance and Moral Reform League of this city held a regular meeting in the Y. last night, with their newly elected president, Mr. F. H. Hassard, in the chair.

After general business had been transacted, the plans of the local option campaign were discussed, as well as the advisability of further reduction of licenses. The League maintains that eight licenses would amply meet the city's requirements. The prevention of solicitors was also considered. It was thought that a city by-law should be passed prohibiting buildings used as residences, where there is a public frontage. Residences at the rear of lots and in lanes have a tendency to become haunts of vice, and as the thin edge of the wedge is ready, it would be an opportune time to prevent it before it has a serious foothold.

Complaints were received regarding the tendency of some of the vaudeville performances in connection with the moving picture shows. The League considers that a cheap, clean amusement is desirable. The picture concerns have filled that requirement, but in some few cases the low class of vaudeville has been introduced. The League has appointed a committee to investigate these complaints and to ascertain if any remedy is available. The League proposes to consult with the school board and ministerial association regarding some phases of educational work that would be helpful for the young people especially. The League would appreciate any information regarding immoral conditions or violation of law, that would be of service in the moral interests of the community. Information can be sent to either the president or the secretary, Mr. A. H. Cunningham.

With The Queen's Own Rifles Another Interesting Letter from Mr. Walford Hatton

Here is another very interesting letter from Walford Hatton, son of Mr. G. W. Hatton, with the Queen's Own Rifles in Ireland:

On Manoeuvres,
10th, 1910.

Dear Mother,—The next day after I wrote you, we marched seventeen miles, passing through Winchester, four and a half miles to camp, at Lord Shelley's estate where we were reviewed by the Duke of Connaught. Winchester is a lovely and put us much in mind of Quebec, and much hilly country indeed. I suffered a great deal with my feet, which, though not blistered burned and pained dreadfully. It was just nerve which kept going for twelve miles to our camp on commons, covered with gorse which penetrated our rubber sheet and blankets; it seems to be between thistles and fir scrub arriving at camp, the Buffs passing in, and we dropped down pretty well all in, but in better shape I think, than the regulars, who had much or more than we do. After ourselves a little rub down changed socks, then dinner which met us at about two o'clock. Thirty we put up our tents, and had better believe we did no hurry running around. Next day having been declared midnight, we were up at five, tents at five-thirty, breakfast and fell in at six-forty-five, marched very fast for about ten through hedgy roads, covered flint pebbles. I felt much about two-thirty we came in the artillery and deployed advance for about a mile where took over. About four we advanced at five-thirty came up to our half battery, who were in the line. At six o'clock, after a very afternoon, we got the and then formed up and after ard, though we did not in location. However, feeling tired out, and in two hours, a six mile tramp, we found tents, no blankets and about issued to us, and after a in the open, slept tight till four, though some felt chilly. Breakfast at five-fifteen, and marched out. Finish and it to-day, and am feeling light. Am writing this waiting for the enemy to advance we are seven miles from camp. I am enclosing an of yesterday's operations, more films. Never felt than to-day, feet all right. Promptly washed bottle and one shirt till to-night, have operations with our in contact being on duty; but that was than several others. They will not permit us to fill our bottles from anything other than the water wagon, which will not issue any. Had my clothes on since Tuesday, and only one wash.

It seems to be a point of honour to keep up, and I think the fellows would rather die than give in. We are in better shape than the regulars, who have had several men drop out. Several of our officers are sick, and I believe our captain is seriously ill in London.

Deployed and lay down yesterday in ploughed fields and stubble; did not seem to hurt our uniforms any, though I do not think I can feel clean in them again. W.

Basingstoke,
11th Sept., 1910.

I expect that you will receive this with the one written yesterday. We fought a retreating fight and got the decision and reached camp at 6 p.m., having marched about twenty-three miles, and as usual were played into camp by the Buffs, who had also helped put up our tents, they having been in camp some little time before us. Am in camp with about 30,000, all branches. Have another field day to-morrow, and the next day entrain for London at 2 p.m., where we will have a fine time. Basingstoke is a commonplace little village, not much of interest, but some very ancient buildings; had dinner in the Red Lion Hotel here, over two hundred years old. Still fit, and feeling better as the days go on, and enjoying everything but the marchings—and do not mind them much either, if not too long.

The Buffs look on us as brothers, as I may have told you: and a mighty fine lot of fellows they are. They were founded in 1573, and belong to Kent County, London. The other regiments fraternize, too, so that we have lots of company; in fact, our lines are always full of soldiers. They say we are making good, probably because they did not expect much, and we are on our mettle. I think that in marching at least, we have won their respect. They have many a laugh over our conduct in speaking to our officers, and in turning out in the morning, though we are pretty strict ourselves; they are, of course, much more so. Well, will write next from London, where we are to stay at the Duke of York's School. Cheerio. WALFORD.

Mr. Stratton's Horses Were Again Winners on Last Day of Ogdensburg Fair

OGDENSBURG, SEPT. 23.—The great Ogdensburg Horse Show came to a conclusion to-day, and the attendance, contributed by boats, trains etc., thronged the grounds to repletion. A large proportion of the attendance was Canadian, (Ogdensburg being just across the River from Prescott, and practically Brockville). It is hard to conceive that a city of 18,000 population could attract such an immense attendance. It was remarked as evidence of the growing interest in the development of the breeding of the highest type of horse, that the horse show ring attracted more attention and drew more people than the speeding events on the race track. The horses shown by Canadian exhibitors were of the highest type of excellence in all respects, and were a surprise to the Americans, who in this got a new idea of the enterprise of their Canadian cousins.

The Canadian horses kept up their winning stride to the last heat, and to-day repeated the records of the whole week.

"Shawhill Princess," Stratton, Peterborough, carried off over seven other entries, the first for the best horse shown before an appropriate vehicle—for conformation, style, and all-round action, driven by a lady—in this case Mrs. Jones of Brockville.

Combination class, saddle and harness, six entries—third, "Brigham Ruth," Stratton, Peterborough.

Single actor or high stepper, eleven entries—First, "My Pride," Stratton, Peterborough.

Saddle horse, any height, six entries—Second, "Ruth," Stratton, Peterborough.

Hackney horse, shown on line, ten entries—Second "Latest News," Stratton, Peterborough.

Matched pair high steppers, eight entries, first, "My Pride" and "Perfect Dream," Stratton, Peterborough.

This was the last competition in the harness horse classes, and was a fight to the finish, all the best Canadian and American entries being on hand.

The really final event was Hon. Clifford Sifton's horses on the high jump, won by "Confidence," which was first at Cobourg, and has the best record in the world for a high jump.

Note.—At the urgent request of the committee of the Montreal Horse Show Mr. Stratton has consented to send his string of horses to that event, which takes place in the Arena, Montreal, beginning on Monday, 26th inst. The horses left Ogdensburg to-day for Montreal.

A Victory for Canada.

The Toronto World says:

During the present week about seventy-five thousand people have visited the greatest of the United States Agricultural and Horse Show fairs, held this year at Ogdensburg, N. Y. Although this fair is on the American side of the St. Lawrence, it is largely a Canadian fair. If the exhibits from the Canadian side were withdrawn it would, like many other of the state fairs in the United States, go to pieces. Those who have been present at other state fairs say that this show has been the best of the year.

The Canadian horses exhibited were a match for those present from New York, and the honours were at least divided, if not taken more generally by Canadians. Hon. Clifford Sifton, with his string of jumpers, had too little competition. Whatever competition there was between his own horses, a sthey carried off all the prises in the jumping events. In the harness classes, the Canadians need not be ashamed of their exhibits. The string of hackneys of Hon. J. R. Stratton were those shown by him at the Toronto Industrial Fair, and the Canadians who saw them there say that they were seldom equalled. In the great event of the four-in-hand, Mr. Stratton's horses took the first prize from the New York horses exhibited, in keen competition, and in the other leading event—the best collection of three horses owned by one individual—Mr. Stratton's horses again came out victorious. In still other evnts they were about equally divided in firsts and seconds. Dr. Young of Toronto, and Mr. Maclean of Brockville, were also winners, and had on exhibition some good horseflesh. There was one thing that was particularly noticeable, and that was that the taste of the people was for show horses rather than for trotting horses. Messrs. Graham and Smith and Richardson, in the Clyde and Percheron horses, as well as Hon. Senator Beath in the hackney stallions, made exhibits worthy of Canada, as also did Crow & Murray, of Toronto, in carriage horses.

KNOX CHURCH SERVICE FOR MEN TO-MORROW

The annual rally services in Knox Church will be held to-morrow. A men's service will be held in the evening and a male choir will assist with the music. The address will be given by the Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler, a man who has had wonderful success in his work among men. He will address the boys of St. Paul's Church at 4.15 p.m.

In the afternoon the Sabbath School Rally will be held and a large attendance of scholars and friends is looked for. The offering will be devoted to Home Missions and the addresses will be given by Rev. Mr. Stewart.

MR. JOHN KERR HONOURED BY A PRESENTATION

Mr. John Kerr, Mark street, East City, who leaves on Monday for Toronto to attend the University, was pleasantly surprised by a number of his friends on Thursday evening, when they called at his home and presented him with a very handsome set of military brushes as a mark of the esteem and regard in which they held him. The presentation was made by Mr. T. Record, whilst Mr. Bert. Gillespie read the address. Mr. Kerr expressed his thanks in suitable terms. Some of the young ladies in the party served refreshments and a very pleasant evening was passed. Mr. Kerr is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and his many friends here will wish him every success at the University of Toronto.

McDonald, D.P.A., Toronto.

CARING FOR JEWELLERY

Women who own valuable jewellery should take personal care of it and intelligent care at that. Leaving fine gold and precious stones to rattle around in a dusty jewel box is giving them not attention but neglect.

Clean gold and silver by scrubbing with soft soapsuds with a soft toothbrush. After washing cover them with sawdust to dry. Rubbing half a lemon on silver will keep it from blackening and tarnishing.

Diamonds must also be brushed lightly with soapsuds and rinsed in cologne later. Keep the edges in the diamond setting clean, scraping them gently with a clean toothpick, not hard enough to loosen the stone.

To cleanse pearls never use water. Water turns pearls black and spoils all their beauty. Foolish as it may sound, shutting them up with a piece of ashwood will keep them white without any further precaution. Pearls are the most sensitive of all gems and show easily the bodily and mental health of the wearer. Moreover, they lose their lustre and die if not worn at all.

A bit of pusty rubbed on a champis skin will keep opals clean. These most beautiful of all stones in spite of their bad reputation will shine with undimmed radiance forever if gently treated by this method.

To clean clear gems shred pure soap in warm water until a later is obtained and then add fifteen drops of sal volatile. Dry and polish with a soft cloth.

VALUE OF CRESS

Lettuce is one of the most easily digested of all green vegetables.

Watercress is another valuable green food. The Greeks realized its merit as a mental stimulant, and "Eat cress and learn more wit." Pliny believed that watercress eaten with vinegar had the power to restore sanity, but this, with many other of Pliny's ideas on therapeutics, must, I fear, be taken with salt. Watercress, however, does take high rank among antiscorbutic possessing the double quality of food and medicine. Analyzed, it contains a sulpho-nitrogenous essential oil, a bitter extract, iodine, iron, phosphate, water, and other salts—properties which enable it to promote digestion, to clear the skin, and to induce perspiration. It grows very generously in France.

FUND INCREASES

Many Employees of Factories Send Donations.

The Examiner has received from "Carillon" the following communication:

As a help to a public cause, the staff of the Review to a man subscribed to the Chimes Fund, the amount being acknowledged in another column. The idea it is hoped will be taken up by all the workshops and factories of our city so that when the bells ring out in future days all will feel that they have helped. A fixed sum, say of 10, 15 or 25 cents each helps along the idea and does not prevent any more deeply interested giving outside this workroom collection. It has also been suggested that the Labour Unions be approached as well as the secret societies, so that the interest will be general to a degree. We all want those chimes, and when on the "day that was made for man," also the days there is something to celebrate, we'll hear the bells, and will feel a long felt want is gratified.

WHAT A VISITOR SAW IN A BIG CITY INDUSTRY

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear, Sir,—As a visitor yesterday to the Brenton Carpet Works, I was greatly surprised at the size and importance of this industry and the splendid work that is being turned out. The appearance of the buildings is apt to be misleading, and I feel sure that people who view them from the street car are given no idea of what is going on inside. One hundred and fifty persons are busily employed. The industry is certainly a credit to Peterborough, and a valuable asset to the city. Patriotic citizens should, it seems to me, ask for and give Brenton carpets the preference when buying. Indeed, it is to their interest in every way to do so, for they will not probably secure better goods.—Yours, etc.,

VISITOR.

AMOUNT FOR CHIMES

Sixty men and girls of the Brinton Carpet works yesterday became subscribers to St. John's Chimes Fund. This is really a splendid showing an should be an example to others. The Review Printing Office sent contributions from every employee in the building and a generous instalment was also received from the Canadian General Electric works. All these highly valued gifts chiefly from the artisans of Peterborough, together with several individual subscriptions has brought the fund at noon today up to $4,250.00.

Assyrian Seals.

The ancient Assyrians nearly 6,000 years ago put in moist clay their seals, engraved in intaglio upon precious stones, on chests and doors, in order to prevent their being opened. There were no locks or keys in those days. If they wished to send a private letter they would often seal it with a hippogriff, which fabulous winged horse was regarded as the emblem of secrecy. Centuries later the Greeks and Romans adopted similar devices for the same purpose.

Meeting Was a Private One.

Toronto, Sept. 24.—A deputation from Oxford County asking for the appointment of a commission to investigate charge of alleged grafts in the building of roads in the county, waited upon Hon. J. J. Foy yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was a private one, and nothing was given out as to what transpired.

Joseph Moir Killed.

Wingham, Sept. 24.—A serious runaway accident occurred near here yesterday, resulting in the death of Mr. Joseph Moir, ex-reeve of the township of Culross. Mr. Moir, who lives about five miles out in the country, was driving into town, when his horse took fright at an automobile some little distance ahead. The horse turned suddenly in the road, throwing Mr. Moir from the buggy. When picked up Mr. Moir was found to be very seriously injured, and was removed to the hospital here, where he died shortly after his arrival. He leaves a family of several sons and daughters. Coroner Dr. Kennedy opened an inquest, a jury being sworn in and a post-mortem held.

Regina, Sask., Sept. 24.—Charged with attempting to chloroform a lady passenger on a C.P.R. eastbound train, No. 2, on Aug. 9 last, William Patrick Lynn, a C.P.R. brakeman, was yesterday committed to stand his trial by Magistrate Hefferan at the barracks of the mounted police. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

The victim, Mrs. Blanchflower, was traveling with her husband, Assistant Paymaster Blanchflower of the British navy, from Vancouver to Montreal.

Giving evidence yesterday, Mrs. Blanchflower stated that she woke with a choking sensation, just in time to see an arm withdrawn from the curtains. She caught sight of a trainman's lantern and a uniform. The smell of the chloroform was around her.

AN ASSOCIATION OF CHARITEIS TO BE FORMED IN THE CITY

Praiseworthy Project Planned at An Enthusiastic Meeting Held Yesterday—Place Charities of the City Upon a Systematic Basis.

THE OBJECT AIMED AT

A large and enthusiastic meeting of ladies was held in the Y. W. C. A. building on Friday morning, for the purpose of discussing the formation of an association of charities, comprising all the charities in the city. Representatives were present from the Protestant Home, King's Daughters, Dorcas Society, St. John's, St. Paul's, Charlotte Street, Knox Church, St. Andrew's, Mark Street, St. James, Murray Street and George Street.

It was decided unanimously to ask the Mayor to call a public meeting at once with this object in view.

The Associated Charities would be religious in spirit, but not sectarian, not relief giving, but relief seeking, making alms a part only of the constructive work. The Associated Charities would not dictate, interfere with, or duplicate the work of established societies, but to fill in some of the gaps between.

It is to be a great movement, but in the Christian sense that "Whosoever will be great among you let him be the servant of all."

The Associated Charities would be a federation of the charitable societies and institutions of the city. The object would be:

1.—To make employment the basis of relief.

2.—To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.

3.—To protect the community against imposition.

4.—To reduce vagrancy and pauperism, and eradicate their true causes.

5.—To prevent children growing up as paupers.

6.—To secure for all deserving cases of destitution prompt and adequate relief.

7.—To elevate the home life, health and habits of the poor.

These objects we endeavour to attain:

1.—By bringing about co-operation among all charitable agencies and persons.

2.—By a system of registration to prevent imposition.

3.—By ascertaining, through investigation, the most suitable action in each and every case.

4.—By obtaining from existing charities the precise help needed; or,

5.—By giving temporary relief in cases of extreme emergency, and when all other sources fail.

6.—By careful study of the causes of pauperism, and of the best methods of dealing with destitution and degradation.

7.—By furnishing the needy with a friend who will counsel them, safeguard their self-respect, and inspire thrift and better living.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Miss Rena Sheurer, of Otonabee, is the guest of Miss Florence Hunter, 548 George street.

Mr. Joseph Tombs and his mother, Mrs. H. Tombs, of Garden Hill, are in the city to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hickey, Engleburne Avenue, East City, have returned from a pleasant holiday spent at Brighton and Presqu'il Point.

Mrs. Greenaway, who has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hickey, Ashburnham, returned to Port Dalhousie yesterday, where she will join her husband for a trip down the St. Lawrence to Montreal.

PITY THE BABIES.

All babies whose mothers do not know about Dr. Chase's Ointment are truly to be pitied. They are sure to have skin troubles of one kind or another, such as chafing, skin irritation, scald, tetter, milk rash or baby eczema and nothing can bring them comfort so quickly as Dr. Chase's Ointment. It stops itching promptly and heals the skin beautifully.

MRS. DELINE CAME TO HER DEATH BY FOUL PLAY

although she had been asked to do so by Mrs. McMillan and others.

Mrs. Matthew Lytle was the next witness called. Her evidence corroborated that of the previous witness. Mrs. Powell had come to their place at 10.30 o'clock and she had gone over to Deline's house about a mile distant. She found Deline in the living room with the baby. The other child was on the couch in the living room. Mrs. Powell and she had waited at the house while Deline and her husband had gone to get the neighbours. The body was not touched while they were away. "We took a light and went to the door of the kitchen and saw the body lying on the floor" said the witness, "but we did not go any closer." Deline did not come back to the house until after my husband came back. He said that he had been over to Robert Buchanan's house. There was nothing said about what he had witnessed."

Witness did not go to see whether Mrs. Deline was dead or not. "That was the last of the night she was in," replied, "but we did not touch her."

The widower corroborated Mrs. Powell's testimony about Deline coming to their house and about the position of the body. Witness had examined Mrs. Deline's clothing but not closely. She had noticed that it was torn a little about the neck but could not say whether it was a fresh tear or not. Witness had been there when the body was undressed and washed. The clothes were soiled. Deline came to see the body after it was washed. He at no time in her hearing had made an explanation of how it happened.

Mrs. Wm. McMillen gave similar evidence as to being called over to Deline's house on the night in question. She had seen a wound on the woman's wrist and described the position of the body in about the same way as the previous witnesses. The witness had not touched the clothing of the body. Nothing had been said as to how the death had occurred. She had asked Deline if he had seen any strangers around and he had replied in the negative.

Mrs. David McCuaig, another neighbour, who assisted in the washing of the body, testified to the position of the body as it lay in the kitchen. The wrapper was open at the neck down to the breast, and her legs were exposed to the knee. Witness had never seen Mrs. Deline until she was dead, except at a distance. She had taken care of Deline's little boy while he went in and looked at the body after it was dressed. Deline had said nothing to her about the manner of his wife's death. He had been asked to go to see the body before and said that he could not.

Medical Testimony

Dr. Holdcroft of Havelock gave evidence as to the post mortem examination upon the body of the deceased which was made on the afternoon of Friday, Sept. 16th. He described the position of the body as he found it. The remains were brought into Havelock and the autopsy was made by himself assisted by Dr. Ford of Norwood. He gave the particulars of the finding in a written statement which showed that most of the organs were in a normal condition, except that the blood vessels in the brain were somewhat clogged. There were bruises on the face, arm and leg.

The Cause of Death

"Have you come to any conclusion as to the cause of death? asked the Crown Attorney.

"The only conclusion that I could arrive at was that death resulted from shock. There were no injuries that could have caused death.

"Was there any evidence of a struggle, as far as the internal organs were concerned?"

"No sir, but the marks on the body would show that there must have been a struggle. Death was caused by a shock or fright to the system," returned Dr. Holdcroft.

"Have you ever attended the deceased?"

"Not that I can remember of," was the reply.

Dr. Holdcroft explained that about a year ago Deline got some medicine from him, but whether it was for his wife or himself he could not remember.

Dr. S. P. Ford of Norwood, who assisted in the post-mortem examination agreed in the report given by Dr. Holdcroft and in the opinion of that physician that death was due to shock. "In my opinion," remarked Dr. Ford, "death was sudden. I would judge that from the condition of the heart."

The Dead Woman's Mother

Mrs. Mary Parks, mother of the deceased who said she lived near Bannockburn, was the next witness.

"When did you see your daughter last before her death," she was asked.

"Last fall," was the reply.

"What were her relations with her husband?"

"Well, his mother and her father were first cousins" replied the witness.

"I mean, how did she get on with him?" asked the Crown Attorney.

"I remember one day", was the reply, "we were talking and she said to me, 'Ma, you don't know the life I lead.'"

"Did you consent to the marriage?"

"I wasn't asked about it."

"You were not in favour of it?"

"No, sir".

"Did you try to prevent it?"

"Yes."

"Did you know anything about your daughter having pains in her head," inquired Mr. Gordon.

"No, sir."

Deline's Statement About Wife

Samuel Buchanan, a young man, testified that he knew Deline. The latter had been at his father's house on the day Mrs. Deline died.

He had left there about dusk and had gone to Mr. McMillan's on the way home.

Did he make any statement about his wife?"

"Not then."

"Did he at any time say anything about it."

"Well on the Monday before he said: 'I don't know what to make of my woman.' 'I asked him what was the matter and he replied that she had a pain in her head, that she had it for some time. He then said: 'I wouldn't be surprised to go home some night and find her dead.'"

"Did he repeat that statement at any other time?"

"Not in my hearing."

To Mr. Gordon witness said that Deline had sent for some medicine for his wife. It was procured in Havelock and given to Deline on the night his wife died.

"He was a rather talkative fellow?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Well, not very," was the reply.

Wife's Death Would Not Surprise

Similar evidence was given by the next witness, another young man named William J. Doughty, who said that on the Monday previous to his wife's death, Deline had remarked that he would not be surprised to go home some night and find his wife dead. He said that he had had the services of three doctors where he came from and of Dr. Holdcroft since coming to Belmont. Robert Buchanan, a neighbour of Deline's, testified that Deline had come to his place on the morning of his wife's death. He had not stated what his errand was or what he wanted. Deline told the witness that he was thinking about going to the doctor to get some medicine for his wife. He said that his wife had an awful pain in her head. He said that he expected some time when he got home he would find her dead. He further said that he did not know whether his wife would take the medicine if he did get it. Deline had remarked "I don't know what I will do with the children if anything should happen."

Ethel Buchanan, a daughter of the previous witness said that she saw Mrs. Deline about five o'clock on the evening of her death. Mrs. Deline was in the garden at her home carrying in some tomatoes when the witness called.

"I asked her how she was," explained the witness, "and she said that she felt some better." "I asked her about the pain in her head and she replied that sometimes she felt it and at others she did not.

Changed His Trousers

William McMillan stated that he knew Deline. He had called at his place about 8.30 o'clock on the night his wife was found dead and had remained some time. Later the witness was informed that Mrs. Deline was dead and he in company with his wife and Ethel Buchanan went over to the Deline home. Deline was not there then but witness met him in the field outside the house and Deline had asked him to go into the house and get him another pair of trousers explaining that he had torn his clothes in getting over a fence. Witness had seen a tear across the back. Deline told his wife where to get the other pair and witness went into the house and brought them out. Deline changed trousers and left the pair he had in the cellar window. Later the witness had seen them in the cellar between two barrels. The window was open and they were found. He had not noticed if the trousers were soiled. To Mr. Gordon the witness said that the ladies were in the house when Deline had asked him to go and get him another pair of trousers.

Matthew Lytle, another neighbour gave similar evidence as to seeing the trousers in the cellar and of telling Constable Williams where they were. Deline had told him that he had a pain in her head and had had some time.

Constable's Evidence

Constable Williams was the next called. He testified to having Deline's trousers and Mrs. Deline's wrapper to Toronto to be later analyzed by the Provincial Analyst. Professor Ellis found the trousers in the cellar of Deline's home on Monday last. He had asked Deline what stains had on the night he found his wife dead. Deline replied "Why those on, except that I have a few stains on now." Witness asked again, "Are you sure those stains on now." Witness asked again, "Are you sure those cloth you had on when your Mr. Buchanan's," and Deline replied, "No, I had another pair of trousers on."

Finished the evidence and the hall cleared until the jury should hear the evidence and come to a decision. After twenty minutes deliberation the jury returned with the verdict as recorded above.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD GIRL WAS MURDERED BODY FOUND IN CELLAR--THROAT SLASHED

Attended Goderich Fair on Tuesday Last and Then Disappeared—Anxious Father Led Search Party, Which Finally Came Upon Her Remains.

THERE IS NO CLUE YET

Special to The Examiner.

GODERICH, SEPT. 25.—The mysterious disappearance of Lizzie Anderson, the seventeen year old daughter of Wesley Anderson of Saltford, was solved this morning by the finding of her dead-body, with her throat slashed from ear to ear. That a most dastardly murder has been committed is evident by the appearance of the body and the surroundings of the place where the crime occurred. Nearly every stitch of clothing had been torn from the body.

Attended Goderich Fair.

The unfortunate girl had come from her home in Saltford, a little village across the River Maitland, to attend the fall fair here last Tuesday afternoon, promising to return home in the evening. Early in the evening a boarder at their Saltford home met the young girl and asked her to accompany him home, to which she replied that she would not leave before 9 o'clock. Her brother waited for her at the main exit, but failed to notice her on the way out. The girl not returning home that night led to great anxiety, and immediate search was instituted by the family. The fear that she had been persuaded by some of the Midway performers to leave town led to a search by the local police in the neighbourhood where fall fairs were in progress. No trace could be found, however, and information as to her whereabouts was not forthcoming from those who had been in conversation with her on the Fair grounds that evening.

The Shocking Discovery.

This morning a searching party of four, including the father, made a careful investigation of the surrounding banks and empty buildings, and, passing to the south of the Exhibition grounds, decided to look into an empty house just across the street when, to the horror of the leader, on stepping into the cellar from an outside entrance, the mutilated body of the girl was found lying across the floor.

The other members of the searching party were immediately summoned. The father was prostrated with grief when he saw the body.

Two of the party hurried to apprise the police of the crime, while the others stood guard over the house until Crown Attorney Seager arrived to take charge of affairs.

The body was removed to the undertaker's, while the clothing was left on the scene until examined by the jury, which will inspect the premises this afternoon.

Police Are Working.

The local police are working on the case, and are following any suggestive clue in the hopes of gaining some definite information which may assist in tracing the culprit. The Provincial detectives have been wired for to take charge of the affair and an inquest will be held by Coroner Holmes tomorrow morning. The residents are deeply interested over the tragedy, and, while the night was bright, no one in the neighbourhood seems to have noticed any unusual incident or heard any cries from the girl.

Signs of a Struggle.

Miss Anderson was very slight and, in fact, of a sickly disposition, but with a determination which would deeply resent any attack of brutality, and the appearance of the cellar floor gives evidence of a desperate struggle.

The father is a labourer in Saltford, and lives in an old frame hotel at the east end of Maitland bridge, part of the house being rented to a number of Italian labourers, working on the electric railway.

TORONTO, SEPT. 26.—Superintendent J. E. Rogers of the Provincial police was notified of the finding of the body by the County Crown Attorney yesterday and despatched Inspector Wm. Greer to conduct an investigation. Mr. Greer will reach the scene this morning and will be in touch with the central department throughout his inquiry.

WANTED IN PHILADELPHIA FOR EMBEZZLEMENT; MAN HAS BEEN ARRESTED HERE

Harry Neilson, Alias Harry Nester, Arrested by Local Police on a Charge of Stealing $2,000 and of Forfeiting His Bail Bond---Will Be Taken Back To-night.

Harry M. Neilson, alias Harry Nester, was arrested here last night at his boarding house, Murray street, on a charge of embezzling $2,000 and forfeiting his bail in Philadelphia, Pa.

Chief Thompson received a message from Philadelphia last night to the effect that the wanted man was thought to be in this city and a good description was given of Neilson. Acordingly a search was begun for the missing fugitive and the police suspicions fell upon a man who has passed under the name of Nester since coming to Peterborough. He was arrested by two officers at 11 o'clock last night and lodged in the police cells, where he admitted that he was Neilson and the man wanted in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia authorities were notified at once and an officer is expected from the Quaker city to-night to take his prisoner back with him.

Neilson or Nester as he was called here, has been in the city for four or five weeks and has been selling real estate in the city. Neilson is about thirty-seven years of age and speaks with a slight accent. He became connected with a local real estate company since coming to the city. They knew nothing of his past and employed him out of charity, as he said he was out of work as well as out of funds.

AROUSED AGAINST THE FOREIGNERS AT GODERICH

Examiner Special.

GODERICH, ONT., SEPT. 26.—Provincial Inspector Wm. Greer arrived here this afternoon to investigate the brutal murder of Lizzie Anderson, whose partially nude body, with its throat cut, was found in a cellar here after being missing four days. All the Italians in the neighbourhood have been closely questioned by the local police, but no clue has been obtained. The country side is in an uproar and threatends driving out or lynching foreigners.

Pulled Chair From Beneath His Wife; Now She's Dead And He's In Jail For Murder

Examiner Special.

CHICAGO, SEPT. 26.—Jokingly, James White, aged 60, pulled the chair from beneath his wife, as she was sitting down, this morning, and the result is that the woman died immediately afterwards. White was arrested for wife murder.

BI-PLANE DROPPED

Special Wire to the Examiner.

PARIS, FRANCE, SEPT. 26.—For the second time in the competition for the 125,000 prize, Aviator Lordam fell from a great height, with a passenger. Both men were seriously hurt. The biplane was smashed.

HUDSON BAY.

Canada's right to Hudson Bay and all that therein is—a notable wealth of whales and smaller fish—is established beyond reasonable doubt. The question of its navigability to a practical extent, is greatly enlightened by the visit of Earl Grey, and of Professor McNaughton, who accompanied him. Doubts that have been felt upon the question of whether Hudson Bay is open for navigation sufficiently long to permit of this route becoming an important factor in the shipment of grain direct to Europe, will be more fully dispelled, and furnish additional justification for the construction of the Hudson Bay Railway, which comes within the policy of the Laurier Government. We have, it is true, a somewhat shorter wheat crop than last year. That is only one year and in the years to come, by the way the West is filling up with settlers, the yield will be immensely increased, and all existing avenues of transportation will be glutted. The Hudson Bay Railway and the sea route it will render available, will be needed, it is safe to say, long before the railway is finished. The building of the line will open to settlement new areas of crop producing country, and will, in addition, make available for Canadian exploitation the immense stores of fish the Bay contains. Ontario and the Dominion can engage in no grander rivalry than in a railway race to Hudson Bay in two different directions—northward and eastward, respectively. There are enough elements of industrial and commercial importance in Hudson Bay and on the way thither, to warrant both governments in bringing these elements into practical play. "On to Hudson Bay" is a slogan both Governments can use to national and provincial advantage.

WHERE RIGHT BECOMES WRONG

A correspondent airs his woes in this issue over the annoyance he suffered in church yesterday from the monstrous hats that some ladies wear. St. Paul, evidently, was unable to foresee the development of modern fashion in female hats, or he would not have encouraged women to remain covered in places of worship; if he had done so he would certainly have included women's head gear in his prohibition to women to "teach or usurp authority." But being a confirmed old bachelor he seemed to think that if he silenced a woman's tongue there was nothing further to be desired. Jesting aside, however, is our correspondent wrong in claiming that the monstrous and hideously ugly hats worn these days are a distinct nuisance and an outrage, not only against good tastes, but also upon the rights of others. In theatres and other places of amusements ladies are compelled to remove their hats, but in houses of worship the annoyance is permitted to continue. It would be a harsh assumption to conclude that women who wear big hats in church are not Christians, but there is no doubt that they are stumbling blocks in the way of other Christians taking an intelligent and comfortable part in public worship. Women of good taste and consideration for others are as severe in their condemnation of the big hat outrage as men. These ladies ever say that if women must follow the leadings of fashion and make spectacles of themselves, they might, as some concession to the rights of their neighbours, refrain from desecrating a house of worship with hats that would encumber the space of a haymow. No woman wearing hats such as we see in church and feel—on all sides of us—in front, at each side, and behind us—can possibly be "in the spirit on the Lord's day," nor can any one else be free from a profane desire to tear the frail and frivulous scaffolding of obstruction asunder—a mood hardly consistent with reverent, acceptable yorship. The question as to whether there is any remedy is asked in a tone of despair. Women will follow the fashion—some of them, it seems—would even follow the fashions to the warm source fro mwhence some of them emanate—for Satan finds no more active allies in his work of interfering with the worship in our churches than the monstrous hats that rouse all the old Adam in the most devout hearts. It is not understandable why women follow the fashions so recklessly. Theoretically, women dress to enhance their beauty. But every wonman, excepting, of course, sensible women, will follow the fashion no matter how hideously unbecoming it may be. Hence we have the hats; and both men and women say that, not content with stacking for some faces, unbecoming and hideous heaps of materials on their head for street wear they must needs desecrate the house of God with them, and interfere with the rights, comforts and devotions of others. The suffragettes are clamorous for the rights of women. Let them attack the wrongs of women in the way of offending head-gear. A woman has the right to wear anything she pleases, but when what she wears intereferes with the rights and comfort of others that right passes abeyance. A right exercised to excess, becomes a wrong.

PENNY BANKS.

(Detroit News.)

The system of school savings banks started 25 years ago by J. H. Thiry, of Long Island City, N.Y., has prospered amazingly. In 1,168 schools in 18 cities of this country over $5,000,000 has been deposited. The New York City school children have saved fully $1,500,000. The system has spread to 23 States and also to Porto Rico, Hawaii, and the Philippines. It has also been adopted in other lands, having been cordially welcomed in Canada. In ine years $270,000 has been deposited in the schools of Toronto alone. In France there are banks in 11,000 schools, with more than $1,500,000 deposited. Algeria has also taken up the plan. In South and West Australia it has been made a part of the postal savings system. More than 10,000,000 children have participated in this good work.

THE COMING SESSION.

(London Advertiser)

The place and time of reciprocity negotiations between the United States and Canada have not been fixed. They cannot begin and end in the two months before Parliament meets, so that probably they will be postponed until spring or summer. In that event the Government or the Opposition would have an object in raising the tariff question at the ensuing session. It bristles with difficulties for both parties, but perhaps some insurgent liberal or Conservatives will insist on dragging it in. The western Conservatives have determined to press for a reduction of the duty on agricultural implements. This is admitted by Mr. Willison, of the Toronto News, who is touring the west. It would be a strong card in the prairie provinces, and the Opposition leaders may be induced to play it in the hope that low tariff sentiment in the west will be satisfied with it, and not demand a general reduction of duties. In brief, the Opposition may surrender as outwork of protection to save the citadel. It would not be a consistent or lofty course, but the utterances of Mr. Borden on the tariff in late years have been obviously strategic. His immediate task will be to heal or conceal the breach in his own ranks. During the last session the tariff schismatics presented a bold front in caucus, and the differences could not wholly be hidden on the floor of Parliament.

It would be idle to say, however, that the difficulties are in one party camp. There are western Liberal members prepared to smite protection hip and thigh; and they will be tempted to go the western Conservatives "one better". The course of the Government must be a compromise between eastern and western opinion, but western sentiment is better organized and more militant than when the tariff was last up for revision.

THE WORK OF THE POLICE.

(Medicine Hat News.)

The report in yesterday's News that the Mounted Police had captured the half breed Favel wanted for horse stealing in Prince Albert, and the rumour that the man who got Mr. R. H. White's horse had also been captured, draws attention to the widespread work of the R.N.W.M.P. in a striking manner. It is only a week now since Dickson McKay, another half breed was traced across the boundary and brought back for the same crime. When ne considers how prevalent horse stealing once was through this country, and how easy it formerly was to evade the law by skipping over the boundary into Montana or Dakota, the rapidity with which the thief is brought to justice now-a-days is truly astonishing. Even to one entirely unfamiliar with Western methods, it must be apparent that in the unsettled state of the country, with towns twenty and thirty miles apatr and homesteaders few and far between, to loose a horse from its stall or slip it out of the corail, and then to steal away through the night, riding hard for a hundred miles or so to the boundary looks like an inviting prospect to the man with the intention to steal.

But it is not so simple as it seems. The red coats scattered about the province don't seem many in number. But they are hard riders and sure as bloodshounds on a hot scent. A description of the half breed, a note as to the horse's brand ,and a few words as to the direction which the thief took—that is sufficient and the rider of the plains is off in pursuit.

The Mounted Police don't talk much of what they do. They will not say a word till their man is landed, and very little then . But the fear of the law is instilled into the wrong doer. As year follows years and conviction follows conviction, the horse thief is being gradually put out of existence. It would not be a daring prophecy to say that in the course of a few years he will be as rare here as in the East.

NEWS OF INTEREST FROM YOUNG'S POINT

YOUNG'S POINT, SEPT. 24.—We are pleased to report that Mrs. O'Rourke is recovering from her illness.

Austin Welch has gone back to the tall timbers and it will be Christmas before we see him again. He caught and sold 40,000 minnows to visiting fishermen this season.

School Inspector Broderick was here this week and expressed himself as being highly pleased with local affairs, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Smith, the principal.

Mrs. Katie Frend, of Fort William, Ont., is visiting at Mrs. E. Robertson's. She is at present confined to the house but her many friends wish for her speedy recovery.

A good send-off was given to the English church pastor, Mr. Thompson and his sister this week in the form of a reception and musicale which was well attended. He goes to Toronto o finish up his Collegiate cours

The talk of the lakes at present is the excursion on the 28th to Bobcaygeon, under the management of Billy Batten, the evergreen and highly popular Massey Harris representative of Dummer. He is known all over and is a great favourite with old and young from one end to the other of Peterborough County. He will undoubtedly have the biggest excursion of the season and it's dollars to doughnuts that Billy, before the excursion is hardly under way, will get started as his favourite game of euchre, at which he is a champion. It is said that Billy would rather euchre han eat.

South Beach hotel has just closed for the season, and Wm. Brooks and family are moving down to Mr. P. A. Kearney's for the winter.

The Young fleet of steamers are being laid off and repainted. The Empress is in dock, and the service is now but intermittent.

The Lakeview house has again done well this season and closes this week and the Kearney family will remove to their new brick store until spring.

The past week has seen large droves of cattle and sheep pass through and still the natives wonder why the price of meat is still so high The farmer does not get such a big price, the butcher says he does not; then the Beef Trust must know more about a forced market than it admits.

Politicians are still finger with us. Among them is to be found Louis Morrison, who is stopping at the Lakeview house, a young lawyer of Chicago, who fishes from morning until night. He has patience and good success, with bass, but lost the only lunge he succeeded in hooking, but he is still after the big fellows. He says he prefers the Kawartha lakes to the much lauded Muskoka region. Nature is just as bounteous here, fishing is just as good and prices are much more reasonable. He says all this region needs is systematic advertising in a few big American cities in May and June to bring crowds here in June, July, August and September. He suggests combined action on the part of all hotel proprietors and the steamship company, and he figures out there are about 75 resorts in Kawartha Lakes who, if they established an advertising fund for next season of twenty dollars from each resort it would insure for 01500 good returns in advertising, and no hotel would be favoured, but the whole Kawartha section benefitted. The Grand Trunk has other fish to fry to get the long haul. Therefore, Kawartha Lakes resorts must look after their own interests and only by combined and enthusiastic work, can it be done.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—It is unfortunate that the open season for ducks, snipe and plover does not commence coincidentally, and, as far as the writer can judge, there is no reason why this should not be the case.

Sportsmen and naturalists will, I am sure, agree that month end opening is too early, as many of the migratory game birds are fit to be killed and eaten on the first day of September, but it might be well for the better preservation of these birds to postpone this kind of shooting till the 10th or 12th of that month. As the Ontario law now stands, one can shoot snipe and plover on the first of September, but ducks are protected for thirteen days later, though equally fit to kill. Sportsmen after all, are not immortal, and the man in pursuit of the smaller birds is very apt to blaze away at ducks, especially in the dim grey light of early dawn.

Picture yourself, Mr. Editor, working a nice piece of snipe marsh, with little ponds dotted here and there, and then the rush of wings as a well fed mallard or black duck mounts the air, perhaps not more than twenty yards away. I know your unerring aim, and cover my eyes and wait anxiously for the sharp report of your trusty No. 12, which comes all too soon, while later you weakly try to explain that you were taken by surprise, and did not quite know what the bird was.

"Five dollars and costs," I murmur and then wickedly help you to pick up the dead bird.

How often has this little scene been enacted between September 1st and the following fortnight. The game inspector will probably tell you that in his opinion man a ducky has died thus prematurely since the shooting season opened.

In other respects the game law is all right. Partridges and woodchucks should be well protected as they are and their season of danger made as brief as possible but the marsh birds should face their death sentence on the same day, and probably the 10th or 12th of September would suit all classes.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle

PREACHING TO IMPRISONED SPIRITS

"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison" (I. Peter iii, 19).

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 25.—A convention of Bible students is in session in this city. Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, as president of the International Bible Students' Association, addressed the students twice to-day. His audiences were large and intelligent. We report one of his addresses from the text foregoing. He said:—

Much speculation has been aroused by our text. Some have claimed that it signifies that Christ, after his death on the cross and before his resurrection, went to some place where human spirits are imprisoned in some kind of purgatory and there preached to them. Not only is the Catholic theory in line with this suggestion, but many Protestants hold that the dead may be purged for and thus be assisted to escape from eternal torment. All of this is wrong, as we shall show—quite contrary to the teachings of our text when viewed in the light of its context.

Those preached to were not human beings, but spirit beings—not men, but angels. This is clearly stated in verse 20, which tells us when these angels were imprisoned and why. They were imprisoned in the days of Noah at the time of the flood. They were imprisoned for disobedience. So the text (verse 19). The preached unto spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Turning back to the Genesis account of that time we find quite a complete record or history of these disobedient spirits, in the Sixth Chapter, verses 1-8.

Some time after father Adam's disobedience and his expulsion from Eden—the holy angels were permitted to visit humanity with a view to assisting men back to harmony with God. This doubtless was permitted for two reasons: First, had such an opportunity not been furnished, the angels might in the conclusion of God's great Plan, have been inclined to say, Yes, God accomplished human salvation, but in a very roundabout way and at very great cost and trouble. Had he given us an opportunity to mingle with humanity we might have had an uplifting influence upon the people and have accomplished their reconciliation to God.

God wished to forestall any such misunderstanding of the wisdom of the Plan which he had arranged and would, in due time, work out; secondly, the angels themselves never had come in contact with sin of any kind. Hence they never had been tested or tried in respect to their obedience and loyalty to the Creator. They were permitted to attempt the recovery of humanity—partly in order to test their own obedience and loyalty to God.

Our knowledge of spirit beings and the powers granted to them by the Almighty is limited to our observation of the Bible record. The angels who appeared as young men at our Lord's sepulchre and again at his ascension and who, as soon as they had accomplished the purposes of their visit, vanished, are illustrations.

We remember the account of how Abraham sat in the door of his tent and, behold, three men came to him. He received them as men, entertained them at dinner and, we read, "They did eat and talked with Abraham." They had human powers through still spirit beings. When they dematerialised they vanished.

Genesis vi, 1-8, informs us that this privilege of materialisation for the assistance of mankind was eventually misused by some of the angels as an opportunity for sinful intercourse with humanity. The time at which this transgression occurred. The declaration, "When men began to multiply on the face of the earth," might safely be estimated at about a thousand years after Adam's creation and fall. This would leave a period of 925 years to the flood. It was approximately during that long period that the angelic sons of God, seeing the daughters of men, took to themselves for wives all that they chose of the fair daughters of men. And they bare children to them. The same wanton angels were those which were of old men of violence and giants. We remember that at that early day Methuselah life was much longer than now and that mankind was generally reckoned human a century and that few became fathers sooner; and when we remember also that the children of the angels are not sometimes as boys, but mighty, mighty men, renowned men, it gives the thought that the angels, without Divine permission, had really started to propagate a new race and that their progeny were stronger than that of the pure, Adamic stock.

The disobedience of these giants would be most grievous and the lamentable example of the angels had a demoralizing effect upon the children of Adam, as well as upon their own children. All this is clearly and plainly in the context. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." What a terrible picture of the condition of things before the flood! But God was not astonished, for he had foreseen everything. He knew he had a great remedy on hand in the ark which temporarily gave the earth a suitable, temperate climate, but which the deluge should fall upon the earth and cause the great flood in Noah's day. Hence at the appropriate time God gave instructions to Noah to prepare an ark for the saving of himself and his family and the only members of Adam's race in all the earth who were not alive to the contemplated by those angels. Also some men have been deluded when we read of angelic sons of God, and have supposed that the reference was to the sons of professedly pious men. And they have even found some of the early fathers in their writings to support this view. But the Scriptures themselves are the best expositors of their own meaning, and we have no hesitation in saying that the Bible nowhere gives the slightest intimation that the sons of professedly pious men were ever called angels of God. On the contrary, the Bible uniformly styles the sons of pious men as men, and never as angels.

Turn to St. Jude's Epistle. There we read (verse 6), "The angels which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved, in age lasting chains, under darkness unto the Judgment of the Great Day." Their first estate in which they were created was the spirit or angelic condition. They left their own proper condition of living and nature, in violation of the Divine will, that they might live on a lower plane—live in sin; for the angels are sexless, though always referred to as masculine. And, our Lord declares that those begotten of the holy Spirit, who during this age shall attain to the resurrection of the dead, the "First Resurrection," will be "like unto the angels" in several respects—one of these being that they will neither marry nor be given in marriage, but be without sexual distinctions.

In harmony with this note how spiritualists hold their seances, either in absolute darkness or in a very faint light. They claim now that the spirits are getting more and more power of materialisation and that soon they will be able to materialise in broad day light and go about amongst humanity as members of the race. We do not question the power of God to restrain these fallen angels, these demons—his power to restrain them from materialising and thus doing great harm to the world. Nevertheless, we wonder if they will not be permitted by God to find some greater powers of materialisation, contrary to the Divine decree, that their course in this matter may more particularly manifest to what extent some of them have changed and relapsed and desire to be obedient, for instance, while others are still as opposed to God and righteousness as ever. There is room for this understanding in the statement of the Apostle that the chains of darkness were to control them until the Great Day—not necessarily into, that day—perhaps at its very beginning they may be permitted to gain certain liberties and do a certain measure of injury to humanity, to all who are not attentive to the Word of God, and who, therefore, will not know when these spirits are—that they are the fallen angels, the demons of the Bible.

Them are the terms used in the Scriptures in describing the fallen angels, who from earliest days have attempted to deceive humanity—representing themselves as human beings who have died and like Samuel to communicate with their friends. And they attempt to do so through spirit mediums. This is their practice from of old. Their endeavor is to break down the human will and to more and more control it. The height of their ambition and success is to fully dominate the human will, so that they may use the human body at their own leak, as when they had received full possession. Those who cannot fully master their control become demoralized, obsessed, some several spirits gaining possession of the one personality and attempting to use the same brain and body. It is estimated that one-half of all who are in insane asylums are merely victims of spirit obsession. The great remedy against all this is the Truth of God's Word. Those who accept that cannot be deceived. But the masses "perished for lack of knowledge." The sublime teaching is that while a man is dead he knows not anything, and will never know anything until the resurrection of the dead. Whereupon sinners are to be punished against all the temptations of the evil spirits.

We are not claiming that all mediums are fraudulent. Sometimes we have to be most sincere. A large number have been delivered from their awful position of acting as mediums of Satan by the reading of our public pamphlet, "Proofs that Spiritism is Demonism."

There are no human spirits to be preached to. Human beings are not spirit beings. The dust of humanity who have gone down of "the cold generation" — the disobedient angels had nothing whatever to do with generating them.

While the angels preferred to live as men in human bodies, they would not be overwhelmed like humanity in the flood, but merely dissolve, by dematerialisation, their human bodies and be, as originally, spirit beings. Satan was the first sinner against the Divine government, in his endeavor to set up a separate empire and to have humanity for his subjects. Although God had full power to destroy Satan and the other disobedient angels, he has not exercised that power. Instead he merely isolated them from himself and the holy angels and imprisoned them, in the sense that he no longer permitted them to materialise, either as a serpent or as humanity for the tempting and injury of our race. In this sense they are imprisoned — restrained of liberty.

Now let us hear St. Peter's words respecting these angels who sinned. He says (II. Peter ii, 4), "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." The word tartarus here rendered "hell" in our Common Version, is found nowhere else in the Bible. It refers to our earth's atmosphere and to the fact that these fallen angels, called demons or devils, are "the power of the air." Azazel Satan, who was originally an angel of much higher rank and nature, is their Prince. "The Prince of the power of the air," the Prince of demons. They are "cast down" in the sense of being treated ignominiously. They are "in chains of darkness," not in chains of iron. They can still go and come and be sources of temptation to humanity who are in a sinful attitude of mind. They are restrained in chains of darkness in the sense that whatever they do must be done in the dark—until their judgment time at the Great Day—at the beginning of Messiah's thousand-year day of the reign of righteousness.

Yet the men of the oars did not falter nor turn their heads. They pulled evenly and well, with the short, deep-cushion strokes of the fisherman, and Stanhope, save that they were almost in the center when the waves lost their regularity, sprinkled a paddle wherewith to twist the boat's head to meet each turn and swirl.

Steadily the powerful rug-boat crept in the wake of the steadier craft, until it became clear to the girls' strained vision that watchful helpers, trained in the rescue's turns, were manipulating another rope as a drag, then hobbling the sailor's chance to prevent his frail prize from being swamped by a heavier one.

Then a minute or so happens, a miracle of science, when the boat was yet two hundred yards away, Brand, looking out from the gallery in stony despair, suddenly behaved as one possessed of a fiend.

"Follow me!" he roared. "Come, every-body!"

He rushed into the lantern. As if her weakest sister-sufferer than Helen, he was followed by his friends to the door of the entrance.

Unheeding their astonishing, those who were left on the lodge heard shouts—blows. Then there was a shot had happened. Then leader had spoken, and deep quiet.

Down, down, down pelted, taking the steep stairs with breakneck speed, until they reached the all-room—with its thousands of gallons stored in granite tanks.

By magic, when about them, crushing the thick skin of the tanking and Brand wrenched the cover off the nearest cistern. He clapped up a thirst of the oil.

"Bring all you can carry," he shouted, and was off again with an empty jug and was followed by a score who had endured the privations and hardships of so many hours.

They understood. Why had some of them thought of it sooner, in the safe granite depths the lighthouse-cement that which had the power to subdue the roaring fury of the sea.

The first one to reach the gallery after Brand was Pyne, who chanced to be nearest to him when the hubbub arose. He found the other man flinging handfuls of the oil as far to windward as the thick fluid would travel.

"Quick!" gasped Brand. "Don't pour it out! It must be scattered."

So the coins fell in little patches of smooth tranquillity into the white void beneath, and, before Stanhope had piloted his boat half the remaining distance, the wave-currents surging about the rock ceased to toss their yellow manes so high, and the high-pitched masses of foam vanished completely.

The seamen stationed in the entrance were astonished by the rapidity of the change. In less than a minute they found they were no longer blinded by the spindrift cast by each upward rush right into the interior of the lighthouse. The two nearest to the door looked out in wonderment. What devilment was the reef hatching now, that its claws should relax their clutch on the pillar and its icy spray be withheld?

Each wave, as it struck to westward of the column, divided itself into two roaring streams which met exactly where the iron rungs ran down the wall. There was a mighty clash of the opposing forces and a further upward rearing of shattered torrents before the reunited mass fell away to give place to its successor.

Full twenty feet of the granite layers were thus submerged and exposed whenever a big comber travelled sheer over the reef.

But these straightforward attacks were spasmodic. Often the eddies created by the rocks came tumbling pellmell from the north. Sometimes they would combine with the incoming tide, and then the water seemed to cling tenaciously to the side of the lighthouse until it rose to a great height, swamping the entrance, and dropping back with a tremendous crash. These were times when the northerly ally disdained to merge with its rival. Then it leaped into the hollow created by the receding wave, and all about the lighthouse warred a level whirlpool.

Stanhope's plan was to rush the boat in when one of these comparatively less dangerous opportunities offered. He would spring for the ladder, run up if possible, but, if caught by a vaulting breaker, lock himself with hands and feet on the iron rungs and endeavor to withstand the stifling embrace of the oncoming sea. He was sure he could hold out against that furious onslaught, once at least. He was an expert swimmer and diver, and he believed that by clinging limpet-like to the face of the rock, he had the requisite strength of lungs and sinews to resist one if not more of these watery avalanches.

The rope around his waist was held from the tug. The instant he made his leap, the men with him were to back water, the crew at the drag to haul for all they were worth, and consequently pull the boat clear of the next wave 'ere it broke. That is why he selected a handy craft in place of the life-boat offered to him as soon as his resolve was whispered ashore. It was on rapidity, quick judgment, the utilisation of seconds, that he depended. The unwieldy bulk of the life-boat not only detracted from these all-important considerations, but made it more than probable that she would be capsized or touch the reef.

For the same reason he timed his approach on the rising tide. He could venture nearer to the lighthouse itself, and the boat could be rowed and dragged more speedily into safety. With him, too, were men who knew every inch of the Gulf Rock. He knew he could trust them to the end.

Although he had mapped out his programme to the last detail, Brand's inspiration in using the oil created a fresh and utterly unforeseen set of conditions.

Mountainous ridges still danced fantastically up and down the smooth granite slopes, but they no longer broke, and it is broken water, not tumultuously heaving seas, that an open boat must fear.

With the intuition of a born sailor, ready to seize any advantage given by human enemy or angry ocean, Stanhope decided, in the very [illegible] of opportunity, to abandon his original design totally, and shout to the man he saw standing in the entrance to heave him a rope. He would have preferred the danger of the jump. He almost longed to endure the fierce struggle which must ensue before he reached those waiting hands. He thought he would have his reward in the tense joy of the fight, in bringing salvation to Enid and those with her, in seeing her sweet face again after these days and nights of vigil.

But the paramount need was to succeed. The extraordinary and, to him, quite inexplicable, change in conditions which he had studied during tortured hours passed on the bridge of the Falcon or the Trinity tender, made it possible to bespeak longer in the vicinity of the reef than he had dared to hope. Therefore he knew it was advisable to adopt certain means of communication the unwelcome hope in preference to the uncertainty of his own power to reach and climb the ladder.

Flinging out his right arm, he motioned to the man in the lighthouse to be ready to heave a coil. The wind was the chief trouble now, but he must chance that.

"Veer pulling." The pulled over, his shoulder as a sheerlegs were opened, over the reef and enveloped the column.

"Ay, ay," sang out his crew.

He went the best on the coast and a Britisher covers opened before his eyes, revealing the excitement that clung to the human time of masonry. In the same instant he caught a fleeting glimpse of a lolly, tallow rearing back from the spits on the north.

Brave again the head until the door of the lighthouse seemed to be an awful distance away. The rope again, and Stanhope stood spotted, his knees crushed against the wooden rim. One piercing shriek in front and another to the right showed that the subjugation of the two volumes of water gave the expected lull.

"Pull!"

The boat shot onward. Once, twice, three times, the oars dipped with precision. Those rowers, who went with their backs turned to what might be fantasy depth, were brave and staunch as he who looked it unflinchingly in the face.

"Heave!" roared Stanhope to the white-capped seaman officer standing in the doorway far above him.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

I WANT some help from my readers.

You see( it's this way.

A young girl has written me this letter:

"Dear Miss Cameron:

"Did you ever know of a young woman embarrassed, awkward, and silent in company, being transformed into one who could contribute her share of pleasure and not feel that she was a burden to everyone in the room? If you know of such a case, and the factors in the change, will you please write about it some time.

"I have been brought up in a home without other children, have spent more of my time in reading than in learning to be of use, and now find myself unable to mingle easily with other young people. Often I realize that the other girls are trying to make me one of their company, are exerting themselves for me to have a good time, but I cannot seem to get over my trouble and am miserable every time I go out."

Now, both for her sake and for the sake of the very many girls like her, whose shyness and inability to mix spoil many good times for them, I'd just love to help that girl.

But what can I tell her?

I can't say that I ever personally happened to know a girl who did overcome an excessive shyness well enough to ask her how she did it.

I can give my young correspondent some general advice.

I can say the best way to get over shyness and self-consciousness is to think, not of yourself, but of other people; to be so interested in those about you that you forget yourself—but then it seems to me as if everyone ought to know that.

I can say—wear just as pretty clothes as you possibly can and make yourself look as attractive as possible so that you won't feel embarrassed on that score, but then, it seems as if any normal girl would do that anyhow.

I can advise—force yourself to learn to talk small talk—but then, I suppose she must have tried to do that already.

So I want my readers to help me out.

Surely amon gall of them there is at least one woman who has been afflicted with shyness and self-consciousness as a girl, and who has more or less overcome her affliction.

Now won't she please write me about how she did it, that I may pass the word along to this girl?

If she will take that trouble I think it will surely be a white mark in the good book for her.

SPECIAL SERVICES IN MANY CITY CHURCHES YESTERDAY

Rallies in the Sunday Schools Were Well Attended---Methodist Churches Held a Missionary Sunday---Park Street Baptists Have Harvest Home Services --- Outside Speakers in the City.

Yesterday was an important Sunday in the churches, in most of which the opening of the winter work was inaugurated with rallies not only among the congregation but in the Sunday schools as well. During the summer when so many people are out of the city the attendance naturally falls off but at this season of the year the conditions are back at normal, and an increase in the size of the congregations may be looked for.

In many of the city churches yesterday, outside speakers were present or the pulpits were exchanged for the day and the services were of a special nature throughout. Very large congregations were present and the Sunday school rallies in the afternoon were equally well attended.

Park Street Baptist.

The Park street Baptist church held its harvest home services yesterday. The church was decorated appropriately and tastefully with grains, fruits, flowers, etc., the spirit of harvest being effectively worked out. Rev. W. C. Riddiford, pastor of the church, preached two helpful and inspiring sermons, taking as his subjects "A Harvest Prayer" and "A Harvest Question." To-night there will be a harvest home tea and concert, at which addresses will be given by a number of local clergymen.

At St. Paul's Church.

Services of a special character in connection with the annual Sunday school rally day were held at St. Paul's church. The morning service was marked by an address to parents by Rev. Robt. Pogue on the subject "The Religious Education of the Young." At the rally service in the afternoon addresses were given by Sheriff Hall and Mr. George McKay, of Philadelphia, Pa. Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler, addressed a large gathering of the boys of the congregation at 4 o'clock. In the evening the pastor preached a special sermon to young men, after which Mr. McKay addressed the Brotherhood of St. Paul.

At Knox Church.

Yesterday was rally day at Knox church. In the afternoon there was a very large attendance in the Sabbath school, when an address was given by Rev. J. A. Stewart, of Hespeler. The offering was for heath missions.

At the men's services in the evening, Rev. Mr. Stewart gave a most inspiring sermon to a large congregation. Splendid music was furnished by a male choir.

Missionary Sunday.

It was Missionary Sunday as well as rally day in the Methodist churches of the city and large congregations turned out for all services during the day.

At the Charlotte street Methodist church the pastor, Rev. W. G. Henderson, preached in the morning and in the evening Rev. W. Marvin, of Warsaw, occupied the pulpit.

Rev. J. H. Armitt, B.A., of Toronto, preached in the morning at the George street Methodist church. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Henderson, was the evening speaker in the Charlotte street Methodist church. At the James' Methodist, Rev. Mr. Couch, of George street Methodist church, preached in the morning, while the service in the evening was conducted by Rev. J. H. Grant, B.A., of Toronto, secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The special preachers at Hall street church were Rev. Mr. Barrie, of Warsaw in the morning and Rev. Mr. Couch, of George street in the evening. Rallies were held in all the Methodist Sunday schools with large attendances in each case.

At St. Andrew's.

Rev. Mr. McCorquodale preached at both services in St. Andrew's yesterday. The annual Sunday school rally was held in the afternoon.

At St. John's.

Last night the Evensong in St. John's church was fully choral. The large choir sang the service splendidly. Mr. James F. Knox, who spent Sunday in the city, played the cornet throughout, and with Mr. R. J. Devey on the organ performed Rubenstein's "Melody in F" during the offertory, also several selections at the end of service. Mr. Knox is the New representative of the famous English form of band instrument makers, Boosey & Co., and his playing was much enjoyed, the great features of which were, purity of tone and delicate shading.

TWO HOURS LATE

Belleville Train Met With Slight Accident at Addison Junction

The Grand Trunk train, which arrives at this city from Belleville about 8 o'clock in the morning, happened with a slight accident at Harpoon Jct. and did not arrive here until 10 o'clock. A train was made up here and sent to Lakefield on the regular trip so that all passengers were able to get through except those from Belleville. The accident in question happened to the engine, but the nature of the mishap is as yet unknown.

Local action movements would be needless if everyone understood that REGAL Lager benefits but does not intoxicate. It quenches thirst delightfully, makes the appetite healthy and aids digestion. Good at meals.

HEAVY CARGOES

Three Drunks Were Assessed $8 Each at Police Court To-day

At this morning's sessions of the police court, three drunks were the offenders. One of them stated that he worked at the G.G.E. Works. All three pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk in a public place and each were fined $1.00 or ten days. None of them were able to "cough up the dough" so were given ten days to which to pay the fine.

THE HARVEST HOME SERVICES AT SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE

Inspiring, Bright Meeting Last Evening Breathed the Spirit of the Harvest---Desirability of Being Thankful for Many Mercies Was Impressed Upon the Gathering by the Speakers.

The annual Harvest Festival services of the Salvation Army are being held at the Temple. Last night a large congregation assembled in the beautifully-decorated room, in which numerous kinds of fruits and vegetables, as well as grain and corn were the chief decorative features. Perhaps, never before, has the Salvation Army Temple been decorated as it was for last night's event. Besides the harvest trophies, the decoration consisted of numerous flags tastefully arranged, adding greatly to the brightness of the thanksgiving service.

The service was bright and cheery, and was conducted by Ensign Merritt, who preached a very interesting and instructive sermon, which was very appropriate to the occasion. He spoke of the thankfulness which the people should feel and give to God, for the bountiful harvest that He had given to them. He made a very striking remark when he said that God made no difference in people when He dealt out blessings. God had often dealt with men who were the worst sinners, more liberally than those who were the sincerest Christians; He showed His most wonderful love by dealing with them according to their needs, and gave the wicked just as much as those who loved Him. And the people should lift up their voices in praise to God for the blessings they had received.

Ensign Merritt went on to say that when he went out to the country the wonderful evidences of God's blessing were to be seen on every side, in the form of bountiful crops of every kind. He said that during that day and since then the song of his heart had been "Thank God," and asked the congregation to join in singing it, which they did, with a will.

Ensign Merritt then read a passage from the 13th Chapter of St. Mathew, beginning at the 24th verse.

After reading, the songsters sang a very pleasing selection entitled "You reap whatsoever you sow." The effective manner in which this piece was sung touched the hearts of more than one of the attentive congregation.

Ensign Merritt then asked some of the soldiers to address the congregation. He called first on Sergt. Major Braund who expressed his pleasure at having the opportunity of speaking to the people, and stated that for the past eleven years he had laboured with them, and had reason to thank God for the blessings he had received, and also went on to say that they should realise that the word of God was helping them to go past the temporal things of this life and to go on to the spiritual things in the world to come. He said that they should believe the word and act accordin to it, and told them that if they believed the Word and did not act according to it, they would have reason to regret it.

Bandmaster Peryer, representing the bandsmen, then spoke: He gave the people much good advice, and also told them that salvation was the best thing in life they could have, and that it helped a young man no matter what position he held in life, and if there was any young man who wanted to come to Christ and lead a good life and did not know how, that "Christ is the way," and any person who would trust in Him would be saved.

Sergt.-Major Whitton spoke a few words of encouragement to those who wished to become Christians, and lead good lives, and said that they should walk in the light of Christ day by day, and their efforts to become good Christians would be crowned with success.

Mrs. Merritt spoke on behalf of the sisters, and gave many words of encouragement, which were listened to with deep interest by all present.

Ensign Merritt again addressed the audience, speaking from the 7th and 8th verses of the 6th chapter of Galatians. He said that there was one part of the parable of the sower, which he considered very important, and that was where it mentioned about the dropping of the seed by the wayside, and dropping it on stony ground. The worst of all, he said, was if they received the word of the Lord into their hearts, and, after manifesting promise of good harvest they were drawn away by worldly cares, which, affecting their good intentions, would render their harvest a disappointment. In his closing remarks he told them that their hearts must first be prepared, by repenting to God before they could receive His word, and that they should consider how they were spending their time, for in time to come they would come before God and have to answer for their sins.

POPULAR CLASS

In First Aid, at Young Women's Association

The importance and usefulness of having a knowledge of first aid work has become so popular, that the Young Women's Association has this year made arrangements for the organisation of a class to be under the direction of Dr. Malcolm McCulloch. This class is to be organized at the Young Women's Christian Association on Tuesday (to-morrow) evening, Sept. 27, at 8.30 o'clock. The class will be organised strictly under the St. John's Ambulance Association regulations, and certificates will be awarded at the end of the six lectures, to the successful members passing the examinations. The full arrangements of the class will be dealt with at the above association at time stated, and it is urged and hoped that a large class will be enrolled. The first lecture will not be given until a week hence, but it is necessary to enroll at the earliest possible moment, that all preliminary details may be completed before the first lecture.

There are only six lectures, and attendance at four is necessary to enable one to take the examinations. The class will be followed by the Home Nursing Class, upon completion of the six lectures in First Aid Work. Those not able to attend meeting to-morrow evening can send their names to Miss C. B. Morse or Miss McCalla, care Y.M.C.A.

MUSINGS

I sat amid the gloaming as the night was settling in,
With its sombre shadows stealing blessed about me soft and still;
And the weary world was resting from the turmoil and the din,
As its wounds the night was healing
With the soothing of its balm.

I gazed in fancy backward o'er the dim and distant years,
Since my wayward will was let me
By its Maker all divine;
And I thought of all the waywardness
and folly's bitter tears;
And all that might and ought to be,
And all that now is mine.

And there was Pleasure's smiling path with flowery garlands set;
With the charms that oft had lured me
When my life was in its prime;
When my youth and fancy wandered in a giddy, careless jest;
For spoilt Silver ravelments,
And glad days were all sublime.

But Pleasure's fairy pleaded, as with willing hand she wove,
For my manhood's coronation,
A flowery crown of love.

So I wandered in the mazes of the world of 'Present Things';
And played the game of Fortune,
Content to win or lose;
But I found they soon forsook me,
for fairies all have wings;
And now o'er that which might have been,
I sit alone and muse.

—R. Lang, Peterborough.

These $22.50 ... Suits

Measure Well Up To A $28.00 or $... Standard

They Are The Best Value We Have Ever Offered

DURING previous seasons we have made quite a name for ourselves with our $17.50 and $18.00 Suits. They have helped to build up the enviable reputation of our garment section. This year we have purchased some far superior suits which we expect to awaken a lot of enthusiasm when marked at $22.50. They are better values than any garments we have ever previously offered. In elegance, authentic style and wearing qualities, they are far above the best suits we have ever seen marked at this price. They represent smart, eminently desirable productions of high grade makers—in them is forcibly exemplified the fact that this store is the style and value of the vicinity.

We especially invite your critical inspection of these $22.50 Suits, confident that you will find them all and more than this enthusiastic description would lead you to expect.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Is Being Crowned With Success

Have you been interviewed yet by the Y. M. C. A. men? If you have not you are one of a very small number of citizens. The campaigners are alert and earnest and if the 600 new members are all secured it will not be the fault of the leaders. No part of the city is making a better showing than the Canadian General Electric. The men who have that section of the city under their care are doing everything in their power to get every man who works in the C. G. E. to become a member of the Y. M. C. A. This is as it ought to be, for the Association is particularly adapted to meet the needs of the industrial workers. Already there are in the local Y. M. C. A. almost 100 members who are employed in the C. G. E., and a special effort will be put forth to make the Association of great advantage to these men. Already classes are being organised with the needs of these men in view, and there are others yet to be formed.

The Quaker Oats has contributed its share of men. Mr. D. Downie is in charge of this mill and he is assisted by Mr. J. C. Kinsborough, who is a tower of strength to the campaign. Mr. Hall is still working hard on the business section, and he has added quite a grist of new men. Probably no single worker, however, has added as many men and boys as has Dr. J. E. Middleton. He is sacrificing large blocks of his time to this campaign and is hustling others to get to work. The thermometer is not yet in place, but will be put up to-day to show the standing of the membership.

Another letter has been received by the President, from a well-known local clergyman, assuring the Association of his fellowship in the effort to extend the membership and enclosing a contribution. Coming as these letters do, entirely unsolicited, they are the source of great encouragement to the officers and workers.

A COUNTERBLAST ON PARSON-HIDING HATS

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—What are we to do about it? I mean about going to church and getting any benefit from the services or the sermons. When a man talks to me I consider it a point of good manners to look him in the face. Then I can tell better if he is in earnest and he can tell if I am paying enough attention to assure him that he is hitting the mark. But how in the name of common sense are we, the parson and I, to see each other if a woman's big hat shuts out the view completely and blots out the preacher and myself so far as seeing each other is concerned? Yesterday I went to church, but so far as any good came of it I might as well have stayed at home or gone fishing. In front of me sat two girls, with huge hats that completely eclipsed the minister. One had a hat on about the width of an expanded umbrella; to amuse myself I measured it—I couldn't get any good of the sermon; I heard a voice crying in the wilderness, beyond the barricade of hat—I slyly placed my umbrella, three feet in length, on the back of the seat and drew an imaginary lyine from either tip up, to the extreme limits of the hat brim and the points corresponded. I might have seen over the hat by dislocating my neck leftward, but in front of me was the other hat of the beer keg type towering upward like a dropsical edition of a grenadier's busby. O, it was fierce! Whatever devotional feeling I took into church with me was turned into the gall of bitterness and the impulse th profanity. I want to ask, is the pathway to the kingdom of heaven to be barricaded with hats? In times past thousands have been beheaded for religious sake; can't somebody bring about a crusade of beheatting in the interests of public worship. In the odour of temporary profanity.

Yours truly,
ECLIPSED.

Thirty-two Years In Business
Mr. Adam Hall Is Selling Out His Retail Stock

The well-known firm of Adam Hall, whose name is synonymous almost with that of George street, are retiring from retail business for the purpose of carrying on a plumbing and heating business, on a large scale, in their new foundry, at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets, and their big retail stock is now being disposed of at cost, offering advantages to the housewife that should not be overlooked. Mr. Hall has been in business on George street for thirty-two years, and the business is one of the oldest established in Peterborough. To the older residents, especially there will seem to be somethink lacking when the retail end of the business is done away with, but "the old order changeth, giving place to new," and Mr. Hall has decided to devote all his attention to the newly-erected foundry, where plumbing and heating and galvanised iron and tin work will be carried on on a big scale.

The splendid stock always carried by Mr. Hall in his George street store is too well known to need much comment. The store has been famous for the merit of its contents, not only in Peterborough, but throughout the entire district; many orders coming in each year from outside points. When it is stated that this entire stock is being offered absolutely at cost, one realizes that there are bargain opportunities of a most unusual nature. Everything is to go at cost. The whole stock of wood cook stoves, coal ranges, and coal and wood heaters, comprising many well known makes in these lines, are to go with the rest, and no doubt will be eagerly snapped up. The quality of the Hall stoves and ranges is proverbial and there will never be a better chance of filling your requirements in this line than is offered by the big sale which is now on. The store's huge stock of granite and tinware, table cutlery, power and hand washing machines, wringers, lawn mowers, ice cream freezers; in fact every article that is usually contained in an up-to-date and well-equipped stove and tinware establishment are to be sacrificed at cost. Everything must be disposed of at this sale, as, of course, after leaving his George street store Mr. Hall will not be able to handle this line of goods any longer; hence the necessity of cleaning out the stock as rapidly as possible, and inevitably to ensure haste the bottom must fall out of the prices.

It is not an ordinary bargain sale, in which a lot of second-hand goods is dug up to be cleared out: everything is new and good. The people of Peterborough never had a better opportunity of securing useful articles for the home at hitherto impossible prices, and no doubt the store will be crowded with eager customers. While the posters announce the sale to begin on Saturday, Oct. 1, it has really begun now. It was not expected that it would be possible to get ready for the beginning of this week, but such has proved to be the case, so that customers need not wait until Saturday. If you need anything in the hardware or tinware line do not fail to inspect the Adam Hall stock. Better do so as early as possible, too, for the bargains are liable to be eagerly snapped up.

"THE FREMERSBERG" FEATURE OF FRIDAY'S BIG CONCERT

One of the features of the popular concert to be given by the 57th Regimental Band in the armouries on Friday night will be the grand pastoral number "Le Fremersberg," one of the most beautiful and at the same time ambitious numbers, the band has attempted. Following is a synopsis of this magnificent selection.

The Margrave's horn, echoed by the mountains, is heard summoning the huntsmen, and the fanfare, heard first i nthe distance, then drawing nearer, indicates their approach. Signal for with refrain and dance.) During the rustic scene which follows, the horns are heard both near and in the distance. Song of the country folk (solo with refrain and dance.) During the dance a storm approaches, wind rises, and the peasan't dance becomes more animated. A peal of thunder stops the dance, the peasants run shrieking away to seek shelter. The lightning flashes and the storm grows in intensity. At last it burst forth in full fury, and the rain falls in torrents, thunder crashes.

The Margrave who has been overtaken by the storm, is heard crying for help, in vain. The noise of the storm drown his appeal. Overcome by weariness the Margrave falls to the ground. Suddenly he hears the monastery bell and the chant of the monks. Following the sound he finds the Fremersberg. The storm ceases, and the retainers, who have been seeking the Margrave, find him in the monastery. All join joyfully in the Te Deum.

A Correspondent Wants Light In Regard To The Price Of Wheat

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I want to know; and before I tell you what I want to know, I want to tell you why. On Saturday a scow load of wheat, shipped from the new wharf at Pengelly's, on Rice Lake, came to Peterborough. There are, I am told, about 75,000 bushels of wheat in South Monaghan which would be shipped in this way to Peterborough, if the farmers were assured of the same price they can get in Port Hope, and even Millbrook. I want to know why wheat brings around $1.00 on Port Hope market, 96 cents in Millbrook and 90 cents in Peterborough. What I want to know is why this is the cause. There must be some cause of a difference of from 5 to 10 cents on the market price.

Yours truly,
INQUIRER.

Note—Inquirer's inquiry is pertinent, and the merchants of Peterborough are the persons, most directly interested in providing an explanation. Assuming that our correspondent's facts are as stated, and there is no reason to doubt them, our Board of Trade has certainly something concrete to engage its attention. The better we can make the Peterborough market, the more business it will attract and the more money will be left in the city. It is a fact that, as a rule, the selling market is the buying market. Our merchants, therefore, have a right to ask the Board of Trade to take some and an early interest in answering the question of our correspondent.

TOOK REVENGE

Special to The Examiner.

REVELSTOKE, B.C., SEPT. 26. Fearful revenge of the Italians of Revelstoke was indicated here Sunday, when search parties discovered the remains of French Julien, a pioneer settler, with his head severed and a bloody axe near him in the bush. It appears Julien prosecuted Italians recently for assault on a relative. Tuesday they visited his homestead and lured him to the bush, where he was found dead.

CHIMES FUND TO-DAY

Much more support of a general nature to the People's Chimes Fund is reported this morning. A kind donation was received from Miss Grace Crowe of Brantford, and the employees of the Examiner have made a substantial contribution to the fund. The Committee in charge, consisting of ladies is meeting with every success in securing all the contributions possible. The employees of the Quaker Oats Company who have made contributions to the chimes. This action on the part of so many working girls is most praiseworthy, and the committee cannot thank them enough for their kind generosity. It is a most remarkable demonstration of interest in the movement. The fund at noon to-day stood at $4,366.

Chairman Mabee of the Railway Board Decides to Move the Investigation Further East, and as a Result the Whole Matter Will Be Inquired Into In Toronto — G. N. W. Will Be Handled First.

Winnipeg, Sept. 26.—The investigation in Winnipeg into the question of telegraph tolls in and out of the city came to an abrupt conclusion on Saturday afternoon. Isaac Pitblado, who was acting for the Board of Trade and the Grain Exchange in the matter, concluded his examination of S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., and Judge Mabee then stated that he thought the time opportune for a consideration of the question of the general scope of the investigation, and the circumstances under which it was to be continued. He did not think it possible to complete the investigation in Winnipeg even if the commission were to sit all next week. He was of the opinion that the investigation might be confined to one of the telegraph companies, say the G.N.W., and that the sitting might be held in Toronto.

Mr. Pitblado then intimated that he had been advised by his clients that they could not be responsible for the costs of maintaining counsel in Toronto, and if the investigation was to be continued there, this part of the country would not be represented. To this Judge Mabee replied that he had always been opposed to the appointment of counsel by the Government to represent the people in these cases. His brother commissioners had, however, strongly favored this course, and, under the circumstances, he would withdraw his opposition and would advise the Minister of Justice to name counsel to represent the people in the investigation, which would be continued in Toronto.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade made a very vigorous statement during the afternoon of the situation as it is viewed by the men whom he specially represents. W. J. Camp, the expert of C.P.R. telegraphs, had stated that it would take 50 clerks three years to secure one item of information for which the Winnipeg Board of Trade had asked. If this were true, said Mr. Bell, what hope was there that any single patron of the telegraph company, or such organization as the Winnipeg Board of Trade could ever hope to obtain such information as would convince the board that the rates of the telegraph companies were too high. The time had passed when the people of Canada were willing to accept without question the slight concessions which the telegraph companies were willing to grant. There ought to be some authority in the Dominion which would intervene and determine what rates were equitable. It appeared to the Board of Trade that this was the function of the Railway Commission, and the appeal had therefore been made to it.

S. B. McMichael, assistant to the general manager of the G.N.W., who had urged in the forenoon that the rates of the company were so low that it had paid no dividends in 23 years, explained in the afternoon to Mr. Pitblado that the G.N.W. was the result of an amalgamation of the old Montreal and the Dominion companies, and that the shareholders of the Montreal had been paid eight per cent: and the shareholders of the Dominion had been paid six per cent. He also stated that if there were deficits in the operation of the G. N. W., the money due to the shareholders of the old Montreal and Dominion companies was paid by the Western Union, showing that the G.N.W. was but another name for the Western Union.

Judge Mabee expressed the conviction that in the investigation of telegraph rates the commission was going to be involved in as great an undertaking as in the matter of the express rates.

C. N. Bell of the Board of Trade maintained that the matter of telegraph rates would prove much less complex, as the number of schedules was very much less.

Draped the Statues.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 26.—In a letter from Paris, George Gray Barnard, the sculptor, who made the marble groups for the front of the capitol, says that the nude statues will be so draped with marble as to give no offence.

The state meeting of the Ancient Order of Hibernians some time ago protested against the placing of the Barnard groups because of their nudity, and other organizations were about to follow suit.

Barnard says these groups will arrive here some time in October. He is particularly anxious to impress upon the people the fact that the statues will be draped.

Prince of Wales to Tour.

New York, Sept. 26.—It is now reported that the Prince of Wales will leave England a few months after the investiture at Cardiff for a voyage around the world, and will enter the army for nominal service after his return. He will be accompanied on the voyage by Prince Albert, who will remain permanently in the navy. The King's third son, whose health is not robust, may go with them.

The rumor of the impending betrothal of the King of Portugal and Princess Alexander of Fife has been revived, apparently because the Marquis de Soveral has been visiting at Balmoral.

May Use Finger Print.

Vancouver, Sept. 26.—The difficulties in connection with the regulation of Chinese immigration into Canada via Vancouver, as evidenced by the holding of 38 immigrants who came on the Empress of China last Saturday, on the charge that they were using fraudulent passports, are not nearing solution. It has been proposed that by the introduction of the finger print system of identifying immigrants and the persons for whom the passports were originally issued in China, will be little edit.

Blew Open Postoffice Safe.

Regina, Sept. 26.—The blowing up of the safe in the postoffice store at Balgonie at an early hour yesterday morning and the theft of $60 in cash, indicate that the band of yeggmen who have been a source of worry to citizens and police of western Canada for some months are drawing nearer to Regina. The men have worked eastward and forward on the main line C.P.R. for some weeks, but for about three days have been quiet.

Will Dampen Home-coming

Son of Mr. C. S. Gzowski and Grandson of the Late Sir Casimir, Has an Attack of Pneumonia Following Upon One of Typhoid Fever—Was Only Recently Out of Upper Canada College.

London, Sept. 26.—Roy Gzowski of the Queen's Own Rifles, died at Cambridge Hospital, Aldershot, Saturday morning, pneumonia supervening upon typhoid fever. He was one of seven officers of the regiment who were taken ill with fever. An aunt was the only relative at the bedside, but a brother from Toronto is expected to arrive at Southampton to-day.

The homeward voyage of the Q.O.R. Regiment promises to be a glorious one. The sea is smooth. The sky is bright. The steamer is crowded with passengers. King George has wished the regiment bon voyage in a farewell telegram.

The soldiers left camp near Salisbury Saturday morning and entrained at Denton. The Buffs' band played them to the station and crowds accompanied them. After a comfortable journey they reached Liverpool, where they were given a tremendous ovation both before and after embarking on the Canada. The Lord Mayor of the city came down to the boat bearing a farewell message.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—The death of Lieut. Gzowski will cast a gloom on the home-coming of the Toronto rifle regiment, which sailed Saturday from Liverpool.

The young officer had been with the Q.O.R. only since the first of the year, and was attached to Company C. He graduated from Upper Canada College last year and since that time had been connected with the Toronto General Trusts Corporation. He was a member of the Lambton Golf Club and of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club. As an enthusiastic runner, he was well known in the Aura Lee and Central Y.M.C.A. circles.

LIEUT. ROY M. GZOWSKI.

In response to a cable message, his brother, Norman, left Toronto on Tuesday last for Aldershot. Deceased was a son of C. S. Gzowski, and a grandson of the late Sir Casimir Gzowski.

Point Grey Is Chosen.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 26.—The report of the university commission appointed during the summer to select a site for the British Columbia University was made public Saturday, having, although dated June 28 last, been received only last Monday. The commission have decided upon Point Grey, a seaside suburb of Vancouver, as the site.

The university site commission are strongly of the opinion that the university should not be placed on the site which may in time be completely surrounded by the city. They suggest that not less than 200 acres be set apart for a university campus, and 760 acres for experimental purposes in agriculture and forestry. This is exclusive of the forest reserve for forestry operations on a large scale. Already two million acres have been set aside by the Provincial Government as an endowment fund for the university.

Six Hurt In Collision.

Toronto, Sept. 26.—Six persons were injured, two of them getting ribs broken, in a rear end street car collision at College and Huron streets at 8.40 Saturday night.

A College car, west bound, stopped at Huron street, to let off passengers, and Shaw car No. 104, going in the same direction, crashed into it.

One of the injured persons, John Weatherburn, says the motorman on the Shaw car mistjudged the distance and did not set his brakes soon enough. Claims Agent Jno. Forrest of the Toronto Street Railway says it was simply a case of "greasy rails."

Will Tempt Rapids Friday.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 26.—Because his barrel could not be brought from the whirlpool, Bobby Leach did not repeat his trip through the whirlpool rapids yesterday. He will make another trip through on Friday.

Next Governor for Alberta.

Ottawa, Sept. 26.—There does not seem any doubt that Hon. Frank Oliver, the Regina barrister, will be the next Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta. Hon. Walter Scott's visit to Ottawa is partly in connection with this.

Tendered His Resignation.

London, Ont., Sept. 26.—Rev. William Lowe, rector of St. Matthew's Anglican Church, announced yesterday that he had tendered his resignation, to accept the parish of Lambton, made vacant by the removal of Rev. Arthur Carnell to Windsor.

WIRELESS TO RESCUE.

Nineteen Men Are Saved From Wreck In Atlantic Ocean.

New York, Sept. 26.—Wireless saved nineteen more lives on the last trip of the Koenigen Luise of the North German Lloyd Line to the Mediterranean and back, being those of the crew of an old-fashioned, full-rigged ship, the Harvest Queen, built a score of years before wireless communication was used, which, leaking, half sunk with water, drifting five days helplessly in the sunny seas 1,000 miles off the nearest land—the Azores—with three flags of distress hoisted on the mizzenmast, was surprised when these signals had carried beyond the horizons and brought succor.

One steamer, an unknown Italian, described the signals and made them out "Ship full of water, in instant need of help, high danger," and then flashed over the surrounding seas by her wireless apparatus: "Ship 1,000 miles due south Azores sinking; we are too far away to assist in time."

That message, cast upon the air about the waters caught at the wireless instruments on board the steamship Koenigen Luise at about two o'clock in the morning of Aug. 24. The captain gave orders to change the course to the point indicated. So well was it calculated that in four hours, when day had nearly broken, the disabled old ship was sighted.

She was "swimming," as the sailors put it. A few steadying sails were spread, but she rolled in the swell like a log in a swift river. There were the flags crying for aid. Lumber was scattered over the face of the sea—her deckload of timber could see her going lower and lower into the water.

According to the maritime register the Harvest Queen was of 2,544 tons. She had been captained by E. A. Forsyth for twenty years and was owned by him and his wife. Other records aboard the Koenigen Luise showed that she had sailed from Windsor, Nova Scotia, for Buenos Ayres with a cargo of cut lumber.

Boats were lowered and sent off. The first to return brought ten men, all the belongings they could carry and word that there was a rip in the Harvest Queen's bottom as wide as a sea chest and that all that was keeping her afloat was the lumber with which she was laden. One of her own boats was used for the last transfer of the crew.

Through the Lower Rapids.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 26.—William Hill last night navigated the lower rapids in the barrel in which Bobby Leach went through the whirlpool rapids Saturday, to win a small wager. Hill was badly bruised, but not seriously injured.

This is the first time that the lower rapids have been navigated in a barrel. Nissen made the trip in the Foolkiller, Larsen did in the motor boat Ferro.

After securely tying Leach's barrel at the whirlpool, so that it might be brought back up the river, Hill was offered a two-dollar bet by a bystander that he could not make the trip through the lower rapids to Lewiston in the barrel. He took up the offer and made the trip successfully in an hour and seven minutes. For twenty-five minutes Hill was held in an eddy, less than a half mile below the whirlpool.

The distance between the pool and Lewiston is over four miles. It was dark when Hill was picked up at Lewiston by a motor boat.

Michael Was a Lady.

New York, Sept. 26.—Early every morning for six months past the industrious young assistant whom Undertaker Ciangrasso employed at work in his office and the stables in the rear at 109 Sullivan street, has answered the telephones and received the weeping Italians who needed Ciangrasso's services at their homes. When there wasn't office work to do the assistant, good looking and slight of figure, washed the hearse and carriages and lent a small hand at hitching up the horses.

Therefore, Saturday night, when the undertaker learned that his man of all work, "Michele Desposito," as Ciangrasso knew his good-looking helper in the dark trousers, negligee shirt and dark soft hat with a red band, wasn't a man at all, but an Italian girl, Maria Carpita, the undertaker received the news with eyes opened wide with amazement.

Like the Crippen Case.

San Francisco, Sept. 26.—A murder mystery paralleling in some respects the supposed murder of Belle Elmore in London by her husband, Dr. H. H. Crippen, confronts the police here in the discovery of the body of Miss Eva Swan, 26 years old, a school teacher of Paso Robles, buried under a vacant house in Eureka street. Dr. Jas. Grant and Miss Marie Messerschmidt, a nurse, are under arrest in connection with the case.

The police believe the girl was murdered to shield someone else, and they are searching for a gentleman of Paso Robles, who was on intimate terms with the dead girl, who had been missing since April 20. The body was wrapped in a sheet over which nitric acid had been poured.

An Important Post.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—Hon. Senator Dandurand, who is out in favor of dividing the Chinese fund the Quebec agency in Paris, says that a good man, socially and financially, should be appointed in the capital of the richest and one of the greatest loaning countries in the world. He says that the sincerity of the entente cordiale in France was manifested plainly at the unveiling of the monument to Champlain at Beauport, where the founder of Quebec was born. The Ministers of Foreign Affairs, presiding, proposed the health of the King of England, when everyone present, including even the Englishmen, except a few Canadians, rose and cheered, while Sir Wilfrid's health was also splendidly received.

Had Leg Severed by Train.

Peterboro, Sept. 26.—Thomas Wheeler, the nine-year-old son of Geo. Wheeler of this place, had his leg taken off while trying to jump on a C.P.R. freight train in the yards here yesterday. He will live.

Auto Plunged Into Canal.

New Orleans, Sept. 26.—Six persons were drowned here when an automobile early yesterday morning plunged into the canal. They were guests of the Creole Yacht Club.

Saturday's Rugby Meeting Enthusiastic, Was It Not? Echo Says Yes It Was Not

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the rugby fans of the city was held on Saturday night—NOT.

The gathering had been called for the purpose of discussing the advisability of placing a junior O.R.F.U. team in the field and of forming a City League.

Evidently Peterborough is not yearning for rugby. At any rate the attendance at the meeting did not at any time threaten to overflow proportions. To get down to cases the only people in attendance at the hour set for the meeting, were the sporting editors of the Review and Examiner and one player.

The scribes might have gone ahead and formed the League and transacted the other business, but what was the use? Nobody wanted it done anyway, so after humming a few bars of "It was not like this in the olden days," the sporting writers passed out in the stilly night. Encouraging, believe me.

However, there are prospects of a City League despite Saturday night's experience. The Y.M.C.A. will have a team. The triangle men decided that on Saturday night and would have had a representative at the meeting had there been any meeting to have a representative at. The T.A.S. will also have a team and the Collegiate are already in the field.

An effort will be made to have somebody attend a meeting this week.

ANOTHER HOCKEYIST GONE JUNIOR PROSPECTS GLOOMY

Peterborough's chances for a winning junior O.H.A. team this season grow beautifully less day by day as the hockey period approaches. There was so much material in sight last winter that the fans looked for a classy team this season. It was admitted that a mistake had been made in putting two teams in the series last winter, but everyone was confident that there would be something doing when all the stars were united in one team.

Since then though, the material has begun to drift out of town, Burritt, the great scoring centre of the Strathcona City League champions, and the Collegiate O. H. A. team, was the first to go. Then Ken Crane, the second best scorer in the City League, rover for the West Ends and the Collegiate team, packed his suit-case and hied to Toronto. This morning saw the departure of a third junior star in the person of Fred Denison, who has gone to attend Trinity College School, Port Hope. He was captain of the Collegiate O.H.A. team last winter and played point and cover for the Stratheonas. He was giving promise of being a star defence man and much was expected of him this winter.

With the three stars of the Collegiate team out of town, and a number of other juniors rendered ineligible by reason of the change in the age limit, the prospects for a strong junior team look decidedly gloomy. However, there may be a change in the situation before the ice stuff is here.

FRED. DENISON,
of the Stratheonas and Collegiate Teams, Who Left This Morning for T. C. S., Port Hope

WHEN THE PITCHER IS CUTTING THE CORNERS

Jack Coombs, premier pitcher of the Mack team, established an American League Record Wednesday when he finished 16 innings of box work with not an opposing player having crossed the plate. But that isn't all. Jack has won nine straight games and worked a scoreless tie on Wednesday. He has given only five runs in those games and the total number of innings pitched since he has been defeated is 90 2-3. He has given 49 hits. Just ponder on these figures a little and you will begin to appreciate what a remarkable record the Colby College graduate is making this season with the Athletics, and he has done all this in record as follows:

| Teams | Runs | Hits | Dates | Ings. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 0 | 0 | Aug. 16 | 2 2-3 |
| Chicago | 1 | 8 | Aug. 18 | 10 |
| Cleveland | 1 | 5 | Aug. 23 | 10 |
| St. Louis | 0 | 4 | Aug. 26 | 9 |
| Detroit | 1 | 6 | Aug. 30 | 9 |
| Washington | 1 | 8 | Sept. 2 | 9 |
| New York | 1 | 5 | Sept. 5 | 9 |
| Boston | 0 | 6 | Sept. 9 | 9 |
| Washington | 0 | 4 | Sept. 12 | 9 |
| Detroit | 0 | 2 | Sept. 15 | 9 |
| Cleveland | 0 | 3 | Sept. 21 | 11 |

ABE ATTELL, FEATHERWEIGHT CHAMPION OF THE WORLD

Abe Attell, the featherweight champion of the world, would like to box some good man in Buffalo, they say, and, incidentally, the following from the Chicago Journal will be found of interest:

"I never felt better in my life, said Abe Attell. "And do you know why?" continued the great little fighting machine. "Well, in the first place I never drank, chewed or smoked in my life. That's the whole answer.

"Some people have often wondered how I accomplished it. The fact that I fight on an average of once a week, I figure, helps keep me in condition more than anything else. Another reason to which I attribute my continued success is being a married man.

"I have now related my best points. Many people will come to you and say 'Attell is a great gambler and he will be the next one to follow in the trail of poor old Joe Gans and the others who have passed the great divide.' Well, I don't want to do any extended bragging, but just say now for me that Attell to-day at 27 years is as wise a man as any in the ring to-day about taking care of himself. It sounds pretty funny to blow your own horn that hard, but I really and truly believe in myself, and that's half the battle."

Is Man With Title.

Attell also related that he is just back from Canada, where he captured the Dominion championship. He said he had told his wife she had good reason to be proud of him with his titles.

"American girls are going over to England and other countries every day to get husbands with titles, I said, and she should be proud of me because I now have a foreign title myself."

Wolgast is foremost in Attell's mind. He said he feared Ad was the victim of poor advice for his own financial good.

"Unless Wolgast goes out and takes on a few fighters with reputations, people will be right in believing Ad is merely a flash in the pan and not the right material for a championship battler.

Wants to Meet Wolgast.

"Everyone knows I am entitled to a match with Wolgast. I beat him with ease on the coast, and then the Los Angeles writers said I was stalling to save Wolgast for a return match. This shows what they thought of Wolgast out west. Wolgast has his chance to even matters. I am not asking for any the better of the terms and will agree to weigh in at 122 pounds, while Wolgast can scale the lightweight limit, 133 pounds. Wolgast's manager has been claiming his fighter is a simon pure 126-pounder and now he has the chance to fight a man in his class.

"I never have turned down a man in my life. I even fought Buddy Ryan in his palmiest days when he was a welterweight, and I was a 122-pounder ,and beat him. I also beat Nelson and the rest of them. Wolgast is a young fellow with good prospects, but I am afraid he has been the victim of too much bad advice."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Lord Pentland is to be the next Governor-General of Australia.

The Italian Aviation Society will present Chaves, who crossed the Alps, with $10,000.

The steamers Montcalm and Crown Prince Olaf were in collision a short distance below Quebec, and both were damaged.

G. H. Gall will represent Western Canada interests at Washington, in efforts to counteract the "Don't Go to Canada" agitation.

The cottage women of England are sending a petition to the Queen, asking that automobiles be forced to go slowly through villages.

Vigorous preparations are being made in New York State for the Republican and Democratic conventions at Saratoga and Rochester this week.

Premier Scott of Saskatchewan on Saturday denied that he was in conference with the C.N.R., as to the Hudson Bay line. He believes in Government ownership.

A London cable to a New York paper says the generalship dispayed in the British army manoeuvres was such that in actual warfare would have meant complete destruction to the army engaged.

Bourassa's Montreal paper, Le Devon, again assails Bishop Fallon of London for antagonism to bi-lingual teaching, and deplores Archbishop Gauthier's acceptance of the Ottawa See as tending to "split" the two provinces.

Will Ask Change In Act.

Montreal, Sept. 26.—It looks very much as if the three maritime provinces were about to approach the Federal authorities with a view to secure a modification of the British North America Act at the hands of the Imperial Government.

This, in fact, was intimated yesterday at the Windsor by Hon. W. H. C. Grimer, surveyor general of New Brunswick, who stated that although he was not a participant in the recent conference in St. John between Attorney-General Maclean of Nova Scotia, Premier Hazen of New Brunswick, and Premier Hazzard of Prince Edward Island, he believed that a common basis would be reached by which united action would be taken by the local authorities of the three lower provinces to secure against a further diminution of the Federal representation in the House of Commons from the lower provinces. If something, he said, is not done in this direction, the representation following the census of Nova Scotia, will be cut down to 13, that of New Brunswick to 11, and Prince Edward Island to two or three.

Being asked if a modification of the B.N.A. Act in such a sense as he had indicated would not open the door to a like demand on the part of Quebec, the surveyor general of New Brunswick admitted that it would. He said in fact, that it was a very serious problem, and would have to be handled with very great prudence and care by the local and Federal statesmen.

Bank In Collision.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 26.—The 7,600-ton steamer Dan H. Hanna, owned by the Pioneer Steamship Co. of Cleveland, was sunk in the St. Clair River in the Canadian channel opposite this city Saturday night. The Hanna, upbound with coal, collided with the Harvey H. Brown, and went to the bottom in shallow water. The Brown was badly damaged, but succeeded in docking.

Fly From Chicago to Springfield.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Walter R. Brookins will attempt a flight with a Wright aeroplane from Chicago to Springfield, Ill., next Thursday, in an effort to win $10,000 offered by The Chicago Record-Herald for such a feat. The distance of the route

AN EYE TO ECONOMY

A young lady who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday-school, desired to impress on them the meaning of returning thanks before a meal. Turning to one in the class, whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Go slow with the butter, kids; it's twenty-eight cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.

Girl Who Would But Didn't

A Short Story.

Irene Havil would not have been disturbed if she had not sung at the village entertainment and unfortunately met a third class actor who, for the lack of something better to say, told her that if she cultivated her vocal powers she had a bright future before her as a prima donna.

The thespian disappeared the following day, but his careless talk left her dreaming of operatic tours through America and Europe.

When the idea became rooted in her brain no amount of argument could convince her that she was not destined to be a theatrical celebrity.

The result was that she returned her engagement ring with a note to Clyde Grendon, her fiance, informing him that the engagement was broken and that she was going to New York to seek fame and fortune.

Clyde received her message on the morning of the day set for their wedding and spent the ensuing two hours scheming how to circumvent her plan.

At one o'clock he called at the house where she lived with her aunt and uncle, and persuaded her to accompany him for a walk to discuss the matter.

Very little was said after leaving the house from where they travelled to the shore of a lake that had been the scene of so many happy hours.

"Do you know," he began as she listlessly sat down on a bench, "that you are about to take a step which you will probably regret for the remainder of your life?"

"I don't believe it," she answered, without the semblance of a smile that usually played around her mouth. "You just said that to make me change my mind, but I shall not. Other girls have succeeded, so why should not I?"

"So they have," he admitted, "but they have spent two years in study under the best masters. Even then it has been a hard, uphill fight filled with discouragement and disappointment."

She was silent for a moment as she plucked the petals of a rose and the overhanging branches crossed her chestnut hair.

"I don't expect my pathway to be strewn with roses," she replied. "I anticipate some hard knocks, but I am willing to endure them rather than throw away a career and settle down to married life."

"Yes, but you have not the slightest idea with what you will have to contend," he persisted. "You will require years of training and will have to work very hard to pay for the same. As a novice you will wander from manager to manager, only to be met with smiles and promises that will evaporate in the breeze that follows you out of the door. Like thousands of others you will be forced into office work as a means of a livelihood, as you will be too proud to return and admit failure."

The girl sat with bowed head, seemingly drinking in every word.

Clyde produced a small plush box containing the engagement ring and, holding it in his outstretched palm, continued:

"When I gave you this I thought it sealed our happiness. But how little you must have regarded it when the silly babble of a thoughtless stranger could induce you to send it back and renounces the love you once appeared so happy to possess."

He paused for awhile, affording her an opportunity to reply. But as she showed no indication to do so he resumed:

"Is this wild dream of yours preferable to my love? Will anybody strive more than I have to make you happy? Haven't I wealth and position to offer you? And don't you know that when you go you will leave me miserable? Irene, I can hardly believe that you are serious. Tell me, sweetheart," he pleaded, catching her hand, "tell me that you have changed your mind and that you will be my bride to-night."

She threw away the mutilated flower and slowly raised her eyes.

"Clyde," she spoke in a tremulous tone, "I know how dearly you love me and I appreciate the pains that you have taken to make me happy; and although I am going away, it is not because I do not care for you, but for the reason that I have my mind set on a career. I am awfully sorry that I had to return the ring, but under the circumstances it was inevitable. Perhaps you will meet in time a girl who will teach you to forget me."

"But don't you——" he abruptly ended, hearing approaching footsteps.

Clyde released Irene's hand as a ragged tramp with a stubby beard hove in view, and, on coming abreast of the lovers, faced them and said:

"Excuse me, pal, for butting in, but can you help a poor hungry man to get something to eat? I haven't tasted a bite in two days."

"I am sorry, my good fellow," returned Clyde after searching his pockets, "but I haven't any change. Here, take this," he added, as if struck with a sudden thought, offering the box to the wanderer. "I haven't any further use for it and you can probably sell it for a tidy sum."

As the stranger accepted the gift, Irene sat motionless, calmly watching the proceedings.

The tramp cautiously opened the box as if fearing a trick and when his eyes fell upon the glittering stone his head bobbed back with surprise.

"Gee," but this looks like the real stuff!" he exclaimed. "Say boss, do you mean to say that I can have this?"

"Yes," Clyde assured him with a careless nod. "The girl for whom it was purchased doesn't want it, neither do I."

The tramp's features broke into a smile as he remarked:

"I suppose it was meant for some girl who doesn't know a good fellow when she meets one and you don't want to give your friend any second-hand goods. Well, that's right, and I don't blame her for wanting only bought especially for herself."

"It doesn't concern you for whom it was bought," responded Clyde. "It is now yours and you can do as you like with it."

"I'm not trying to butt in to your business, partner," laughed the tramp, "but I had to say something as I know what it is to get the cold shoulder. You see, I wasn't always a tramp. I once had a good business and loved a girl, and we would have been married only she got a notion in her head that she was born to be an actress and left me. I never heard of her until five years later, when I was called to New York to save her from the potter's field. That's why I am a tramp and have lost faith in women. I think the lady by your side is an exception for she doesn't look like one who would fool with a man's heart. But, shucks, I won't bother you any more with my past. I'm obliged for the ring," he finished, turning to go.

"Please, stop a moment!" cried Irene, springing to her feet.

The tramp swung around and waited.

"Will you kindly give me the ring?" she asked. It was bought for me and I am anxious to wear it."

"Well, you see, lady," the tramp replied, "the gentleman gave it to me but if he wants you to have it all he has to do is say so."

Irene cast an appealing glance as much as to say: "Tell him to give it to me."

"Do you really want it, Irene?" questioned Clyde, rising to his feet. "Have you changed you mind about going away? And will you carry out what we have planned for to-night?"

"Yes, Clyde, I do want it, and I am sorry that I ever thought of going away. I am glad that I saw my mistake in time."

Clyde took a five-dollar bill from his pocket, and, offering it to the tramp, said:

"My good fellow, there has been a misunderstanding between us which has been smothered over, and if you will give me the ring you can have this money."

The tramp readily agreed to the exchange, and, after wishing them luck went his way.

That night, at the wedding, Irene never dreamed that Arthur Rankin, the best man, who was an old college chum of Clyde's had that afternoon impersonated the tramp.

SPLENDID ATTRACTION

Alarcon Troupe of Mexican Street Singers at Royal Theatre

The Royal theatre continues to constantly better the quality of its vaudeville attractions and the offering that Manager Pappas has secured for the first three days of this week is perhaps the most artistic he has yet presented to the public. The Alarcon Troupe of Mexican street singers and musicians, the general article, is the head liner, and the merit of their performance should ensure crowded houses and an enthusiastic reception. They feature the Mexican Jewel, an unusually winsome girl who sings and plays in a delightful manner.

Violence Not Shown.

Hamilton, Sept. 27.—An inquest was held last night into the death of the baby which was found in a valise at the home of William Batstone, 80 North John street, last week. The verdict of the jury was to the effect that there was nothing to show that the child had come to its death through violence, or that it had ever lived.

Detective Sayer testified that Miss Jessie Sweet, the girl arrested in connection with the case, told him that the child was hers, and that it was born at the Batstone home eleven months ago. Mrs. Batstone, however, denied the latter statement. Drs. Mc Nichol and Edgar, who conducted the postmortem examination, said the little body was so dried up that it looked like a mummy, a condition that was unusual. They did not think there had ever been life in the body, but, owing to the condition in which they found it, it was pretty hard to tell whether there had been or not.

Coroner Dickson had charge of the inquest. Crown Attorney Washington conducted the examination of the witnesses, and George Kerr, K.C., was present in the interests of Miss Sweet. She was not asked to give evidence.

Denies Profits by Bonds.

Edmonton, Sept. 27.—The defence of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway and the Canada West Construction Co., in the suit for one-sixth interest in company, or for a cash settlement of $250,000, entered by Alfred Hawes of Toronto, former shareholder in the Athabasca Railway Co., was filed in the Supreme Court here yesterday. It contains the first denial ever made directly or indirectly by W. R. Clarke, president of the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, of charges that he secured $740,000 out of the sale of Government guaranteed bonds of the waterways company.

Figures Submitted In Ottawa Despatch to The New York Herald Show That Canada's Output In All Lines Affected by New Schedule Has Increased as a Result of the New U. S. Act.

New York Sept. 27.—An Ottawa despatch to The Herald says:

Now that the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act has been in force for more than a year, it is possible to show the beneficial effect of the reductions on duty on various Canadian products.

In nearly every instance where the tariff was lowered Canadian exports increased. The most notable instance is cream. The old duty was practically prohibitive, only $8,871 worth of milk and cream being exported to the United States in the year ending July 31, 1909. The exports for the year ending July 31, 1910, were valued at $570,308.

There is a table showing the values for the year ending July 31, 1910, on other commodities on which the tariff was reduced when the Payne-Aldrich Act went into effect, Aug. 5, 1909:

| Article. | 1909. | 1910. |
|---|---|---|
| Hides and skins | $4,235,405 | $4,909,670 |
| Agricultural implements | 46,246 | 104,042 |
| Aluminum in bars, etc. | 130,553 | 886,459 |
| Explosives | 172,610 | 202,467 |
| Pig iron | 100,802 | 240,309 |
| Scrap iron | 80,946 | 391,888 |
| Printing paper | 813,564 | 1,723,427 |
| Boots and shoes | 12,718 | 12,280 |
| Coal | 3,281,673 | 4,147,098 |
| Crude gypsum | 345,226 | 405,168 |
| Iron ore | 92,959 | 84,317 |
| Mica | 168,499 | 307,321 |
| Planks and boards | 15,233,825 | 18,267,575 |
| Scantling | 460,138 | 596,152 |

WOODBINE RESULTS.

Toronto, Sept. 27.—The weather was ideal for the second day of the O.J.C. fall races at Woodbine Park. No trace of last week's rain was apparent. The attendance was the same as on the worst Saturday afternoon, about 5,000. Three favorites, one second and two third choices and First Peep, at 8 to 1, were the winners.

First race, six furlongs, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up—Jack Atkin, 1; Lady Irma, 2; Elfin Beau, 3. Time 1.12 4-5.

Second race, six furlongs, pure $500, for two-year-olds—Tripping, 1; Solid Comfort, 2; Melton Street, 3. Time, 1.14 4-5.

Third race, one mile, purse $500 for all ages—Starlottie, 1; J. H. Houghton, 2; Compton, 3. Time, 1.40 4-5.

Fourth race, seven furlongs, purse $500, for two-year-olds, selling—Rash, 1; Jim L., 2; Huetamo, 3. Time, 1.20 3-5.

Fifth race, Royalerer Steeplechase [illegible] $700, for four-year-olds and up, selling—Osage, 1; Brendan, 2; John Dillon, 3. Time, 4.00 2-5.

Sixth race, Seagram Cup, heavy weight handicap, 1 1-16 miles, purse $1,000, for three-year-olds and up, Canadian owned—Ta-Nun-Da, 1; Michael Angelo, 2; Rio Grande, 3. Time, 1.47 3-5.

Seventh race, 1 1-8 miles, purse $500, for four-year-olds and up, selling—First Peep, 1; Rifleman, 2; Lad of Langdon, 3. Time, 1.50 2-5.

Swedish Girl's Love Tragedy.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—The finding yesterday of the body of a woman on Bowen Island, has cleared up the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Esther Johnson. She and Peter Pearson were engaged three years ago in Sweden, and the man came to the Canadian West to prepare a home for her. Here he met another woman, and when Esther arrived she found herself supplanted in Pearson's heart. She asked for a last meeting on the night of Aug. 17. Nothing had been seen nor heard of the broken-hearted girl since.

Asks for Investigation.

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 27.—At the meeting of the Republican State committee last night, Chairman Woodruff read a letter from Vice-President Sherman, asking for an investigation by the committee of the charge that his selection for temporary chairman of the state convention was brought about through trickery, and stating that, if such charge were substantiated, he would not care to serve.

F. C. Stevens, superintendent of public works, loomed large yesterday as an available candidate for governor. Some of Mr. Roosevelt's friends pointed out that Mr. Stevens was a Hughes' man, but in the conduct of his office, had many friends among the organization Republicans, who admit that Stevens would make a strong candidate. Efforts were also made during the day to have Representative Bennet of New York withdraw his candidacy to make way for an upstate man. Mr. Bennet, however, was not inclined to be persuaded.

Accused of Embezzlement.

Woodstock, Sept. 27.—A. McNeal, treasurer of the Embro Public School Board, is in custody in that village, his arrest having taken place on Saturday on the charge of misappropriating about $300 of funds belonging to the village board.

McNeal spent Sunday in the village lockup and yesterday afternoon his preliminary hearing was commenced before Justices of the Peace Ross, Cody and Creighton, with Crown Attorney Ball of this city prosecuting, and was adjourned until this afternoon.

It is alleged that the treasurer drew from the treasury in the school board's name more money than there were funds to meet.

PREFERENCE IS NEEDED

British Colonies In the Atlantic Are Well Disposed Toward a Reciprocal Arrangement and Advisory Board Which Met In London, Urges Them to Try to Secure Further Tariff Concessions.

London, Sept. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The report of the royal commission on trade relations of Canada and the West Indies, issued yesterday, signed by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Hon Wm. Fielding, Hon. Wm. Paterson, Lord Islington and Sir Daniel Morris, comprises sixty pages, besides voluminous appendices. The commissioners strongly represent that the preference granted the West Indies by Canada for some years, has been of great value in furnishing a favorable market for West Indies' sugar just as the United States, through the development of their own colonial policy have ceased to require West Indies sugar as largely as formerly.

The West Indies are strongly urged to make reciprocal concessions to Canada, so that the advantage already obtained may be continued. Considerable attention is paid to the controversy between West India shippers and Canadian refiners, as to the existence of a West Indian combination to obtain excessive prices and the special concessions made to refiners a year ago, respecting the importation of a limited quantity of foreign raw sugar at preferential rates.

It is recommended in any scheme for the betterment of trade relations that may be proposed, the special concession to refiners be withdrawn, inasmuch as the West Indies would regard that step as essential, but that the percentage of the preference allowed by Canada be reduced and made definite and unqualified.

The West India colonies in general report in favor of reciprocal arrangements with Canada, except Jamaica which was influenced by the fear, which the commission think not justified, though by making such arrangements they would provoke retaliatory tariff legislation by the United States.

The Standard thinks the results of the commission are fair and equitable, and the whole report appears to be a recognition of the fact that closer political relations can only result from more intimate commercial arrangements.

The Morning Post says commonsense has been vindicated without any inconsistency on the part of the Government's free trade representatives and hopes the same arrangements with Canada, on the lines of this report, can be effected without delay.

The Times says the report is of high value and in consequence the recommendation of a uniform preference by the West Indies testifies eloquently to the breadth of mind wherewith the free traders, Balfour and Islington, approached the task.

To Oppose Howitt.

Guelph, Sept. 27.—Organizer Inwood of the provincial Liberal party headquarters at Toronto was in the city yesterday conferring with Liberals with respect to the convention Wednesday afternoon. It is understood local Liberals are forced into a contest by orders from Toronto that every riding is to be contested.

William Laidlaw, secretary of the Guelph and South Wellington Agricultural Society; Nicol Jeffery, a prominent Liberal lawyer, and Mayor G. D. Hastings, are among the probable candidates, and Mayor Hastings says that, as his second year's term as mayor was almost concluded, he may accept the nomination, if honored with it.

Entire Cadet Corps Arrested.

West Point, N.Y., Sept. 27.—With the entire cadet corps of the United States Military Academy under close arrest for administering the "silent" affront to Capt. Rufus E. Longan, instructor in tactics, a military board of enquiry is investigating the mystery surrounding the cadets' action.

No report of the finding of the board will be made public until the return to West Point of Major-Gen. Thomas H. Barry, the new superintendent of the academy, who is expected to-day or to-morrow.

Lieut.-Governor Gibson on Coast.

Vancouver, Sept. 27.—"Vancouver enjoys no monopoly of prosperity, for I see vast construction forces at work in the entire region from Lake Superior to the coast, and particularly from Winnipeg to the Rockies," said Hon J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who, with his party in the private car of the Ontario Government, arrived here yesterday.

He will be entertained by the Scottish Rite in the Masonic Temple. His honor is sovereign grand commander of Scottish Rite, A. F. and A. M.

Victim of the Black Hand.

Revelstoke, B.C., Sept. 27.—"Better let me help when I can, for they will get me sometime," is a remark frequently made by Frank Julien to the provincial police in cases against Italians. Julien was murdered here on Saturday with an axe by three Italians.

In Rossland, Fernie and Trail, B.C., he had assisted in bringing offending Italians to justice and the police are convinced that he was the victim of the "Black Hand."

A Fatal Joke.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—James Wright, 60 years old, was taken into custody Sunday on a charge of causing the death of his wife. As Mrs. Wright, who is 70 years old, attempted to sit down, her husband, it is alleged, as a "joke," pulled a chair from beneath her and she fell to the floor, injuring her spine. Death followed soon after.

Boy Accidentally Shot.

Charlton, Sept. 27. Carrying his eight-year-old son in his arms, Harvey Palmateer, a farmer, three miles from here, staggered into Dr. Cooper's surgery Sunday evening. An hour earlier the lad had been accidentally shot with an obsolete Swiss army rifle. A few hours later the lad died. It was the old story of "not knowing it was loaded."

Murphy Personally Investigates.

Ottawa, Sept. 27. Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, went to the Printing Bureau yesterday and resumed his personal enquiry into the affairs of that institution. This is the first time Mr. Murphy himself has been there since the disappearance of Gouldthrite, and his visit caused a flutter in the Department.

Roosevelt's Railway Bill.

Philadelphia, Sept. 27.—John H. Devine a shareholder in the Pennsylvania Railway, has written the general manager asking what steps have been taken by the company to collect a sum estimated at $100,000 alleged to be due by ex-President Roosevelt for special trains, etc., during his term as President.

More Doctors Pass.

Kingston, Sept. 27.—As a result of the supplemental examinations in medicine at Queen's, the following have secured the degree of M.D., C.M.: J. G. Bailey, Rosemonton; J. M. Carnduff, Carnduff, Sask.; G. L. Cooke, Kingston; G. M. Gibson, Douglas, Ont.; E. R. Graham, Kingston.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracy, (Copyrighted)

The rope whirred through the air, the boat rose still higher to meet it, and the coil struck Stanhope in the face, lashing him savagely in the final spite of the baffled gale which puny man had conquered.

Never was blow taken with such Christian charity.

"Back!" he cried, and the oarsmen, not knowing what had happened, bent against the tough blades. The tug's sailors at the drag, though the engines grinding at half speed were keeping them grandly against the race not more than a hundred and fifty yards in the rear, failed for an instant to understand what was going on. But their captain had seen the cast and read its significance.

"Haul away!" he bellowed in a voice of thunder, and, to cheer them on ,added other words which showed that he was no landsman.

Stanhope deftly knotted the lighthouse line to the loop taken off his waist. He cast the joined cords overboard.

"Thank God!" he said, and he looked up at the great pillar already growing less in the distance.

Now, from the kitchen, owing to its height above sea level and the thickness of the wall pierced by the window, as soon as the boat came within fifty yards or so of the lighthouse, the girls could see it no longer.

When it dropped out of sight for the last time Constance could not endure the strain. Though her dry tongue clicked in her mouth she forced a despairing cry.

"Enid," she screamed, "lean out through the window. It is your place."

"I cannot! Indeed, I cannot! He will be killed! Oh, save him, kind Providence, and take my life in his stead!"

Constance lifted the frenzied girl in her strong arms. This was no moment for puling fear.

"If I loved a man," she cried, "and he were about to die for my sake, I should count it a glory to see him die."

The brave words gave Enid some measure of comprehension. Yes, that was it. She would watch her lover whilst he faced death, even though her heart stopped beating when the end came.

Helped by her sister, she opened the window and thrust her head out. To her dazed brain the consciousness came that the sea had lost its venom. She saw the boat come on, pause, leap forward, the rope thrown and the knot made.

As the boat retreated she caught Stanhope's joyous glance. He saw her, and waved his hand. Something he said caused the two rowers, for the first time, to give one quick glance backward, for they were now scudding rapidly away from the danger zone. She knew them; she managed to send a frantic recognition of all three.

Then, in an almost overpowering reaction, she drew back from the window and tears of divine relief streamed from her eyes.

"Constance," she sobbed, "he has saved us! Look out. You will see him. I cannot."

Yet, all tremulous and breathless, she brushed away the tears and strove to distinguish the boat once more. It appeared, a vague blot in the mist that enshrouded her.

"Connie," she said again, "tell me that all is well."

"Yes, dear. Indeed, indeed, he is safe."

"And do you know who came with him? I saw their faces—Ben Pollard and Jim Spence—in the Daisy. Yes, it is true. And Jack planned it with them. They have escaped; and we, too, will be rescued. It is God's own doing. I could thank him on my knees for the rest of my life."

CHAPTER XV.

ENID'S NEW NAME.

The twisted strands of tough hemp might have been an electric cable of utmost conductivity if its powers were judged by results. When willing hands had carefully hauled in the rope until the knot could be unfastened, and the end secured to the cord connecting the gallery with the entrance, a man was despatched to warn Brand that all was in readiness for the next step.

The rough sailor was the messenger of the gods to those who waited on each story. As he ran upwards, climbing the steep stairs with the nimbleness of a monkey, he bellowed the great news to each crowded doorway. Seeing the girls in the kitchen, though already his breath was scant, he blurted out:

"It's all right, ladies! He's done the trick!"

On the next landing pallid women's faces gleamed at him.

"Rope aboard!" he gasped. "They are tyin' on legs o' mutton now."

Yet again he was waylaid on the floor above. Hard pressed for wind, he wheezed forth consolation.

"Just goin' to haul the bottled beer aboard," he grunted.

It would never do to pass the hospital without a word.

"Beef-tea an' port wine swimmin' here," he panted.

Brand was peering through the lantern door, awaiting this unwashed Mercury, who caught sight of the lighthouse-keeper ere his shaggy head had emerged from the well.

The man stopped, almost spent. He gave an offhanded sailor's salute.

"Haul away, sir!" he yelled, and his voice cracked with excitement. Indeed, they who remained quite coherent on the Gulf Rock, on the ships, and even on the cliffs nine miles away, were few in number and to be pitied exceedingly. There are times when a man must cheer and a woman's eyes glisten with joyous tears, else they are flabby creatures, human jellyfish. The steamboats snorted with raucous siren-blasts, and although the hoarse shouting of men and the whistling of steam were swept into space by the north wind in its rage, those on shore could read the riddle through their glasses of the retreating boat and the white vapor-puffs.

The first to grasp Stanhope's hand when he swung himself onto the deck of the tender was Mr. Cyrus J. Traill.

"Well done, my lad!" he cried, brokenly. "I thought it was all up with you. Did you see her?"

"Yes, but only for a second."

"You thought it best not to join them?"

"You know that I would gladly go now and attempt it. But I dared not refuse the better way. I can't tell you what happened. Something stilled the sea like magic. Look at it now."

Assuredly the waves were breaking again around the pillar with all their wonted ferocity, but one among the Trinity House officers noticed a smooth, oily patch floating past the vessel.

"By Jove!" he shouted, "Brand helped you at the right moment. He threw some gallons of colza overboard."

Traill, a bronzed, spare, elderly man, tall and straight, with eyes set deep beneath heavy eyebrows, went to Jim Spence and Ben Pollard where they were helping to sling the Daisy up to the davits.

"I said five hundred between you," he briefly announced. "If the rope holds, and the three people I am interested in reach the shore alive, I will make it five hundred apiece."

Ben Pollard's mahogany face became several inches wider, and remained so permanently his friends thought, but Jim Spence only grinned.

"You don't know the cap'n, sir. He'll save every mother's son—an' daughter, too—now he has a line aboard."

Then the exsailor, chosen with Ben from among the dozens of volunteers, owing to his close acquaintance with the reef, bethought him.

"You're treatin' Ben an' me magnificent, sir," he said, "but the chief credit is due to Mr. Stanhope. We on'y obeyed orders."

The millionaire laughed like a boy.

"I have not forgotten Mr. Stanhope, he said. "I am sure your confidence in Mr. Brand will be justified. You watch me smile when I ante up your share."

On board the tug, and on the gallery of the lighthouse, there was no time for talk. The vessel, with the most skillful handling, might remain where she was for about four hours. She was already more than a hundred fathoms within the dangerous area marked by the buoy, and there was much to be done in the time.

The strongest rope, the best wire hawser, has its well-defined limit of strain, and the greater the length the greater the tension. From the buoy itself naught save a chain cable would hold in such a sea. The tug must operate from the nearer base. She was pitching and tossing in a manner calculated to daunt anyone, but a sailor, and the slightest mistake made by the skipper, the burly oil-skinned man balancing himself on the bridge with his hand on the engine-room telegraph, would snap any line ever twisted.

So, briefly, this was the procedure adopted. A stout rope was bent onto that carried to the rock by Stanhope. With this was sent a whip, thus establishing a to-and-fro communication. The rope itself, when it had reached the rock, was attached to a buoy and anchored. Thus, it could be picked up easily if the thin wire hawser next despatched should happen to break.

A few words may cover a vast amount of exertion. Before the second line, with its running gear, was safely stayed around the body of the lantern—even the iron railing might give way—a precious hour elapsed, and Stanhope was impatiently stamping about the bridge of the tender, though none knew better than he that not an unnecessary moment was being lost.

At last a signaller stationed on the tug was able to ask:

"What shall we send first?"

And the answer came back:

"Water, milk, bread."

All night tinsmiths had laboured to enclose food and clothing in watertight cylinders ready for transport, and the shining packages now began their voyaging from the tug's trawl-beam to the lofty gallery, three-fourths of the journey being through the sea. When the first consignment reached the rock, another lusty cheer boomed from the watching vessels.

Stanhope, at least, could picture the scene in progress behind the grim granite walls—Constance and Enid, with others whom he did not know, serving out generous draughts to thirsty and famished women and men, helping themselves last, and hardly able to empty the eight-gallon supply of fresh water before they were called on to distribute a similar quantity of milk.

And then, the bread, the cooked meat all cut in slices, the tinned soups and meat extracts, the wines—for Traill had taken charge of the catering and his arrangements were lavish—what a feast for people almost on the verge of starvation!

The hours flew until the tug signaled that she must cast loose and back away from the reef. The tide was running westward now. Soon the danger would be active, and in any case, the Gulf Rock was saved from the possibility of famine during the next forty-eight hours. So the hawser in its turn, was buoyed, and Brand's parting instruction was not to attempt to reopen communication during the dark hours of the morning tide.

The wisdom of his advice was manifest. With farewell trumpetings the vessels scurried off to Penzance, and the telegraph-office was kept open all night transmitting the word-pictures of newspaper correspondents to thrill the world with full descriptions of the way in which the Gulf Rock's famished denizens had been relieved.

The two last packages ferried to the lighthouse contained, not only warm woollen wraps for the women and children, but a big bundle of letters and telegrams.

Pyne was the postman. There were at least twenty notes addressed to the girls, and several to Brand, from friends ashore.

Mr. Traill, of course, wrote to his nephew and Mrs. Vansittart. Naturally, Pyne carried his own missive to the kitchen, where he found that Constance and Enid had managed to wash in distilled water.

They were cutting sandwiches and endeavouring to read their letters at the same instant. He bowed with sarcastic politeness.

"I see you are ready for the party" he said.

Certainly he offered a deplorable contrast to them. His face was encrusted with salt and blackened with dirt and perspiration. His hands were like those of a sweep, but smeared with oil, which shone on his coat sleeves up to both elbows. His clothes were torn and soiled, his linen collar and cuffs limp as rags, and his waistcoat was ripped open, having remained in that condition since it caught in a block as he descended the mast.

"Oh, you poor fellow!" cried Constance. "How you must envy us. Here is a kettle of hot water. I can not say much for the towel, but the soap is excellent."

Refreshed, Pyne opened his uncle's letter. The girls were keeping up a running commentary of gossip.

"Mousie (Mrs. Sheppard) says she hasn't slept for three nights."

"Edith Taylor-Smith says she envies us."

"That letter you are reading now is from Lady Margaret. What does she say?"

"She sends all sorts of love, and—that kind of thing," cried the blushing Enid, who had just learnt from Jack's mother that Stanhope had appropriated her as his intended wife without ever a proposal.

"Is that all—in four closely written pages?"

"Well—she hopes soon to see me—to see both of us—"

Constance was too kindly to quiz her sister; maybe she saw something in Enid's eye which threatened speedy retaliation.

"Here's a note from the vicar. They have held a special service of intercession at St. Mary's."

"And Hettie Morris writes—Good gracious, Mr. Pyne! Have you had any bad news?"

Enid's wondering cry was evoked by the extraordinary way in which the young American was looking at her. Some intensely exciting knowledge had mastered stoicism. His eyes were distended, his lips quivering. He leaned with one hand on the kitchen table; in the other he had clenched his uncle's letter.

Constance stood near to him. That he, of all the men she had ever met, should yield to an overpowering emotion, startled her greatly.

She caught his arm.

"Mr. Pyne,' she said softly, "if—it is any ill tidings — you have received—we are, indeed, sorry for you."

He pulled himself straight, and gave Constance such a glance that she hastily withdrew her hand. It seemed to her that he would clasp her in his arms forthwith without spoken word. Her action served to steady him, and he laughed, so softly and pleasantly that their fear was banished.

"Girls," he said, slowly, "I have been parachuting through space for a minute or so. I'm all right. Everybody is all right. But my head swims a bit. If I come back forgetting my name and the place where I last resided, remember that once I loved you."

He left them. He could not trust himself to say more.

"That letter was from his uncle, I suppose," said Enid, awe-stricken.

"It must be something very dramatic which would make him act so strangely. Why has he run away? Was he afraid to trust us with his news?"

There was a sharp vehemence in Constance's voice which did not escape her sister's ears.

"Connie," said Enid, quietly, "as sure as Jack loves me, that man is in love with you."

"Enid—"

But the other girl laughed, with a touch of her saucy humour.

"Why did he look at you in that way just now? Didn't you think he was going to embrace you on the spot? Confess!"

"It was at you he was looking."

"Not in the way I mean. He gazed at me as if I were a spirit. But when you touched him he awoke. He might have been asleep and suddenly seen you near him. I wonder he didn't say, 'Kiss me, dearest, and then I will be sure it is not a dream.'"

Constance discovered that she must defend herself.

"Mr. Pyne hardly conveyed such unutterable things to me," she said, conscious that a clean face betrays a flush which smudges may hide. "Have you had a letter from Jack that you can interpret other people's thoughts so sweetly."

(To be continued)

CURED OF CONSTIPATON

Mr. Andrews praises Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Mr. George Andrews of Halifax, N.S., writes:

"For many years I have been troubled with chronic Constipation. This ailment never comes single-handed, and I have been a victim to the many illnesses that constipation brings in its train. Medicine after medicine I have taken in order to find relief, but one and all left me in the same hopeless condition. It seemed that nothing would expel from me the one ailment that caused so much trouble, yet at last I read about these Indian Root Pills.

That was indeed a lucky day for me, for I was so impressed with the statements made that I determined to give them a fair trial.

They have regulated my stomach and bowels. I am cured of constipation, and I claim they have no equal as a medicine."

For over half a century Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been curing constipation and clogged, inactive kidneys, with all the ailments which result from them. They cleanse the whole system and purify the blood. Sold everywhere at 25c. a box. 3

Hunter and Hunted.

A nearsighted sportsman strolled into a little hotel on the shores of Loch Carron and complainingly said, "Just seen a seal, shot at it three times and missed it each time."

At dinner an hour later he sat next to a tourist who had a bandage round his head.

"Had an accident?" asked the sportsman.

"Accident!" growled the other. "Attempted murder, you mean. I was having a bath about an hour ago when some lunatic with a gun fired at me three times from the shore and shot part of my ear off. I don't know why such animals are allowed out without a license."

Then silence reigned supreme.—London Telegraph.

Lavishness.

"In days of old luxurious people had cloth of gold placed beneath their feet."

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "But those times were comparatively economical. Now we want nothing less expensive than rubber tires between us and the earth."—Washington Star.

There Was No Music.

"What is the greatest fib that ever impressed itself on your experience, Snapper?"

"Well, by all odds, the worst one I ever heard was that your quartet perpetrated last night when they came round to the house and sang 'There's Music In the Air.'"

The Terms of Exchange.

"We wish to arrange for an exchange of prisoners," announced the South American dictator.

"On what basis?" inquired the leader of the other side.

"The usual basis—eight generals for a good, husky private."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Quick Sprint.

Sandy Pikes—Dat rich guy in de bungalow took quite a fancy to me. He took me around to de stable, showed me de $5,000 bulldog he had just bought and asked me if I could beat it. Gritty George—And what did you say? Sandy Pikes—Nuttin'. I just beat it.—Chicago News.

Was Willing.

Smith—You and Jones don't seem to be as friendly as you were. Does he owe you money? Brown—No, not exactly, but he wanted to.

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Toronto, Canada.—"I shall endeavor to describe to you how I felt before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I scarcely knew what it was to be well. I had awful bearing-down pains and usually before my monthly periods I suffered terribly and had to go to bed. I was not able to walk across the floor the pain was so bad. I doctored for a long time, but the doctor's treatment did not do me any good. I gave up all hopes of ever being well again until one day my husband saw the Compound advertised in the paper. He decided to get me a bottle, and I am thankful he did. I had not taken one bottle before I began to feel better, and I kept on taking it until now I am a different woman. It also helped me during maternity and childbirth. I can thoroughly recommend your Vegetable Compound to any woman who is afflicted with female trouble."—Mrs. J. M. TWEEDALE, 138 Nassau St., Toronto, Canada.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

The Thrilling Life.

Never say the country is laid up on the shelf.
You'll find the life that's in it if the life is in yourself.
It's full o' fine surprises. It's happy on the way.
The friendship country rises at the very break o' day!
—Atlanta Constitution.

Unanswerable.

Ethel had been visiting at a neighbor's.

"I hope you didn't take a second piece of cake, Ethel," said her mother.

"Yes, I did, mother," replied the child. "You told me never to contradict, and the lady said, 'I know you'll have another piece of cake,' so what could I say?'—Judge.

Natural Anxiety.

There was a swell tourist whose valet
Was once cut in two by an engine.
"Now, I wonder," said he,
"Which half of the fellow
Had the keys to the luggage in his pocket?"
—Puck.

Too Adept.

"The next event," said the announcer at the county fair, "will be a sack race for girls, professionals barred."

"What do you mean by professionals?"

"Those who have been wearing bobble skirts."—Kansas City Journal.

Not a Joy Forever.

There was a young lady named Rose
Who as a prize beauty did pose,
But she couldn't bake
Or cook a beefsteak,
And she couldn't darn her own hose.
—Chicago News.

A Bit Ambiguous.

Mrs. Jones—What did the person say when you sent him the brandied peaches?

Mrs. Giles—He said he didn't care so much for the peaches as he did for the spirit in which they were sent.—Scraps.

Our Awful Language.

There are words that depend on inflection,
There are words as complex as our dreams,
But regarding a woman's complexion
It is not as complex as it seems.

Eczema On Head and Arm

Four Doctors Failed After Fair Trial—Cure Effected by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

The average physician is helpless in the presence of skin diseases such as eczema and salt rheum. Some make the mistake of treating eczema as a blood disease and advise internal treatment. Others think only relief is possible and recommend a lotion to afford relief from the itching.

By far the most successful treatment for eczema is the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Ointment. You can verify this statement by enquiring of any druggist. This letter is a fair sample of what we are receiving about every day.

Mr. Geo. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For years I suffered with a skin disease on my head, a sort of eczema. I tried four doctors, giving each a fair trial, but got no better. In fact, the disease spread to my left arm.

"I saw Dr. Chase's Ointment advertised and began using it. Persistent use of this treatment has entirely cured me and I give you a statement of my case with pleasure as I hope thereby to induce some other sufferer to try the same Dr. Chase's Ointment."

There is a wonderful satisfaction in using Dr. Chase's Ointment for you can see from day to day just what results are being accomplished. 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Getting Desperate.

Some of the office buildings in the large cities are constructed apparently with the idea that every possible square foot of space must be utilized for renting purposes. The corridors are narrow, the passageways to the elevator shafts hard to find and the stairways located in obscure corners. There may be fire escapes, but they are equally obscure, and a stranger would not know where to look for them.

The occupants of a room on the seventh floor of a building of this kind, devoted to the uses of a fire and life insurance companies' agent, were surprised one day by the sudden entrance of a wild eyed man who seemed to be laboring under strong excitement.

"Say," gasped the intruder, "will some of you fellows please throw me out of this building?"

"What for?" asked one of the clerks.

"I've been trying for fifteen minutes to find a way out of it, and I can't."

They did not throw him out, but piloted him to the elevators, and he succeeded at last in making his escape.—Exchange.

Nearly a School Scandal.

What might have been a terrible sensation, calling for public investigation and much newspaperiety, was averted by the visit of a shocked mamma to one of our public primary schools. A friend of the mother was calling at the house and asked the little daughter, "How do you like your teacher?"

"Oh, my teacher is nice," answered Tot, "but she is always asking us for a cigarette."

"What?" cried the lady and the mamma in horrified tones, seeing contamination of the morals of Tot under the teachings of a modern bachelor of the feminine gender.

"Yes, mamma. She says, 'Cigarette, cigarette.'"

The next day mamma visited the school. As she entered the class room the teacher was calling first to one child and then to another, "Sit erect, sit erect!" while Tot flashed a glance of intelligence and "Didn't I tell you so?" at her mother.—Wasp.

It Is a Wise Child.

An official of the immigration bureau at Ellis Island told a story of a wise little immigrant child.

"A little girl came over in the steerage in search of her father, whose name she gave us. We sent for the man, and he came and looked at her.

"'I can't tell whether this is Mary or not,' said he. 'I haven't seen Mary since she was a baby about three months old. How can I tell, then, whether this is Mary or not?'

"It was a question we couldn't answer, so we looked from him to the child and from the child back to him, remaining silent.

"Finally, when we were all at our wits' end, he looked earnestly at the child and said plaintively, 'Am I your father?'

"And the wise little child answered quickly, 'Yes, you are.'

"And so we made her over to him."
—New York Press.

"Hang on Tight."

When a smoking car with thirty-five passengers jumped the track, a railroad engineer in the car, off duty, yelled to the passengers to "hang on tight," and while the car turned over no one was hurt.

"Hang on tight" is good advice in most upsets. The man who hangs on tight to himself when his temper is upset will get through without hurting either himself or others. The man who "hangs on tight" to his earnings ends with a competence. The man who "hangs on tight" to his place when business upsets come generally holds down his job. The man who "hangs on tight" when discouragement or even disaster upsets others is a man to be hopeful about, because he will keep right side up whatever else turns over.—Philadelphia Press.

Saved by a Dream.

"Hints conveyed by dreams are occasionally worth heeding," says the London Chronicle. "The late Lord Dufferin when in Paris dreamed that he was in a hearse on the way to the cemetary. A few days later, as he was about to enter the elevator of a certain hotel, he was startled to find that the attendant was a double of the driver of the hearse in his dream. He thereupon promptly left the elevator and walked upstairs. The car ascended without him, but as it neared the top something in the mechanism gave way, and the passengers met their death. Had they also, one wonders, been forewarned in a dream?"

A Voracious Monster.

The most voracious of all marine beasts of prey is the orca, or killer whale. It reaches a length of twenty-five fe , and its jaws bristle with teeth from four to six inches long and as sharp as a dirk knife. Its digestive power is proportioned to the tremendous efficacy of its jaws. It seems also to be an atrocious glutton, as one specimen examined contained in its stomach thirteen porpoises and fourteen seals.

Full Penalty.

Mrs. Peckem—Henry, what punishment should be meted out to a man who proposes to a woman and then refuses to marry her? Peckem—He should be compelled to marry her.—Exchange.

Didn't Want Trouble.

The Playwright — Honestly, now, what do you think of my new play? The Critic—Don't ask me. You're so much bigger and stronger than I am.

Since thou art not sure of a minute do not throw away an hour.—Franklin.

A White Disk.

A white object can be seen at a distance of 17,250 times its own diameter in strong sunlight—that is to say, a white disk 1 foot across can be seen 17,250 feet away.

You enjoyed a package six months ago. They were delicious. But much more so to-day. Improvement in process and materials has resulted in greater crispness, finer flavor, a more delicious quality. They are superior to all. Prove it. Make a test. Try them now.

Captain Bartlett's Three Cheers.

A series of Revolutionary scenes were given in a London theater some months after the close of that memorable war. On the one side was the English army in full red coated uniform, with every button in its exact place. Opposite them was the American army, composed, as the theater bill stated, of "artisans, cobblers and tinkers," arrayed in their working dress, with buttons of every size and hue. When the curtain dropped, Captain Bartlett of Plymouth, Mass., the captain of a ship then in port, stood up in his seat in the pit and, in a voice as if given from a quarterdeck in a squall, called, "Three cheers for the artisans, cobblers and tinkers who were too much for King George and his redcoats," and, with a wave of his hat, he gave these with a will. For a short time there was silence in the theater, followed by an enthusiastic John Bull appreciative cheer for the pluck and assurance of the Yankee captain, who became the lion of the city, receiving invitations to clubs and free tickets to theatrical and other entertainments while he remained in port.

Just a Little Too Smart.

A scrubwoman in a Paris theater found a magnificent diamond stomacher in a box in sweeping up. The honest old soul determined to restore the stomacher to its owner, and the owner, of course, wasn't long in turning up, a young woman splendidly dressed and on the verge of hysteria. "Oh, have you found my stomacher?" she cried. "It is a chef d'oeuvre of Lalique of the Place Vendome." "Calm yourself, madame," said the scrubwoman. "Here is your stomacher." And she produced it from her pocket. The other took out a fifty dollar bill, pressed it on the honest scrubwoman and departed with her stomacher hurriedly. But an hour later another lady called. "Have you found my stomacher?" she asked, smiling. "I think I left it in my box." "Why, yes, madame, but if it was your stomacher," said the scrubwoman, "a thief has got it. She got it this morning. She gave me $50 reward." "Why, the stomacher was imitation," the lady said. "It only cost $5. Your thief is $45 out."

Mr. Gladstone's Catch.

"How many members of this house," asked Mr. Gladstone once in the course of a debate on electoral qualifications, "can divide £1,330 17s. 6d. by £2 13s. 8d.?"

"Six hundred and fifty-eight," shouted one member.

"The thing cannot be done," exclaimed another.

A roar of laughter greeted this last remark. But it was true nevertheless. You cannot multiply or divide money by money. You may repeat a smaller sum of money as many times as it is contained in a larger sum of money, but that is a very different thing. If you repeat 5 shillings as often as there are hairs in a horse's tail you do not multiply 5 shillings by a horse's tail. Perhaps you did not know this before. Never mind; you need not be ashamed of your ignorance, for it was shared, as has been demonstrated, by the entire house of commons (bar one member), including the then chancellor of the exchequer.

The St. Lawrence.

Vessels of 4,000 tons can ascend the St. Lawrence river to Montreal, a distance of 1,000 miles from the sea. Only one other river in the world, the Amazon, is navigable to such a distance for craft as large.

Jewels on an Idol.

The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of those remarkably hideous images possess such valuable head ornaments as one made for the idol Parthasathy, in the Triplicane temple at Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees and is made of gold, studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and diamond at 300 rupees apiece.

Macedonia.

Macedonia has a population of about 4,000,000. Three-fourths are Christians and one-fourth Turks. Nearly half are of Bulgarian ancestry.

Orchards.

Orchards generally produce full crops only every other year. This is because the full crop of one year so exhausts the fruit producing qualities of the soil that it is not able to make a full crop the next year.

Presbyopia.

Old sight (presbyopia) begins at about the age of forty. It is first noticed by the tendency to hold the paper farther off. The glasses should not enlarge the letters, but simply render them clear and natural at the ordinary reading distance. Whatever the ocular defect, the proper glasses should be obtained as soon as it is discovered.

Points For Mothers

There is more than one reason for letting the children blow soap bubbles. It's good, harmless fun, for one thing, and keeps them out of worse mischief. It can result in nothing worse than a little soap in the eyes and a little soapsuds on the clothes, both of which are comparatively harmless.

But it is more than good fun. It is beneficial to the lungs. There are doctors who recommend it as an excellent way of exercising the lungs, and hence greatly strengthening to them.

Deep breathing exercises are freely recommended, but who could think of anything stupider than pulling in and puffing out great gulps of fresh air. How much more fun to see who can blow the biggest bubble!

Bubble blowing is better for children than some of the lung developers that are sold. The soapsuds will rarely hold long enough to do harm to the lungs by overextending them or by too long effort.

To blow very big bubbles try putting a piece of rubber tubing about seven inches long on the narrow end of a funnel. Invert the mouth of the funnel in the soapsuds as you would the bowl of a pipe, then blow as hard as you can through the tube and note how you expand your lungs as well as make wonderful soap bubbles.

The Fashionable Mother.

The mother who gives over her child entirely to the care of an attendant after school hours is typical of the times, for this the up to date parent manages somehow, even on limited means. What is the result? Lax table manners, a curt "yes" or "no" when answering elders, and with relations no manners at all; taking what is wanted without permission from any room, and raging at correction from any source. Of course the mother resents any criticism of her method and will endeavor to explain away the tantrums as nervousness.

She wants her child—when grown up at least—to have the manners of her class, but she does not seem to realize that these will probably not be acquired from hired attendants, nor will years of struggling entirely obliterate the effect of early influence. That every small girl should at least have luncheon with her mother and occasionally be her companion for driving or calling, seems a not unreasonable demand, but many fashionable mothers are unwilling to make even this small sacrifice, if that can be called a sacrifice which ought to be the highest privilege.

Christening the New Baby.

The time chosen for a christening is usually when the child is about six weeks old, though when there is difficulty in deciding upon a name it is deferred.

The first step in this ceremony is the choice of sponsors. Parents should request only those relatives and near friends who are likely to have the time and disposition to keep their promises they are called upon to make. Two women and one man usually are sponsors for a girl, and two men and one woman for a boy, though one godfather and one godmother suffice for a child of either sex.

Usually the mother writes to ask the service of the friends or relatives decided upon to take the vows in behalf of her baby, but there is no reason why the request should not be made verbally.

Aside from the sponsors and near relatives, only a few intimate friends of the husband and wife are asked to be present at the christening, and the wife issues brief notes of invitation to them.

Danger From Small Toys.

Your children should never be allowed tiny playthings, for the instinct of most young children is to put everything they come across into their mouths.

One of the quickest and most effective ways of removing anything from the windpipe is to place the first and second fingers down the throat and try to seize the swallowed object and bring it up.

Should a fairly small object be swallowed, let the little one eat a hasty pudding or a basin of bread and milk, with more bread than milk, in order to form a poultice around the object and prevent it from doing harm. Consult a doctor as speedily as possible.

BOYS' CAMPAIGN !!

$$ BOYS $$

This is a heart-to-heart talk with Boys about selling the Examiner, and how it may act as a stepping-stone to a successful business career in after years.

BOYS, do you recognize the fact that this little business offers you an opportunity to

Make 100

per cent.

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

Here's How It's Done

BUY the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each; in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive 10 cts. from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say, the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

Climbing Steadily

THE Street Sales of the Examiner are climbing steadily and have touched by far the highest point in the history of the paper.

This result has increased the value of the Examiner as an advertising medium. In the city and in the districts outside the city limits, the increase in circulation is most gratifying, and credit is due to the pushing newsboys for their good work in bringing in new subscribers.

Persistency Draws Good Wages

Enough persistency in Boys is necessary to draw good wages, and this quality gives the biggest awards to the Boys who stick to business.

TO know how to KEEP ON is important in selling papers. It is the secret of the boy who is called "fortunate."

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily selling the Examiner, but some make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Use Spare Time Usefully

GET in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and 'Xmas.

The delivery of the Examiner is under strict and constant supervision. Yet irregularities will creep in, because carrier boys make mistakes like all other people.

Subscribers are invited to complain PROMPTLY. Complaints are welcomed when there is a reason for them. They will be given prompt attention.

SELLING THE EXAMINER

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be Ambitious. Good Newsboys are taken care of and recommended for future positions

Royal Mistakes.

Sovereigns and princes are strangely given to making astonishing mistakes while dealing with dates. The inscription on King Edward VII.'s coffin that he died in the ninth year of his reign instead of the tenth is only an example of many similar errors. In November, 1858, Queen Victoria wrote to the late king to inform him that he might consider himself emancipated from parental authority and control, as he was now eighteen years old and therefore of age. Her majesty's letter, which was very long, was a quasi sermon, and it ended by informing the then Prince of Wales that he would be forthwith made a knight of the Garter and a colonel in the army. How Queen Victoria and Prince Albert fell into so extraordinary a mistake it is impossible to understand, for the prince had only then completed his seventeenth year. Dean Wellesley, to whom the young prince showed the letter, at once detected the serious error into which the queen had fallen, but he thought it best to say nothing.—London Truth.

Got Full Measure.

All yesterday James had played truant from school, and when the irate master raised his cane threateningly James burst into a flood of tears.

"Please don't lick me, sir," he sobbed.

"And why should I not lick you, pray?" thundered the schoolmaster.

"W'y, sir, 'cos I think I've 'ad enough!" gasped James. "Yesterday the boy as I played truant with and I fell out and he licked me, and a man we threw stones at caught me and licked me, the driver of a cart we hung on to licked me, the owner of a cat we chased licked me. Then when I got home mother licked me, and after that father licked me, and then mother licked me again for calling her a sneak for telling father."

"Well," responded the master grimly, "by this time one licking more or less won't make much difference, and it seems hard I shouldn't have my whack. Come here, sir!"—London Answers.

Remnants of a College Course.

Prosecuting Attorney (examining a prospective juror)—Do you know anything about chemistry?

"I studied it at school."

"Do you think you remember enough of it to make you a competent juror in a poison case?"

"I'm not sure."

"Do you remember any of the formulas?"

"Let me see—two."

"Only two?"

"Yes, sir."

"Are they in a poem?"

(Blushing) "Yes, sir."

"Is this the poem?

"Our Willie boy is dead and gone.
We ne'er shall see him more.
What Willie thought was H2O
Was H2SO4."

(Blushing furiously) "Yes, sir."

"I thought so. You are excused."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Went Back on His Authority.

Leslie Stephen's single meeting with Freeman, the historian, was in the nature of a collision. "I came in contact with him only once," he said. "He wrote a life of Alfred for the Dictionary of National Biography under my editorship, but declined to do more because we had a difference of opinion as to whether Athelstane should be spelled with an 'A.' That was, I confess, a question to which I was culpably indifferent, but I had taken competent advice, and my system (I forget what it was) had been elsewhere sanctioned by the great historian Stubbs. Now, as Freeman was never tired of asserting the infallibility of Stubbs, I innocently thought that I might take refuge behind so eminent an authority. The result was that for once Freeman blasphemed Stubbs and refused to cooperate any longer in an unscholarlike enterprise."

The Old, Old Story.

I told her the old, old story—
I told it as well as I could—
And, though it was aged and hoary,
She thought it was wondrously good.

Years passed. One morning she told it
In all its rare beauty to me.
In whisperings soft she unrolled it,
With blushes, rare visions to see.

And strange, though the years had not changed it,
Though sweet as in seasons of yore,
It seemed from the way she arranged it
As though I'd ne'er heard it before!
—Harper's Weekly.

Irish War Pipers For Glasgow.

A movement is on foot in Gaelic League circles to establish an Irish War Pipe Band in Glasgow. The idea of fostering such a band has long been fostered by Gaelic Leaguers, who see no reason why a city which has Irish football and hurling clubs, Irish brass and flute bands, and so on, should not also have an Irish War Piper Band. If the scheme should materialise, Glasgow will became possessed of a very picturesque body, for the Irish pipers, bareheaded (as they always walk) and garbed in the quaint old Celtic kilt and plaid—not tartan—present an interesting sight.

Potato Blight In Erin.

The potato blight has unfortunately made its appearance in several widely separated districts in County Cavan and County Leitrim. The first traces of the disease was found in the farmers' kitchen gardens, and it soon spread to the immense fields where the tubers had been sown. Farmers are doing their utmost to stay the progress of the blight, these efforts being generally helped by the good weather now prevailing.

Not All For Love.

Little Florrie—Oh, aunty, dear, don't you go yet, please. Aunt—But I must, darling. I should like to stay longer, and it is sweet of you to love your aunty so. Florrie—Oh, please aunty, don't go yet. Mamma said she'd whip me as soon as you went.

A Cow's Milk.

About 400 gallons of milk a year is the average yield of a healthy cow.

Tell a Child the Truth.

Tell a child always the truth about everything, no matter how trivial or unimportant it may be, and it will soon come to have perfect confidence in everything you say. A little one declines to go into a dark room to bring out its doll that was left there because some one has told it of a great bogy man that lurks in dark apartments ready to spring upon little children. Nurses should be trained to tell the truth regarding the most unimportant happenings and affairs. Parents should consider well before putting into words hasty or ill advised speech, for little minds are quick to grasp the meaning, and memories are wonderfully retentive.

Gold Coins.

Gold pieces are the only coins of the United States which are worth their face value intrinsically. A double eagle contains $20 worth of gold without counting the one-tenth part of copper.

Children in China.

In China children are brought up almost as if they were deaf and dumb. A Chinese boy or girl will sit in the presence of father or mother for hours and never say a word unless spoken to. The Chinese boy who would speak to a caller at the house unless he had permission would be considered a most impudent rascal.

Tea Smoking.

Tea smoking is extremely poisonous and unpleasant in its effects. In a very short time it produces nausea, palpitation of the heart and acute trembling in the limbs.

Stone Garments.

The Russians manufacture a fabric from the fiber of a filamentous stone from the Siberian mines which is said to be of so durable a nature that it is practically indestructible. The material is soft to the touch and pliable in the extreme and when soiled has only to be placed in a fire to be made absolutely clean.

Dragon's Blood.

The sap of the dragon tree of Teneriffe, a resinous substance like dark treacle, is called dragon's blood. It becomes brittle and crumbling when dry and is an article of commerce used in medicine.

The Carolinas.

The Carolinas were not named after Queen Caroline, but after Charles II., the Latin of Charles being Carolus, hence Carolina.

The Water Pump.

The most ancient description we have of a water pump is by Hero of Alexander. There is no authentic account of the general use of the pump in Germany previous to the beginning of the sixteenth century. At about that time the endless chain and bucket works for raising water from mines began to be replaced by pumps.

Needle's Journey.

A needle which entered the left knee of a dressmaker at Schroda, Posen, emerged some days later from the sole of her right foot.

Volcano Cooking.

The Maoris of New Zealand cook their potatoes and other vegetables in volcanic heat. There are a few volcanoes in New Zealand, and some of the Maoris live up in the mountains near them. They make the volcanoes do several useful things for them, but the quaintest is the cooking.

Caste in India.

The barbers of India rank with the washerwomen. The son of a barber must be a barber, and his wife must be a washerwoman.

For the Children

Katie Frick a Bright Little Blind Girl.

Little folks who possess all their senses will surely sympathize with Katie Frick, a little deaf, dumb and blind girl, who is making wonderful progress in acquiring an education. Katie lives in Pennsylvania and the state has given money that she may be educated. When Katie was six she lost the use of eyes, ears and voice and the fact that she was not born in that condition has been a great help to her teacher, as she remembers many things she saw before becoming blind. Katie was taught to count by means of wooden blocks, learning quickly and easily. Her greatest triumph and pleasure came, however, when she learned to write and was able to send a letter to her parents. It is believed that in time she may be taught to speak. At present she converses by placing her fingers on the lips of those speaking, as shown in the picture above.

The Language of Flowers.

Apple blossom—Preference.
Bridal rose—Happy love.
Chrysanthemum—I love.
Camelia—Excellence.
Calla lily—Modesty.
Cornflower—Delicacy.
Carnation—Fascination.
Daisy—Innocence.
Daffodil—Unrequited love.
Red rose—Bashful love.
Forgetmenot—Remembrance.
Geranium—Gentility.
Goldenrod—Encouragement.
Heartsease—Contentment.
Heliotrope—Devotion.
Honeysuckle—Happiness.
Hyacinth—Constancy.
Ivy—Fidelity.
Jasmine—Only for thee.
Jonquil—Affection.
Lady's slipper—Fickleness.
White rosebud—Girlhood.
Wild rose—Simplicity.
Violet—Faithfulness.
Snowdrop—Hope.
Poppy—Consolation.
Pansy—Thoughts of you.
Nasturtium—Splendor.
Mignonette—Good qualities.
Marigold—Contempt.
Lily of the Valley—Unconscious sweetness.

Origin of Etiquette.

The French word "etiquette" really means a "label" or "ticket." How, then, comes it to denote "conventional forms of ceremony?"

It is said that a certain Scottish gardener in charge of Louis XIV.'s garden at Versailles was very much put out because the courtiers walked over his beds. To keep off these trespassers he placed labels or tickets—"etiquettes"—at various spots, with instructions as to the proper path. At first the haughty courtiers did not deign to notice these placards, but a hint from high quarters that their walks in future must be within the "etiquettes" compelled their obedience.

Thus, according to the story, originated our present use of the word "etiquette."

King Caesar.

An outdoor game for boys. Two bases are marked out, one at each of the extreme ends of the playground. The players divide and one party takes possession of each space. One player is "out" and stands in the middle. He is called "King Caesar." The others run to and fro, from boundary to boundary, and it is the business of the king to try and catch them as they pass.

When he catches one he taps him on the head, saying, "I crown thee king." The player thus caught then joins in the capture of the others and the making of more kings till all are caught. When all have been crowned the game may begin over again.

Riddles Answered.

If you cut thirty yards of cloth into one yard pieces and cut one yard every day, how long will it take?

Answer—Twenty-nine days.

What two numbers multiplied together will produce seven?

Answer—Seven and one.

Read the following surprising sentence, ALL O.

Answer—Nothing after all.

Flower Lessons.

Mother Nature's flowers convey
Lots of things a child should know.
Four o'clocks tell us the hours
When they open wide their flowers.
Sunflowers head to where the sun
Rises when all his work is done.
Dandelion puffs, you know,
Tell you when it's time to go
If you blow their fluff away.
Peonies make fine dolls for play.
"Tea love buttons," you are told
By deep cups of yellow gold,
And the daisy's petals white
Tell your fortune fair and bright.
Lots of things a child should know
Mother Nature's flowers can show.
—Martha Gilmore.

Perfumes.

There are scores of references in the Bible to the use of perfumes by the Hebrews both in their religious services and in private life.

FAIR DIRECTORS HAVE A SURPLUS OF $2,000

Meeting Held Last Evening to Wind Up This Year's Business---Exhibition Was a Great Success---More Than 12,000 Paid Admission---Citizen's Meeting to Discuss Purchase of Grounds.

The last meeting of the Directors of the Peterborough Exhibition was held last evening to wind up the business of the year. President Beatty in the chair and the following Directors present: Messrs. Stratton, Brown, Storey, Gillespie, Turner, Hendry, Oke, Collins, Elliott, Hackett, Hall, Conroy, Manico and Dr. Sproul. Secretary Bennett. Probably the most important and lengthy business transacted was the decision to call a meeting in connection with the Board of Trade to consider a proposition to purchase the grounds. It was stated that the city would not buy them unless a majority of the ratepayers were in favor of it. The Directors stated that they would put it up on condition that the city would buy it. The Directors also decided to purchase a number of tickets to the Toronto Exhibition. There was some discussion as to making the fair a holiday, but it was left over until a later meeting to decide.

A Resolution of Thanks.

The following resolution of thanks was tendered Hon. J. P. Sperrin. M.P., at first moved by Ald. Gillespie and seconded by Mr. Storey.

"That the Directors of the Peterborough District Exhibition desire to formally express their appreciation of Hon. J. P. Sperrin's public spirit and loyalty to Peterborough County and City interests as shown in his bringing to this city by rail his splendid string of imported thoroughbred horses. In contemplating the success of the exhibition, the directors feel that the Hackney horses, perhaps, the greatest attendance attraction, and this contributed very largely, to the gratifying financial outcome, not to count the addition to the funds of the exhibition, represented by the donation to the Association of the prizes so won by the exhibitor of the Columbine Horse Show. Mr. Sperrin's attraction had also an educative character, for the public were given an opportunity of seeing, judging and admiring specimens of the finest Hackneys to be found anywhere in the world.

And that the thanks of the directors and members of the Industrial Exhibition be heartily extended to Hon. Mr. Stratton, and the Secretary be instructed to forward him a copy of this resolution."

This resolution was passed amid an outburst of applause.

A vote of thanks was also tendered Mr. W. E. Conway for the excellent manner in which he handled the gates and looked after the ticket sellers. It was moved by Mr. George Elliott and seconded by Mr. Wm. Collins.

A Protest Entered.

A protest was entered by John Johnson of Otonabee against Samuel Redmond for exhibiting a two-year old heifer in the [illegible] class. It was left to the Secretary and Vice President to settle.

It was moved by George Elliott and seconded by [illegible] Brown, that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition be held the following

GODERICH MURDER CASE DEEP MYSTERY POLICE HAVE NO CLUE AS TO CULPRIT

Special to The Examiner.

GODERICH, SEPT. 26. Mystery and intrigue the foul murder of little Lizzie Anderson, whose outraged body was found on Sunday morning in the cellar of an old unoccupied house on the out-kirts of this town.

Inspector Greer of the Provincial Police is here working on the case, with the help of the local officials, but admit that no likely clue to the identity of the fiend or fiends who committed the crime has yet developed. Several leads are being followed up, and to facilitate the investigation the inquest has been adjourned until 7.30 on Tuesday night. In a statement to a reporter to-night, both Inspector Greer and Crown Attorney C. Seager affirmed that unless something developed to-morrow there will be very little material facts to lay before the jury.

Coroner Dr. Holmes' jury assembled at 11 this morning, and, after viewing the body at Undertaker J. Brophy's place, adjourned till 3 p.m., at which time Inspector Greer arrived, and asked for a further adjournment which was granted.

Town Greatly Stirred.

The town is greatly stirred by the terrible crime, the most dastardly committed in these parts for many years. Sympathy for the family of the murdered girl is heard on every side and it is certain that many will not rest until every means of bringing the murderer to justice has been exhausted.

A Baffling Case

Inspector Greer, Crown Attorney Seager, Chief Postlethwaite, and a party of newspapermen drove out to the scene of the crime this afternoon, and made a thorough search of the cellar in which the nude form of the little girl was found by her father and friends on Sunday morning. The condition of the body, the clothing, and the surroundings were most bewildering, and, it is said, are baffling the officers completely. The body lay near the entrance to the cellar, on the gravel floor, face upwards, and stripped of every stitch of clothing except the boots and stockings. There were tears on the stocking, showing that she had walked rather than been carried to the place. Burrs were plentiful in the vicinity of the house. The clothing was in a heap near the centre of the cellar, and thoroughly soaked with blood.

Two Slashes in Throat.

The throat had been cut apparently with a pen knife, a mark appearing on the right side from the side of the neck to the Adam's apple. Two slashes had been made. An incision appeared just above the big cut. A dark bruise was noticeable on the forehead, but the skin was not broken. There was no blood whatever on the body, except a little in her hair, and no cuts any place except at the neck. The face was dirty with gravel and sand, but other parts of the body were clean. According to the statement of local officers the girl had not struggled while her throat was being cut, because there was no evidence that she had fought with her hands.

Girl May Have Been Stunned.

This circumstance supports the theory advanced by local officials, that the girl was stunned before being taken into the cellar by the blow on the forehead. After committing the assault, the men, thinking the girl had been injured beyond recovery, finished the deed by cutting her throat.

Two little pools of blood were found in different parts of the cellar, each several feet from the body.

Clothing Cut Off Body.

The young lady's clothing had been cut from her body with a knife. Parts of her underclothing were in ribbons. Detective Greer's theory is that more than one was involved. He says it would be impossible for one man to have handled the girl alone and carried her into the low cellar even in a stunned or inactive condition.

Last Seen on Fair Grounds.

The Italian, Mauro Spatoro, lived in the same house as the Andersons and "Punk" Jardine, the young man of the suburbs, was seen on the Fair grounds with the girl. Jardine admits speaking to the girl, and giving her fifteen cents, he says, to buy her supper. Lizzie was seen by many people at the Fair on Tuesday, the day she disappeared, each of whom saw her standing near the fence, inside the grounds, a few yards from the main entrance, as if waiting for some one.

Her Brother's Story

Her brother, Willie, who was at the Fair, says he saw her at 6.30 o'clock, and told her to wait until he was ready to go home. When he returned later she was gone. Willie states that his sister told him at the time that young Jardine had given her fifteen cents and had told her to meet him a little way down the street and he would go home with her. The Italian, Spatoro, who was also at the Fair, admits having spoken to the girl there. He told her to wait until he took his horse to the stable and he would return and take her home. That was about 8 o'clock. He also says the girl was gone when he returned.

Jardine's Movements.

Reports have been in circulation that "Punk" Jardine was seen at 7 o'clock on the morning following the disappearance of the girl, but the detectives cannot confirm this. The allegation is absolutely denied by the young man and his parents, who affirm that he came home about eight o'clock on Tuesday evening. When seen by the detective the young man had on the same fight suit he wore to the Fair, and so far as the officer could see it was free from stains.

BARRIE GIRL IS CHARGED WITH MURDER OF CHILD

Becomes Hysterical During Preliminary Examination and Her Wild Screams Disturb the Court Room

Crown Prosecutor Blackstock Makes Scathing Arraignment of the Prisoner.

Special to The Examiner.

BARRIE, ONT., SEPT. 27. Mary Dolan, charged, along with Thomas McNulty, with drowning her child, faced the jury this morning for trial, the Grand Jury having presented her for murder. Crown Prosecutor Blackstock in a scathing arraignment of the prisoner, told the Crown's theory of a previous child by McNulty, who is a married man. During the preliminary proceedings the girl prisoner became hysterical and her screams were heard in court. During Blackstock's address she broke down. Both defendants are well known and crowds thronged the court.

THE CHAMPION T. A. S. TEAM WERE GUESTS AT BANQUET

Most Enjoyable Gathering Around the Festive Board at Hooper's Palm Parlours Last Night---Winners Were Congratulated Upon Capturing City League Championship Twice in Succession.

The members of the T.A.S. baseball team, champions of the City League for the season of 1909-10, were the guests of the officers of and executive of the club at a feast supper, provided by Mine Host Hooper in his spacious dining hall. The occasion was graced by the presence of several loyal supporters of the team, who came at the invitation of the executive. After ample justice had been done to the splendid repast, the following list of toasts was run off by the president of the club, Mr. J. J. Hickey.

The King. All hands joined in singing the national anthem.

St. Peter's T.A.S., responded to by the president, Mr. R. J. Begley, who in a few words congratulated the boys on their success in the field, and assured them that the society as a whole were justly proud of their achievement in winning the championship two years in succession, and wished them, on behalf of the society, continued success.

The toast of The Club was responded to by the manager, Mr. A. J. Quinlan, who in a neat speech assured the boys it was a pleasure to be associated with such a bunch of good, loyal sports. Mr. Jas. Doris, secretary, spoke along the same lines and wished the boys to "tick together and make it three in a row."

The toast to absent members, brought Mr. W. J. O'Brien to his feet, who in his own inimitable style answered for the absent ones, and actually brought tears to the eyes of the vast multitude present.

The toast, Sister Sports, was ably responded to by Messrs. F. McGrath and the old war horse, Eugene Hurtubise.

Eddie Desautel also favoured the boys.

audience with a few well pointed remarks. Chubbie O'Connor, he of Fruitlet fame, was also called upon and expressed his pleasure at being present and assured the boys he would be with them again as soon as the frogs resumed their band concerts on the banks of the Otonabee.

Mr. George Lynch then favoured the boys with a few of his comic stories, which brought down the house, but the climax of the evening came when the chairman called on Mr. J. J. Hanrahan to respond to the toast of The Ladies. His remarks were listened to with bated breath, as she extolled the merits of the fair sex. His only regret was the absence of the ladies from the festive board on this occasion, and he hoped the executive would see their way clear to invite them the next time.

After a few remarks from the mascot of the club, Nagle Phelan, and from Cyril Giroux, Frank Hefferman, H. Rabnel, Doc. McFadden, George O'Hearne, Leo. Detscher, and last but not least, Connie Murphy and cheers for the president of the club and Mine Host Hooper and singing Auld Lang Syne, the gathering broke up, after spending one of the most pleasant evenings in the history of the club.

Messages of regret at their inability to be present were read from Pat Powers, president of the Eastern League, Joe Kelly, manager of the Toronto Maple Leaves, and "Fish" Hainey, the high salaried catcher. The latter sent his regrets by wireless.

It is well known [illegible] quir- [illegible] ing wagons during the last two years have been unable to obtain them, owing to the demand being much larger than the supply. In fact, many thousand dollars worth have been imported from the States under a heavy duty.

The new company has taken over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, one of the oldest wagon manufacturing concerns in Canada, which will, when the new factory is erected at Port Arthur, be removed there.

The city of Port Arthur has granted very valuable concessions in order to induce the company to locate there. These include 20 acres of land, a large dock site, and exemption from taxation. The manner in which the west is developing will make the dock of immense value, as a geographical position of Port Arthur has made that city the gateway of the west.

The company is giving a bonus of 50 per cent. of the common stock to all subscribers of preferred, which makes the issue extremely inviting and one which will yield a good return to investors.

Roosevelt Begins Battle For Recognition As Big Boss Of The Republican Party

Special to The Examiner.

SARATOGA, N.Y., SEPT. 27 In the great convention hall here today began Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's battle for recognition as the big boss of the Republican party and incidentally for the chairmanship of convention, to be followed in a few months, no doubt, by his nomination for President of the United States. It was freely admitted that when Republican candidates met there this morning to select a candidate for the Governor of the State that the feeling between Vice-President Sherman and Ex-President Roosevelt factions was so bitter that blows might result. While it is not liable that the voting for temporary chairman will be completed till late this afternoon, early canvasses seemed to indicate that Roosevelt is stronger than Sherman. Several times during acrimonious speeches this morning, clamour and harangue was so vigorous that Roosevelt rose and appealed for order.

SARATOGA, N. Y.—(Later)—A bitter denunciation of Roosevelt policies and personality was poured out for hours at the Republican convention here today. The Ex-President was denounced to his face by every man who elected him Governor and President in years gone by. So bitter was the speech of Abraham Gruber, who faced Roosevelt as he spoke, that the doughtly colonel had to interrupt for a square deal. The control of the convention still hangs in the balance.

TO SEE FIXTURES

Property Committee Will Go to Toronto on Thursday

A meeting of the Property committee of the City Council was held last night, there being present Ald. Duncan, chairman, Ald. Morgan, Bradburn, Graham and Batten. It was moved by Ald. Bradburn and seconded by Ald. Graham that the insurance on the Dan Spence Ambulance be cancelled and then renewed to the same company. The matter of purchasing electrical fittings for the new public library was taken up and considered with a member of a leading Toronto firm. It was decided on motion of Ald. Batten and seconded by Ald. Bradburn that as many of the committee as possible go to Toronto on Thursday to see fittings furnished by this firm. Dr. McPherson will also decide what fittings will be required for the Isolation Hospital, and these will be looked over at the same time. The matter of the cesspool for the new Isolation Hospital, was left in the hands of the chairman.

The committee then adjourned.

Oliver broke down when he heard the sentence of the court.

FRIDAY'S CONCERT

The concert of the 57th Regimental Band, to be held in the Armouries on Friday night, will undoubtedly attract a big crowd, and arrangements are being made to have 500 or 600 chairs placed in the big arena, so that the audience may comfortably enjoy the programme. Miss Lavin, Halliban and a male quartette are the special attractions. Miss Halliban will sing "The Holy City," and "Killarney," with obligato by the band. The numbers by the band will include two magnificent descriptive numbers: "Le Fremersberg," and "The Mill in the Black Forest," by Eilenberg, as well as a medley of Harry Lauder song hits and other new selections. The concert will be one of the big musical events of the season.

The Season's Choicest Musical Offering "The Bohemian Girl"

Peterborough is especially favoured in the visit to the Grand to-morrow night of the Aborn English Grand Opera Company, the most famous travelling grand opera company on this continent. Last week the company filled a week's engagement in Montreal to capacity houses and the musical critics of Canada's biggest city were wildly enthusiastic over the merits of the organization. Judging by the advance sale here there will be an enormous crowd at the Grand to-morrow night to greet the Aborn Company who will be heard in Balfe's masterpiece, "The Bohemian Girl," the tuneful score of which is familiar to Peterborough people, because of its rendition by the 57th Regimental band with whom it is a favourite overture. It abounds in melodious solo numbers and provides as well plenty of opportunities for chorus singing and the Aborn Company carries a very large and capable cast. A feature of note will be the splendid orchestra carried by the organization.

EPWORTH LEAGUE HONOURS DEPARTING PRESIDENT

Mr. W. E. McCann Was Presented With a Gold Headed Umbrella at Open Meeting of the League Last Night.

ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME

A large audience was in attendance at the open meeting of the Epworth League of George Street church last night. A splendid programme was presented, Rev. Mr. Couch acting as chairman. Addresses, principally on missionary work, were given by Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., of Toronto and Rev. Mr. Jones, appointed missionary for China.

The Mark Street Epworth League was also present.

Besides addresses being given there was a much appreciated solo by Mr. A. Gray.

The meeting was in the nature of a farewell to Mr. W. E. McCann, who has been president of the League for the past three years, and is now leaving for Toronto. As a token of respect and sincere regret at losing Mr. McCann, the League last night presented him with a beautiful gold handled umbrella and a handsomely framed picture.

The presentation was made by Mr. McCarrol, and the address was read by Mr. McBride.

Mr. McCann made a very suitable reply, in which he sincerely thanked them for their kindness, and assured them that he would not soon forget the happy time he had spent while president of the League, and also wished them all future success.

Mr. McCann will leave for Toronto in the near future, and when he does he will carry with him the best wishes and kindest regards of the George Street Epworth League.

BADLY CRIPPLED WITH LAME BACK

Could Not Walk Straight

Very few diseases can cause you as much pain as a Lame Back. Sitting down is torture—getting up pretty nearly kills you—walking is agony. Even when you lie in bed, that nagging pain keeps up its ache, ache, ache—and when you roll over or try to get up again, well, it brings tears to your eyes.

Mr. Mackenzie, an old resident of Elmsdale, Nova Scotia, knows what it is to have a Lame Back—and he knows, too, what to take to cure it and be free of pain and suffering.

"I was badly crippled up with pains across the small of my back. I could not walk straight or lie comfortably in any position that I would place myself.

I was recommended to try Gin Pills, which I did, and I received immediate relief after taking four doses, and by the time the first box of Gin Pills was finished they had made a complete cure.

I can with pleasure recommend Gin Pills to any person troubled as I was."

GEO. M. MacKENZIE.

Gin Pills cure Lame Back because they cure the Kidneys. Lame Back is just another name for Sick Kidneys. Hard work and old age strain and weaken the kidneys. These important organs need help, and the acute pain in the back is a sign that they are being overworked.

Give your kidneys the help they need. Get Gin Pills and take them regularly. In a very short time, you will be free of pain, the kidneys will have gained new strength, and the Bladder be in excellent condition. Dealers everywhere have Gin Pills at 50c. a box—6 for $2.50.

We don't ask you to buy Gin Pills but to try them at our expense and only buy them after they have proved their value.

Sample box sent to your address, absolutely free of charge if you write the National Drug & Chem. Co. Limited Dept. B. Toronto. 21

A NEGLECTED CHILD.

About a year ago Hon. Mr. Stratton, in the interests of the people, generally, procured an arrangement with the Dominion Government, by which all the grounds of Central Park, then in a chaotic condition, should be levelled and beautified without a cent of expense to the city or the School Board. The School Board sat upon the proposal, blocked the doing of the work in this way, and insisted on doing its own patch of the park at the expense of the ratepayers. In default of the acceptance of this proposal, which would have tended to, and could have been made to, effect concentration of plan and effort and secure, through unity of action, unity of result, the consequence is that through the dilatoriness of the military authorities at Peterborough, Kingston and Ottawa, the park has been, during the past year, a disgrace to the authorities concerned and, anyway, to the city. What was everybody's business was nobody's business. Through scrapping about lawn mowers and rollers, and in other ways, a tangle of red tape has ensued, and nothing has been done in the way of keeping the Armoury grounds in shape, except cutting the rank weeds with a scythe. The grounds, no one will dispute, are a discredit to the Militia Department, local regiment and city as well. If this is the way the Militia Department is made to leave their work on the completion of an armoury building, those responsible should be brought to account. Without desiring to relieve the Militia Department of its share of responsibility for this summer's neglect of the grounds, the School Board's rejection of the offer mentioned is primarily responsible for the failure to provide a working arrangement that would centralize authority and action. Central Park is the victim of divided jurisdiction, and, as long as this continues, so long will working at cross purposes, or not working at all, result in conditions that deprive the public of the enjoyment of the veritable beauty spot the park can, and should, be made. The authorities interested, the Military, the School Board, and the City Council, should forsake the attitude of children, get together, like men, and arrange a modus vivendi. The park, as a whole, should be maintained in decent condition, in the interests of the citizens. But this will not be done so long as divided jurisdiction, divided responsibility and diverse aims obtain. There can be no unity of purpose, no unity of action, and no harmony of result from the policy of permitting everybody's business to become nobody's business. Central Park is like a neglected child, which, through the indifference, or lack of agreement of a father, step-mother, and mother-in-law escapes the coddling or correction by which its good natural qualities could be developed.

A NATIONAL NEWSPAPER.

The Globe has tried during all its history not to lose sight of the fact that a newspaper can play an important part in nation and empire building. One way in which this has been effectively practised is by keeping trained members of its staff constantly "on the wing" in search of useful and interesting information. Wherever important national work or world events in which Canadians were concerned were taking place, or where pioneer developments was in progress, there The Globe commissioners have been reporting with intelligent discernment for the benefit of this country.

This policy has rarely, if ever, been more generally practised than at present. To-day the Managir Editor of The Globe, Dr. J. A. Macdonald, is in Mexico, where a three weeks' celebration of the centenary of republican government is being held, and upon his return he will contribute a series of sketches on that interesting country—a country whose relations to Canada are becoming very close.

Capt. Jaffray Eaton is representing The Globe with the Q. O. R. in England, the only exclusive press correspondent on the trip.

Mr. W. J. Jeffers, another member of the staff of The Globe, is at present on a pioneering trip in the Gowganda, Elk Lake, and the far north country. Mr. Jeffers is exceptionally equipped for such an expedition, having spent several years in the mining camps, America and South Africa.

Mr. M. O. Hammond, Editor of the Illustrated Magazine Section of The Globe, is contributing letters on the political situation in the United States. These will be continued during the next few weeks, Mr. Hammond's instructions being to travel wherever good "copy" from a Canadian viewpoint can be secured. It goes without saying that not in fifty years has so much interest been taken by Canadians in United States politics as is the case at the present time.

The Globe is trying to live up to its record in the matter of keeping its readers posted, aside altogether from the ordinary sources of local and telegraphic news.

Aside from political considerations or, rather, perhaps, in spite of political considerations, the Globe is held in high esteem by the public for its eminent fairness in the treatment of the questions of the day, for its unquestionable reliability, as well as its enterprise in covering, with remarkable effectiveness, every corner of the news field. Canada has no truer friend in aim or effect than the Globe.

AN UN-CANADIAN SPIRIT.

The Kingston Standard has an article aiming to show that what is wanted is a Canadian national spirit. This is true, and that this spirit does not prevail to the extent desired is very largely the fault of some of our newspaper organs of public opinion. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has made it his life work to bring about harmony of sentiment and unity of action in national directions, and it is largely due to him that as much of a national spirit as exists does exist. But there are newspapers that are everlastingly introducing the disintegrating elements that war against national solidarity of sentiment; that take every opportunity that presents, and where it does not, create opportunities to slang whang one of the important elements of our population, attribute motives, and do everything in their power to accentuate the racial and creed differences we have, and of which, true patriotism suggests we should make the best. For the sake of political capital every little thing is seized upon and magnified into a grievance, and converted into a wedge to enforce the separation of united citizenship. In the matter of the Canadian navy the most unpatriotic attitude is held. It is denounced by these newspapers as a "tin-pot" navy, and jeered at as useless and inefficient, to the joy of the enemies of Canada, and other things British. It is forgotten that it is a national fact, adopted in parliament by a large majority, and is no object for partizan assault. We have the navy and should make the best of it, and partizan and sneering criticism is as unpatriotic as decrying the resources and institutions of Canada. The West wants the Hudson Bay Railway, and the country is to build it in the interests of the West, and, reflectively, in the interests of the East as well. Yet, we find eastern papers, like the Conservative Halifax Herald, making the most strenuous, not to say, reprehensible, efforts to discredit the railway and the Hudson Bay route. Its action directly antagonizes the solid sentiment of the West. The Herald, and its kind, can have no other object than to create political embarrassment. It is understood that the railway will not cost the east, or the country at large, anything; that it will be built from the proceeds of the sale of lands along its route, to which its construction will give a value they do not possess, and never will possess, unless made accessible by railway construction. The present is a bad time to antagonize the West. It is making tariff demands that are held by some to antagonize eastern interests. If ever there was a time when a conciliatory spirit was indicated, when a truly big and generous spirit of Canadian nationalism should be exhibited, it is now. A small section of our French fellow citizens, led by persons with some personal interest to serve, may antagonize the spirit of national unity, but they do far less to create the rift in the lute than the blatant imitators of the bird that fouls its own nest, who take every opportunity to injure the great interests of Canada in the interest of a contemptible measure of party advantage.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The aviators, bird men or flying machine men, as they are variously known, would never qualify for membership of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society—they are in the habit of taking a drop too much.

According to Mr. Hammond's letter in the Globe, New England is just waking to the point Canada reached fifteen years ago. The general sentiment in the Eastern States, which are humming hives of manufacturing industry, is revision of the tariff downward—in the direction of cheaper raw materials. The revision of the Canadian tariff in 1897 provided for cheaper raw material for use in manufacturing industries. The result was a tremendous stimulant to our manufactories, which never since their establishment have enjoyed such prosperity as since that time. In 1896 the exports of Canadian manufactures amounted to about nine millions. A dozen years later these figures had grown to more than 28 millions—a three-fold increase.

Demand For Dominance Of English Tongue In The West

(Montreal Free Press.)

In an interview given to the New York Sun, on his way home from the Eucharistic Conference, Archbishop Bourne, of Westminster, declared that he had "nothing to retract or apologize for" in connection with his address to the Conference, which gave great offence to Mr. Bourassa, and, if reports are to be believed, to Archbishop Langevin as well. Previous to the Conference, Archbishop Bourne made a hurried trip throughout the West, during which he doubtless familiarized himself to some extent with the conditions prevailing here, and in addressing the Conference he took pains to make it clear that, in his judgment, it was desirable, in the interests of the Church, that the English language should be given precedence as the medium through which the people of the West are to be reached. This advice was doubtless unacceptable to the few — the very few—who still believe that it is possible for French to regain the position of equality with English which it held in this Province thirty years ago. Archbishop Bourne's recommendation and the action which the church authorities may take upon it chiefly affect the Church in question, and the people at large need not concern themselves about the matter. It is, however, clear that, if the church authorities do not give English the preeminence which Archbishop Bourne advises, it will, pay for it in the loss of adherents. Archbishop Bourne, in his brief trip throughout the West, recognized that this is an English-speaking country. It is true that we have here people of divers nationalities, speaking other tongues, but all these languages are of secondary and ever-dwindling importance.

There are in the Province of Manitoba a very considerable number of schools, known as bi-lingual schools. In most of these the languages supposed to be taught are French and English, but there are also schools which have been specially established for other nationalities, particularly the Ruthenians. The right to these bi-lingual schools has been conferred upon the minorities by law; and though the wisdom of this legislation is now widely questioned, there is no intention on the part of the majority to interfere with this privilege, which has now taken the form of a vested right. There is, however, a strong public opinion (which will steadily develope) that these schools should be really bi-lingual. There is not lacking evidence that, in a great majority of cases, one of the two languages is very indifferently taught, and that in every case, the language discriminated against is English. The people of the Province have a right to demand that, in every bi-lingual school, the teacher shall be proficient in English. If any language has to take a second place, it should be the non-English one. To ensure that this is done, all these schools should be subjected to a periodic independent examination by English inspectors, who should report specifically in each case whether the children are being given sufficient instruction in the English language to fit them for the duties of life. At present they are supervised by inspectors who are interested, not in the English but the non-French instruction. Where the report of the special inspector establishes the fact that the teacher is not qualified to teach English thoroughly the Department of Education should see to it that the School District is compelled to secure a competent teacher as a condition of the school being kept open upon the bi-lingual basis.

There is no racial fanaticism in urging this as the proper course to follow. No one can doubt that, over the whole length and breadth of Western Canada English is certain to be the language in universal use; and it is necessary in the interests of the children themselves that every child attending public schools in the three Western Provinces should be enabled to take part in the national and commercial life of the community. The child in Western Canada, whatever his parentage or nationality, who is not given a thorough education in English, is thereby doomed to be, all his life, a hewer of wood and drawer of water for others. If, in addition, the non-English children retain a thorough knowledge of their mother tongue, no harm will be done; quite the contrary in fact since a knowledge of more than one language is a useful accomplishment. Nor is there any objection to their retaining a deep sentimental attachment to the lands from which they spring; they will not thereby be poorer in their Canadianism.

But the insistence upon the predominance of English is necessary alike for the general and the individual good. The governments of the three western provinces should recognize and live up to their duty in this regard. So far as this province is concerned, there need be no expectation, however, that the present Government will do this. They have, for years past, permitted non-English schools to exist in the guise of bi-lingual schools, and they have made this concession a factor in political bargaining which has brought them sufficient political support to keep them in office. Part of the price which Manitoba will pay in the future for having kept the Roblin Government in office for so long a period will be that there will be thousands of men and women, born in this province, who will be not much better acquainted with the English language than were their parents who came here as adults from foreign countries.

PLEASANT SURPRISE

Peterborough Lock Company Contributes $32.20 to the Chimes Fund

A pleasant surprise came to the Chimes Committee yesterday in the shape of a cheque for $32.50 from the Secretary of the Peterborough Lock Co. On enquiry it was learned that this was the splendid result of a collection made in the Lock Works, in which every single man on the premises had taken a willing part. This was done without any suggestion from outside, and it is a tribute to the enterprise and generosity of all concerned. All the employees of the Canadian Canoe Co. this morning made kind contributions. Mrs. S. McNeil, who is on the staff of Rockwood Hospital, Kingston, has sent a kind donation.

Three citizens kindly doubled their former contributions. All these generous deeds brought the Chimes Fund at noon to-day up to $4,442.70.

A [illegible] who was unfortunate enou[illegible] an arm by accident in Ki[illegible] construction Works, came to [illegible] ouch and after a short stay, [illegible] one armed and alone as h[illegible] took a homestead in the [illegible] quote from his manly l[illegible] friend in the city

"Since I last saw you I [illegible] homesteading on the prairi[illegible] owing to total crop failure[illegible] unable to keep my stock [illegible] coming winter and find it [illegible] to seek employment . . . I am willing to tackle anything—night-watchman, caretaker, labourer, time-keeper or preferably work in a lumber camp driving supply team or helping cook."

A man willing and anxious to work deserves consideration. Work is hard to get in the west, and the writer of the letter would come to Peterborough if he could get employment. Any person having work such as he seeks would, by giving employment, help a deserving case and doubtless secure good services, for the man who wants to work as a rule will work and work well.

GIRL KID IN BOX IN STRANGE HOUSE

London, Sept. 24.—Nothing stranger has been related recently in the London Police Courts than the escapade of a young girl in a hearse in West Kensington.

The girl, Annie Belman, aged 16, appeared before the West London magistrate yesterday charged with being "a suspected person found on enclosed premises supposedly for an unlawful purpose."

Behind this formal complaint against Annie Belman, there lies a strange story, which was related by Mrs. Edgar and her daughter, who live at 22 Gwendwr road, West Kensington. The house is a large three-storeyed one, in a quiet neighbourhood.

"For a fortnight past," said Miss Muriel Edgar, "we have heard noises in the house, but we are not nervous, and we assumed that they were only the ordinary sounds one hears in a house, especially on a windy night the creaking of doors and other slight disturbances. We had noticed, however, that the bread had been going for a fortnight past, and we could not understand its disappearance.

"On Sunday afternoon the maid came rushing downstairs and said there was some one in her room. I went up, taking a police whistle with me, and looked under the maid's bed. No one was there and I opened her trunk with my foot. I could see no one there, but I noticed a movement in the trunk. I screamed and ran downstairs.

"In answer to the call of the whistle a policeman came, and he, my mother and myself returned to the maid's room. There was nothing in the trunk then, so we went down to the next floor. There is an ottoman box there, and the policeman opened it. At first we saw nothing but a great mass of black hair. Then the figure inside the ottoman moved and we saw that it was a girl. Poor girl! she looked more like an animal than a human being.

"At first we saw only her eyes showing through her matted hair, and her toes sticking up at the end of the ottoman. When we got her out she looked like a girl of sixteen, biggish for her age. Her clothes, such as they were, just a blouse and pinafore, and some rags, were very dirty. She was quite dazed and rubbed her eyes as if she had just awakened from a long sleep."

IN HOUSE FOR FORTNIGHT

In answer to the questions of the astonished woman and the policeman, the girl said she had been in the house for a fortnight.

Miss Edgar throws some doubt on this, although she believes that the girl had been using the cellar as a sleeping place for a fortnight. The cellar is not used for the storage of coal, as the house is fitted throughout with gas fires. The coal chute is easy of access, and in a quiet thoroughfare like Gwendwr road it would be easy for anyone to squeeze into the cellar in that way.

Detective Sergeant Taylor informed the magistrate that the girl had told him that she had been in the house for a fortnight, concealed by day in a box and prowling about the house by night. Her parents lived near Crippenham, Wilts. She had been in service at a public house in Wandsworth, but left unexpectedly on August second, and did not return. The girl was remanded.

LASSWADE

Lasswade, Sept. 27. The Oyster Supper at Grace Church, on Sept. 16th was a grand success. A large crowd was present and after supper a fine programme was rendered. Rev. H. C. Garbutt occupied the chair.

A Christian Endeavour has been organized and the first meeting was held on Sunday evening Sept. 18th, the topic was taken by T. J. Wilson.

Rev. Crews, Anglican clergyman, conducted the Thanksgiving service at St. Paul's on Sunday last, the church being tastily decorated for the occasion. This was Mr. Crew's last address to the people at St. Paul's and it is regretted that he is called to leave us so soon.

Miss Viola Prouty, who has been spending the summer months with her uncle, Mr. J. F. Woodbeck, has returned to her home at Owenbrook, Mr. Woodbeck having supplied his home with a wife.

We are pleased to learn that Miss Saul, teacher of S.S. No. 13, Methuen, who has been very ill, is recovering.

Mrs. Thos. Bullied, jr., is spending a few days at her brother's, Mr. Chas. Bush of Rose Island.

THOSE PILASTERS

In Front of the Public Library Must Come Down Says Property Committee

That the pilasters in front of the new Public Library will come down and be reconstructed, is the determination of the Property committee. The matter was brought up at a meeting of the committee last night. The majority of the members were inclined to lay the blame on the architects and it was decided to bring them before the committee and thoroughly thresh the matter out.

NEW COMPANY A GOING CONCERN.

THE PORT ARTHUR WAGON COMPANY, LIMITED, is a new Company, but will commence business under the most favorable auspices, having agreed to take over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, which is a going concern with a production capacity of four thousand wagons per year, and having its entire output for the ensuing year already sold. The intention is to transfer the operations of the Company to a new factory to be erected at Port Arthur.

UNSURPASSED LOCATION OF PLANT.

The location of the new factory is without doubt the finest in Canada, and will be situated on the shore of Thunder Bay at Port Arthur. It is unexcelled for the assembling of materials required in manufacturing wagons and sleighs, and has a commanding position in regard to the facilities for handling its freight by rail and water, which gives the Company a great advantage over its competitors.

CONCESSIONS.

The Company has obtained valuable concessions from the City of Port Arthur, which include a grant of twenty acres of land, a 200-foot dock site, and exemption from taxation for twenty years, except local improvement and school rates. The City of Port Arthur further guarantees bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000.00 at 5% for twenty years.

NEW FACTORY 815 MILES NEARER THE GREAT NORTHWEST MARKET.

The new factory will be fireproof, built in the most modern style, equipped with machinery embodying all the latest improvements, and thoroughly up to date in every detail, with a capacity for turning out 10,000 wagons a year. The advantages derived by the Company in locating at Port Arthur are numerous, the chief one being, perhaps, the enormous saving in freight. Port Arthur being 30 cents per 100 lbs. nearer the market than any other wagon factory in Canada. This alone gives a saving in freight of $3.50 per wagon. Coal can be delivered from the American ports to Port Arthur at a freight rate of 32½ cents per ton as compared with 90 cents per ton to Woodstock and $1.00 to Petrolia.

CONTRACTS.

This Company has a contract with the John Deere Plow Co., Limited, of Winnipeg, for supplying its total requirements of wagons and sleighs. That Company states that its requirements for the year 1911 will be 4,500 wagons and 1,500 sleighs.

The Company has a further contract with the Tudhope, Anderson Company, Ltd., of Winnipeg, to supply it with wagons for a period of five years, with a minimum average of 2,000 wagons per year and a maximum of 5,000 wagons per year.

It is well known that thousands of farmers are annually pouring into the Northwest, and it is confidently estimated that the above requirements will be more than doubled in the near future. Last year an immense number of wagons was imported into Canada and sold in the Northwest, upon which a duty of 25% was paid.

RAW MATERIALS.

This Company will be able to obtain much of its raw material in its immediate vicinity, thereby effecting a saving of many dollars in freight. With all the advantages enumerated, it is certain that within a very short time the plant will be taxed to its full extent.

MANAGEMENT.

The Company has been fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. T. H. Speight as its Manager. He has been associated with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the past eighteen years, and is widely known for his integrity and business ability.

The following certificate has been prepared and certified by Messrs. Jenkins & Hardy, of Toronto, Chartered Accountants:—

15½ Toronto Street,
Toronto, August 11th, 1910.

H. BATEMAN FOX, ESQ.,
Secretary-Treasurer Port Arthur Wagon Co., Limited:

Dear Sir,—We have examined the books of The Speight Wagon Company, Ltd., at Markham, Ont., for the period December 1st, 1909, to July 31st, 1910, and certify that based upon the contract sale prices to the John Deere Plow Company, Limited, the net profit on its sales was 14%.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) JENKINS & HARDY,
Chartered Accountants.

ESTIMATED PROFITS

It is estimated that the sales of wagons, sleighs, wagon parts and trucks for the first year will amount to $375,000. The profit of 14% upon this amount is $52,500.

No estimate has been taken of the saving in freight by reason of manufacturing point being nearer the market, and the closer proximity to points at which lumber can be more advantageously purchased and delivered than at Markham, Petrolia, Woodstock or Chatham, nor of any profits accruing to Company from rentals of dock, etc.

A further saving will also be made by the Company by reason of its freedom from all taxation (except school and local improvement taxes) for a period of twenty years.

(d) The minimum subscription upon which the Directors may proceed to allot shares is a total of five shares. The amount payable upon application is 10% and upon allotment 15%. (e) The by-laws do not provide for any time or times at which calls may be made upon shares of subscribers. (f) The Company proposes to issue bonds to the extent of $100,000 for twenty years at 5%, guaranteed by the City of Port Arthur. The Company has already allotted 3,350 fully paid shares of the common stock of the Company for the rights, privileges and franchises agreed to be given by the City of Port Arthur. (g 1) There has been transferred to the Company for the shares above mentioned, all the right, title and interest in and to the following rights, privileges and franchises, namely:—(1) A twenty-acre site within the city limits of Port Arthur, on the waterfront. (2) A 200-foot dock site. (3) The guarantee by the City of Port Arthur of the bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000 at 5%. (4) Freedom from taxation for twenty years, except local improvement rates and school rates. (g 2) This Company has also entered into a contract with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the purchase, free from liability, of its real estate, plant, machinery, stock-in-trade, contracts, good-will, patents, and its whole undertaking and assets, except book debts, as a going concern.

The consideration for the transfer of the above assets is seven hundred and fifty shares of the preferred stock of the Port Arthur Wagon Company, and twenty-five thousand dollars in cash, and the Port Arthur Wagon Company, Limited, is also to pay for the actual stock-in-trade of the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, in cash at cost price.

(h) The amount paid or payable as purchase money in shares for the above rights is set out in clause (f) and (g) 1 and 2. No fixed amount has been paid for good-will. (i) The commission paid for subscriptions for stock shall not exceed ten per cent. (j) The estimated amount of preliminary expenses exclusive of commission, if any, is three thousand dollars. (k) No amount of cash is to be paid to any promoter other than commission for sale of shares. (l) The date of the contract referred to in clause (g 1) is the 3rd day of September, 1910. The parties to the contract are The Trusts and Guarantee Company, Limited, as Trustees, The Port Arthur Wagon Company, Limited, and the Imperial Trusts Company of Canada as Trustees. The date of the contract referred to in clause (g 2) is the 5th day of August, 1910. ## THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Is IT possible that in two weeks you will actually be through with that school and ready to begin earning that bread and butter in earnest?

Well, my child, let me give you one piece of advice as emphatically as I possibly can.

Don't be too ready.

Of course, I know you are anxious to begin using all that newly acquired knowledge; but a few weeks or a month or two spent in resting and taking your time about getting a really good position, isn't going to send you to the poor farm.

And by the right position, I don't mean the one where you'll get the most money immediately. There are several things more important than your initial salary. One of them is the salary you can get later.

There are lots of places where the business simply can't pay a stenographer over a certain amount. I know a girl who went to one of these places eight years ago at ten dollars a wek. She was a good stenographer and a very clever business woman. With her ability she ought to be getting at least twenty or twenty-five dollars a week now; but she's getting just fourteen. She has learned a good deal about the details of the business and is almost invaluable to them, but they can't pay her more because the money simply isn't there. There wasn't a great deal of dictation so her stenography has gotten rusty, and the business details learned there wouldn't do her much good elsewhere, so I imagine if she took another position she would hardly get more than ten or twelve dollars.

That's the kind of place to keep out of, niece, no matter if the initial salary is pretty good.

I have two stenographers and one clerk working for me now, Joan, so maybe what I'm going to say next will sound rather queer; but I'm going to say it just the same. Don't get a place where you have to work for a woman. I don't like to go back on my sex, but honesty compels me to admit that women are usually about half as pleasant to work for as men. A man boss never thinks of being jealous, because no matter if you do three quarters of his work, he's too conceited to even consider you as a rival, but a woman boss is perpetually afraid you're going to creep up on her, and so she has to be perpetually showing her superiority. As you value your peace of mind and your chances of success don't get a position where you have to work for a woman.

Don't take a position without inspecting the material conditions under which you are to work. I know a girl who refused a good position with chances of improvement, for just one reason—artificial light. I think she did right. Obliging anyone to work by artificial light ought to be forbidden by law, just as making girls stand up all the time at their work is prohibited in some states. But as long as it isn't, make that your own law.

See what kind of typewriter you're going to have. There's no worse handicap than a poor machine.

And last, if you are to work for one man, pick that man carefully.

In some ways, business man and stenographer is a closer relation than man and wife. It can't help but be. Many business men see their stenographers eight hours of the day, their wives four.

Wish I could lend you my experience for this important performance of getting a position. Then again, maybe it would make you too cranky and critical and you'd get along better without it.

Here's hoping anyway.

But whatever kind of blank or prize you draw in the lottery, niece, be sure to write straight off quick about it to

Your Absorbingly Interested Old Aunt.

ANNUAL HARVEST HOME SUPPER AND CONCERT

Park Street Baptist Church Had an Enjoyable Event Last Evening —Musical Programme and Bright Addresses Were Features.

SPLENDID DECORATIONS

The Harvest Home Supper and Concert which was held at the Park Street Baptist Church last night, was a complete success in every particular. The splendid supper which was served by numerous and attentive waiters was an outstanding feature, and the abundance of everything was in keeping with the nature of the occasion. The church was very attractively decorated, the windows were neatly trimmed with evergreens and the ends of the seats were embellished with the different grains produced on the farm. A conspicuous feature of the ornaments and decorations, was an arch, composed of flowers and evergreens, which stood directly behind the pulpit, and two golden crested gates, swinging from either side of the arch, were opened next the pulpit. On either side the arch was a stook of grain, while the front of the pulpit was also adorned with products of the land.

The programme for the evening began about 8.30, Rev. Mr. Riddiford, very effectively filling the position of chairman. Mr. Riddiford made a short but interesting address as an introduction to the programme. He pointed out some of Canada's predominating features, one of which was the vast grain producing areas; and told the audience that they had no reason to be ashamed of Canada, they should rather be glad to be able to say they were natives of the land of the Maple. They should be proud of the land which is fast becoming a nation, and should stand by it and make it what God intended it should be. "Any person," he said, "who was tired of Canada or who thought they could could get on better in any other country, should pick up their belongings and get out as quickly as possible."

In the closing remarks of his introductory address, Mr. Riddiford thanked the people for the large number of them, who turned out, and sincerely hoped that they would appreciate the programme which was to follow.

Then Mr. D. Gribb, sang a song, which was very much appreciated and applauded by the audience.

Rev. Mr. Trumpour, Rector of All Saints Church was then called on to address the audience and he did so, in a manner which won the appreciation and applause of all present. He congratulated the congregation on the great work they had enacted on their new church also upon the elaborate decorations they had made for the occasion. Speaking of the Thanksgiving nature of the service, he said that God had given each of us enough to eat and enough to wear for one year, and that that moment was the time to give thanks to God for His tender mercies and extreme goodness. He also told the people that he hoped and anticipated that the officers and officials of the church would be satisfied with the success of the evening, and closed by wishing them future sucess in the great work they had undertaken.

A short speech from Fire Chief Howard, was the next item on the programme. He expressed his extreme pleasure at having the opportunity of being with them and also spoke of his good wishes toward the church and its members. The Chief received many expressions of welcome and was interrupted several times in his address by the applause of the audience. He concluded by wishing the people success and earnestly advising them to stand by the pastor and sincerely labour at the good work which they had in hand.

The next item on the programme was a solo by Mr. A. Lee, which was very effectively rendered, and applauded greatly by the audience.

Rev. J. R. Flemmer was the next to speak. He briefly addressed the audience, complimenting them upon the success of the evening, the fine supper and the beautiful decorations which were unexcelled by any others in the city. He expressed his great pleasure at being with them and joined with them in thanking God for the bountiful harvest He had bestowed upon the people of Canada.

The next item was an instrumental solo by Mr. C. Barrett. The appropriate manner in which it was rendered and its effectiveness won the applause of all. He was encored and his second selection was equally appreciated.

The item was followed by an interesting speech from Rev. J. R. Webb. He stated that it was always a pleasure to him to come to the Park Street Baptist Church, and expressed his pleasure at having the opportunity of addressing them. He complimented them upon the bright and cheery nature of the elaborate decoration of the church, which, he conjectured, must have involved the work of men, women and children, each doing his or her respective part with a sincerity which was evidenced in the success of their efforts. He gave the people much good advice and sincerely thanked them for allowing him to take what he termed, a small part in the service.

Last, but certainly not least, was a violin solo by Mr. Barnes. It was much appreciated and that fact was indicated by the loud applause from the audience.

What proved to be a very profitable and successful entertainment was brought to a close by singing a verse of an appropriate hymn selected by the chairman, Rev. Mr. Riddiford.

Much praise and credit is due to the people of the Park Street Baptist church, including the pastor, for the energetic efforts they must have made to decorate the church as it was perfectly arranged in such an appropriate manner that it would win the esteem and praise of any person. And it stands as yet unexcelled by and decoration of any other of the churches in the city this person.

A SMALL BLAZE

Gave Brigade a Run to Peterborough Mattress Company This Morning

The fire brigade received a call at 8.10 this morning to the Peterborough Mattress Company's works, at the east end of the Hunter street bridge. The alarm was sent in from Box 24, and the brigade responded promptly, with the result that the fire was soon extinguished. The fire was caused by nails getting into the picker, but very little damage was done.

THURSDAY WILL BE OPEN NIGHT AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Every young man in Peterborough, and every middle aged man, too, should be at the Y.M.C.A. building on Thursday evening. For "Open House" will be the order of the evening. There will be no special invitations issued, but every man who reads this notice is most cordially invited to be present.

There will be nothing special doing. That is, there will be no activities that which will not be carried on throughout the whole season. The idea of the function is to give the men of the city an honest idea of what the Association is able to do for them.

There is no doubt that a man will get his money's worth by joining the Y.M.C.A., and no man need join who is not sure of that fact, therefore the Association is going to make it possible, as far as can be done in one night, for the men to see just what they are doing in joining.

The gymnasium will be in full swing. One of the classes will be in operation. They will work to music, and this will be the case all through the season.

The swimming baths will be an attraction. Some of the good swimmers will give a continuous exhibition of the use to which the plunge can be put. The bath room is one of the most attractive features in the building, having been all decorated and altered to suit the needs of the large number of men who will be using it.

The bowling alleys are now in full swing, too. This room has also undergone a great change, and has a fresh appearance and a sweet odour, being properly ventilated.

The educational classes will not be started yet, but they will be under way in a very short time, and the men will learn all about them on Thursday night.

Of course there will be a number of features which cannot be exhibited and the committee will be in attendance to give all the information about these.

View of the Splendid Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium

Already a goodly number of men have joined the Association, and are now getting into work in their several departments.

One of the most pleasant and profitable features of the season's work will be the Literary and Debating Club. Some of the best debaters in the city have joined and are going to be leaders in this Club, so if you have talent in this direction you will have no better chance than this to develop.

Don't forget that Thursday night will be "Open House" at the Y. M. C. A. Every man in the city ought to be present.

ASSOCIATED CHARITIES TO ESTABLISH CRECHE IN CITY

The Associated Charities which was organized in Peterborough at an enthusiastic meeting on Friday last is already justifying its formation. The organization is making arrangements to open at once a day nursery or creche, where women who work out by the day may leave their children to be taken care of. A room has been secured at the Y.W.C.A. building, which will be heated free of charge by the Y.W.C.A. A competent woman will be secured to take charge of the creche, and mothers may do their work, confident that their little ones will be well looked after. The creche system has been in use in larger cities for many years and has given the best of satisfaction. Further particulars of the local day nursery will be given later. A public meeting will likely be called by the Associated Charities next week to discuss the aims and objects of the institution.

SOLAR DISTURBANCE

Rev. Dr. Marsh, speaking over the telephone from Bellingville to-day, stated that this morning he had a good look through a cloud at the sun. There is, he says, tremendous solar disturbance on the eastern limb. The disturbances measure over one hundred thousand miles in length, and about forty thousand miles in width.

INJURED AT THE C.G.E.

Two young men were injured in the C.G.E. works this morning about ten o'clock as the result of an electric flash in the test room. One of them received injuries to his eyes, but is getting along nicely. The other one was injured about the face and hands. They were taken to their respective boarding houses in the Dan Spence ambulance, where they are now recovering. They expect to be able to return to work in a day or two.

Retiring Sale

Having become connected with a large manufacturing firm in Toronto, and as I am required to take charge the 1st of November, I am disposing of my whole stock of drygoods, millinery, boys' and men's clothing, etc., amounting to about $10,000, at the earliest possible date. From now on the price is no object, as every article on the premises, including fixtures, will have to be disposed of. The stock is well assorted with new fall goods, and if ever the citizens of Peterborough had a chance of saving money, it is JUST NOW at this sale. See bills for prices.

I have also a house and store to rent, and fixtures for sale; as well as two houses on Parnell street—best investment in the city. One house has a stable. If necessary easy terms of payment.

WEDDING BELLS

CROUGH—YOUNG.

On Tuesday morning, Sept. 20th, a very happy event took place at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when two of Ennismore's most popular young people were united in the bonds of matrimony in the persons of Mr. Timothy J. H. Crowe and Miss M. Loretto Young. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, beautifully rendered on the organ by Mrs. John P. Flood, with violin obligato by Mrs. William D. Cavanagh and Mr. J. F. Flood.

The bride was charmingly attired in a pretty frock of satin presto with a handsome panel of ecru guipure lace and gracefully folded bodice caught with a buckle of own material. She wore a veil of the Marie Antoinette type and wreath of lily-of-the-valley, and carried a bouquet of gypsophilas.

The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Agnes Young, who wore a simple gown of satin oriental, with folded high waist belt yoke of finely tucked chiffon. It was trimmed with bands of satin over the shoulders and with a crescent shaped motif edged with gold ball fringe. A sash at the back of tucked chiffon satin completed an extremely pretty Empire gown. She wore a large black picture hat to match.

The groom was assisted by his nephew, Mr. Stanislaus Moher, of Ottawa. After the ceremony the young couple, followed by a host of friends, drove to the residence of the bride's father, where a well-trained chef assisted the appetites of the crowd of guests. After spending a couple of hours receiving the congratulations of the merry party, Mr. and Mrs. Crough drove to Peterborough, leaving on the G.T.R. train for Toronto, Buffalo, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Omaha. On their return they will visit St. Paul, Chicago, Detroit and Lindsay, before taking up their residence at Elmvale Farm, Ennismore, where they will be at home to their friends after October 15th.

The bride's gift from the groom was a bull marked gold bracelet set with ruby doublets and rose point of diamonds. To the bridesmaid the groom presented a beautiful pearl necklace with jewel snaps and to the best man a fob of Peru gold.

Annual District Convention Of Women's Missionary Society

A bright and attractive announcement of Peterborough's Missionary Institute for Oct. 10-12, has been issued this week. The attention of Young People's Societies is called to the fact that this is an interdenominational movement. One of its features is a series of denominational rallies in the respective churches for consideration of the special work of each denomination. The platform of speakers includes Mr. J. Lloyd Murray, M.A., of New York, one of the leaders of the great Student Volunteer Movement, and the following missionaries and leaders: Rev. Canon Tucker, D.C.L., Rev. J. G. Brown, D.D., Rev. J. A. Rankin, D.D., and Rev. A. C. Armstrong, M.A. Mission Study classes are organized to study the work in China, South America, Corea, also "Strangers Within Our Gates" and "The Challenge of the City." Mr. Dr. E. C. Stephenson, Rev. C. M. Mitchell, of Bolivia, Rev. J. A. Miller, B.A. and Rev. H. J. Keith B.D., are directing these classes. Peterborough as a convenient centre for such a movement as this and every Young People's Society in the vicinity is asked to co-operate by sending delegates. The names of these should be forwarded at once to Mr. Chas. Green, 617 George street, and thus delegates will be assured of being billeted. The meetings of the Institute will be held in George street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian churches, beginning on the evening of Oct. 12th.

STOMACH DISTRESS SIMPLY VANISHES

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion Five Minutes Later

If you had some Diapepsin handy and would take a little now your stomach distress or indigestion would vanish in five minutes and you would feel fine.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, out-of-order stomach before you realize it.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fulness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disturbance.

GOOD VAUDEVILLE

If you like to listen to good Irish wit and hear good Irish singers and see good Irish dancers, see Casey and McGill, the great Irish artists, also Johnny Malon in his great musical act and the finest and largest moving pictures ever shown in Peterborough, go to the Grand Opera House to-night at 7.30 and 9.00 p.m. Prices only 5c. and 10c.

Wednesday night the Aborn English Grand Opera Co. Prices 50c., 75c. $1, $1.50, and private box seats $2.00. Plan now open.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a complete change of high class vaudeville and the best moving pictures.

HAS RETURNED TO CITY

The ladies of this city and district are pleased to see Miss Noble back on the millinery business again in Peterborough. While here a short time she made many staunch friends. Miss Noble is a millinery artist of rare skill; he makes a study of faces and figures, and is thus able to produce harmonious effects. She studies millinery just as an artist studies his grouping and thus her work is always exclusive and as each figure varies from the other, she never makes two hats alike. Miss Noble is at Elliott's ready-to-wear store, 390-392 George street, Peterborough.

H. NEILSON GOES BACK TO PHILADELPHIA TO FACE PUNISHMENT FOR HIS CRIME

Detective LeStrange, to Whose Clever Work the Capture is Due, Took His Prisoner Away This Morning—Neilson Thought He Had Made Clean Get-away and Was Surprised at His Arrest.

THE STORY OF THE CASE

The arm of the law is long.

When Harry Neilson, after pleading guilty to the embezzlement of $2,000 in Philadelphia and then jumping his bail bond, found employment and a boarding house in Peterborough, he was confident that he had covered up his movements and had made a clean getaway. The embezzler had failed to take into his calculations the shrewdness and perseverance of Detective Joseph A. LeStrange, of the Philadelphia Detective staff, and the result was just when he had begun to feel safe two Peterborough policemen walked in on him and now he is speeding towards Philadelphia, in charge of Detective LeStrange, the officer responsible for his capture. The Philadelphia detective arrived in the city on the 5.30 G.T.R. train last night, and took his man away with him on the 11.45 train this morning.

Detective LeStrange related some of the particulars of the case to a reporter this morning. It seems that in March last Neilson was arrested on a charge of embezzling $2,000 from the Corporation of the Peter Thomson Company, had his trial, and pleaded guilty. A Philadelphia physician, a friend of Neilson's, went on his bail bond. The guilty man was so ungrateful as to jump bail and left Philadelphia. It is learned that he came to Toronto, where he secured employment and worked for about three months. While living in Toronto he made several trips to Peterborough for the purpose of looking over the ground for employment purposes and as a hiding place. Finally, some five weeks ago he came to Peterborough and located here, securing employment for some time with a firm handling real estate. As time went on and he seemed to be in no danger of being detected, Neilson, who went under the name of Harry Nester, while here, was lulled into a feeling of security, unfounded, as he discovered last Sunday.

Meanwhile Detective LeStrange, who had charge of the case, was grappling with the mystery of Neilson's whereabouts. His efforts were at last rewarded, and by a clever ruse he got a line on Neilson's movements and finally located him here, when a wire to Chief Thompson finished the work. Neilson had been writing to his wife in Philadelphia, and was detected through his letters, although how was a secret that the detective did not care to explain. It seems that the embezzler, who is recognized as a very clever man, did not write direct to his wife, but sent his letters to a friend in New York, from whom they were transmitted under different covers through different hands, until finally they reached Mrs. Neilson.

Police Officers Meharry and Meagher found Neilson in bed when they went after him at his boarding-house on Sunday night. He was greatly surprised at his arrest. He informed the police that he thought that he had covered up his movements so thoroughly that there was no possible way of his being traced. "I'm glad it's all over," he remarked to one of the police.

The capture is most satisfactory to the Philadelphia Detective who has been working energetically on the case since Neilson disappeared. The expense of capturing him and bringing him back falls upon the unfortunate bondsman.

Detective LeStrange stated that this was his first visit to Canada, and he was delighted with what he had seen of the country. He had a far different impression of Canada than he had previously formed.

Was Robbed Of $15 Then Arrested On A Charge Of Being Disorderly

Walter Bates' Unfortunate Experience Was Aired in Police Court This Morning---Lured Down to Car-Barns and Relieved of His Money---When He Gave Chase He Was Apprehended---Bicyclists in Court.

The saying that "it never rains but it pours," was evidenced this morning at the police court, when eleven bicyclists were charged with riding their machines on the sidewalk. The police force were on the war path last night and certainly succeeded in making a bag of considerable importance.

$2.00 and costs, amounting in all to $4.60, was the fine. One of the men did not appear and two paid their fines out of court, but eight had to "cough up" the $4.60. The total proceeds of the 'catch' amounted to $40.80 and still there is one to come.

A man named Walter Bates was a "bait" for two men on Tuesday night and that is the reason he was in court this morning. It appears that two men, whom Bates did not know, lured him down in the neighbourhood of the street car barns and gave him liquor. He got too heavy a load of the stuff in the bottle, and the gentlemen relieved him of $15, at the same time taking their departure. He had sense enough to object to their kindness and gave chase. In his wild rush he broke one of the street car windows and the caretaker at the barns telephoned for a policeman, who appeared a few minutes later and arrested Bates. The unfortunate Bates appeared this morning on a charge of being drunk and disorderly, but was allowed to go.

A young man was charged with being disorderly on the street on Thursday night. He claimed that two of his companions were going to leave him and go home with two girls and he objected and took the young men by the arms and attempted to pull them back. The officer who arrested him told a different story, however. The worst of it was that the accused swore at the policeman when he attempted to preserve order. He was fined $2.00, which he paid and got out.

PATHETIC SCENE IN COURT WHEN WOMAN CONVICTED OF MURDER COLLAPSED IN THE WITNESS BOX

Special to The Examiner.

BARRIE, ONT., SEPT. 28.—There was a pathetic scene in the court this morning, when Mary Dolan, convicted last night of murdering her infant, took the witness box to testify against Thomas McNulty, the former hotel keeper, also charged with murder. Twice she collapsed while telling her story. McNulty, she said, was the father of her first baby, some years ago. He persisted in his attentions to her, even after that, and despite the continued opposition of her mother, who, one time turned the dog on him, driving him into a swamp, where he was forced to remain for hours, hiding from her and his wife, who had knowledge of his infidelity. When the second baby came she said she had no intention of drowning it till McNulty suggested the idea. In cross examination, she denied the lawyer's insinuations of relations with others besides McNulty.

Blood Stains Explained Man Arrested At London In Connection With Mystery

GODERICH, SEPT. 28.—While considerable interest was manifested this morning in the story told at the Anderson murder inquest last night to the effect that blood stains had been found on a dealer belonging to a rig hired from a local livery and that there were also dark stains on the buggy seat, Crown Attorney Seager stated this morning that all these had been satisfactorily explained. Word came this morning from London, Ont., that an Indian named Horsey was being detained there awaiting identification by the Goderich police. Otherwise there is no further development in the fatal murder mystery. Seager said nobody was under suspicion.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

KENORA, ONT., SEPT. 28.—Grave fear is entertained for Chas. Jones and McFammon, two Canadian Pacific switchmen, who went duck shooting in a motor launch ten days ag. They have not been seen since, though their boat has been found adrift.

KILLED IN A CAVE-IN

Examiner Special.

WEYBURN, SASK., SEPT. 28.—W. Gavorra was instantly killed and George Zeiter fatally injured in a cave-in on the main street of the town. Both were German labourers. Zeiter was found standing upright in the earth when the rescuers reached him.

BIG RECEPTION

Examiner Special.

EDMONTON, ALTA., SEPT. 28.—The returning Canadian manufacturers, two hundred strong, are getting a big welcome here to-day. The president, Mr. Rowley, interviewed, says he favours protection, not only in tariff, but in natural resources, to keep the fisheries, timber and mineral for Canadians.

THE LATE HON. D. C. FRASER.

The death of Hon. D. C. Fraser, Lieut.-Governir of Nova Scotia, means the removal of a man whose relations to the responsibilities of both representative and gubernatural public life have been worthy of the best traditions of both. He was a man of big brains, even among the public men of Nova Scotia, which has contributed as many clever and brilliant men to the public service of that province and the Dominion. A man of giant stature, his heart was as big as his body, than which—with a clean and capable public record—no better epitaph could be written. The late Mr. Fraser will be pleasantly remembered by those who had the pleasure of hearing him deliver addresses on picnic occasions in Emmsmore and Lakefield, and address other gatherings on public questions in both East and West Peterborough.

WHO IS THE FARMER'S FRIEND?

Our evening contemporary, the Review, is of the class of journals that preach the gospel of tariff according to Conservatism, that is, national and individual enrichment and prosperity by the bitter way of high taxation. We are not intending to reproach or blame the Review, for it is only one of many, and if it sins, it sins in abundant, if not good, company, but to employ itself to show that the revival of Conservative administration of a high protective tariff, will not bring prosperity, especially to the farmer, but that a tariff with the revenue tendency as a large feature, tends to promote prosperity, especially of the farmer.

In the Review of Saturday, September 24th, 1910, there were market quotations of farm products. There were similar—no there were also—market quotations of farm products in the Review of September 24th, 1896—fifteen years ago. It will be interesting and instructive — to him who reads the lesson aright — to compare the quotations of to-day's prices and those of fifteen years ago. Here is the parallel—as to columns—but there, as will be seen, the parallel ends:

| 1896—Sept. 24 | | 1910—Sept. 24 | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Wheat fall | 0.60 - 0.60 | Wheat fall, | 0.90—0.91 |
| Barley | 0.39 - 0.39 | Barley | 0.46 - 0.5 |
| Oats | 0.17 - 0.18 | Oats | 0.39—0.40 |
| Peas | 0.39 - 0.40 | Peas | 0.75- 0.75 |
| Cattle live | 0.11 - 0.3 | Cattle live | 0.4—0.41 |
| Hogs live | 3.60 - 3.75 | Hogs live | 0.00—0.00 |
| Hay | 8.00 - 9.00 | Hay | 14.00—15.00 |
| Straw | 5.00 - 6.00 | Straw | 0.50—0.50 |
| Butter | 0.16 - 0.18 | Butter | 0.30—0.30 |

*These prices did not appear in last Saturday's Review, but were the correct prices last Saturday.

The advocates of high protection are busy trying to convince farmers that their interest consists in supporting a high tariff. The contrasting prices quoted above—the prices that farmers received under the high-water protection policy administered by a Conservative government—and a modified tariff under the Liberal government are illuminating. For the past ten or fifteen years farmers have enjoyed a high degree of prosperity, getting good prices for all they have to sell. In that time thousands of farm mortgages have been lifted and the lot of the farmer has been vastly improved. There were good harvests before 1896, but the farmer got such low prices that his returns from his labours were unsatisfactory, and his general condition, one of struggle and anxiety. It is not claimed that these contrasting conditions — the gloom of the days of Conservative rule and the buoyant prosperity under Liberal rule- were due to tariffs alone. But if is to be claimed that the Liberal readjustment of the tariff which emancipated the manufacturer to the extent of providing duty free and, therefore, cheaper, raw material had a marked effect. We have proof that this step gave an impulse to manufacturing industry, which has flourished in the past twelve or fifteen years as it has never flourished in our history. The big, progressive general policy of the government helped to establish, conditions compatible with abounding prosperity. The great success of their immigration policy and the settling of the west has enlarged the home market for the products of eastern factories, and an impulse has been given to increased activity in every department of national activity. Facts are what prove things. The fact that the farmer realizes prices for his products, on an average, between two and three times greater than he did prior to the advent of a Liberal government, as shown in the prices quoted and contrasted above, confirms the truth of the saying that the proof of the pudding is the eating thereof, and shows in effect who is the farmer's friend.

MR. FIELD'S INVESTIGATION OF CANADA'S MERGER SITUATION

(London Advertiser.)

Mr. F. W. Field, editor of the Monetary Times, has been studying the merger movement in Canada, and in a lengthy article in his paper gives the results of his investigation.

Since Jan. 20, 1909, there have been twenty industrial amalgamations in this country, absorbing 145 individual companies. The aggregate authorized capitalization, including bonds, of nineteen of these mergers, is $199,600,000. The securities issued to the public total at least $26,350,000. A proportion of the new securities consists of "water." The products covered include asbestos, soap, bolts, shoes, horseshoes, cars, Portland cement, cereals, felt boots, carriages, ice, wire, canned goods, iron and steel and machinery. The smallest merger is the Siemon Company, Limited, which absorbed three companies, and is capitalized ata $1,000,000, and the largest is the Steel Company of Canada, Limited, which took over five companies, its authorized capital, including bonds, amounting to $35,000,000.

The writer contends that thus far the industrial merger in Canada has exercised small influence, and that it has brought both advantages and abuses, though working little harm; that considering the position of the Dominion as a young nation the merger has reached a point where its value or harm may be considered. Defenders of the mergers contend that they have several advantages—among them the standardization of brands, the elimination of needless competition, the obtention of more working capital, economies in purchasing and selling, and specialization of plants. For the most part these advantages may be summed up in the two propositions—the mergers enable the manufacturers to produce more cheaply and also to charge higher prices by eliminating competition. Thus the mergers stand to gain at both ends.

Mr. Field believes that over-capitalization may easily prove the first serious pitfall of the merger movement in Canada. He also sees danger in the bonusing of the preferred issues with common stock. Moreover, he does not see how, with the eyes of the manufacturing world upon the Canadian import market, it is possible for industrial combination in this country to eliminate competition. The Government has a remedy for monopoly in the shape of proper regulation of prices by tariffs. If a combine is exerting an unreasonable influence on market prices, a lower tariff on imports would help to remedy the situation, but as yet there appears to be no sign of such an acute position. The two chief dangers of the combine are the possibility of the enhancement of commodity prices and over-capitalization, with large issues of securities to the investor; but in the Fielding tariff there is a provision for giving complete or partial relief when it is shown that a combination unduly increases prices—a provision which has already been applied with satisfactory results, not in the form of increased imports, but in the proportionate lowering of domestic prices.

What the writer considers an unfavourable feature of the consummation of combines in Canada is the fact that it has created a new business of merger making. In some cases the primary promoters have had little real interest in the companies which it was proposed to amalgamate or in the industry concerned. The professional merger maker may easily become a menace to the country, although his talents properly applied in connection with combination may be of service to clean finance.

LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE.

The editor of the Detroit Medical Journal has reprinted in pamphlet form an article on the value of the Greek language to the physician. He points out that there are 41,000 words in a standard medical dictionary, of which 20,000 are formed upon the Greek language. He advises physicians to pay more attention to Greek, so that they will have a more intelligent understanding of the nomenclature of their profession. And the editor is right in his advice. There is too great a tendency in these times to neglect of what may be called the literary part of a physician's education. It has come to pass that men are advanced to the practice of the medical profession with "little Latin and less Greek. And if the literary standard continues to be lowered the medical metier will soon pass out of the rank of learned professions, and become a mere trade. In the earlier, but not prehistoric, days of the healing art, medical men were well read in the classics, and prescriptions were written entirely in Latin. This was not to be regarded as a mark of pedantry, nor, as the ignorant imagined, to keep the secrets of their art from the knowledge of profanum vulgus.

The practice of writing medical prescriptions in Latin had sound reason, and practical common sense for its basis. In those days, and up to within a comparatively short distance from this levelling age, the knowledge of Latin was universal among men of education. It was the trade-mark of literary culture. Every educated man and many educated women understood Latin. Therefore Latin became the language of diplomacy, as French is now, and as English will, in time, become. Educated men, though naturally ignorant of each other's language, were able to converse and otherwise communicate by means of the universal language of educated men—Latin. For the same reason—its universality—Latin became the language of prescriptions. So that a traveller, carrying with him the prescription of his family doctor, could have it compounded in a foreign country, though neither himself nor the apothecary could speak or understand a word of each other's native tongue. In the same way to-day, a Peterborough traveller in Russia, or Austria, or any other foreign country, could have a prescription, written in Latin by an educated Peterborough physician, filled by any educated druggist in any country of Europe. For the same reason, among botanists and zoologists, and other men of science, the names of plants, animals, et cetera, are in Latin, and so known by educated men in any country, who would be ignorant of the local or common name in every country but his own. To a German or French scientist, who did not understand English, the word potato would have no meaning, but mention solanum tuberosum, and, if he were hungry, his "mouth would water."

The English is a polyglot language, in that it is a compound of many tongues, Latin and Greek largely predominating, with a good deal of French, which, in turn, owes its character to Latin. In order to acquire the nice and discriminating use of English, a knowledge of its primary elements, is necessary. In no other way can nice shades of meaning be understood, or expressed. If we would fully appreciate the writings of the most robust and fruitful period of English literature, a knowledge of the classics is necessary. These writings are full of illustrations from, and references or allusions to, classic subjects. This very sentence is an illustration of the matter. No one, unless told, would know, except from a knowledge of Latin, the fine shade of difference, between "reference" and "allusion"—the first meaning exactly what it means, a reference; the other, "allusion," meaning a reference and something more—a playful reference. The two words are daily interchangeably used and improperly confounded by even good writers.

This is only a single illustration out of thousands that could be cited. There is a modern tendency to eliminate the study of the languages called dead—Latin and Greek—but they are very much alive in the English language, of which they constitute the life principle. There is a clamour in this utilitarian age for confining education to three Rs, as if the whole race were to be condemned in perpetuity to be hewers of wood and drawers of water; as if refinement, culture, and the graces of learning were to be abolished, and man in mass reduced to the animal level of being equipped with only the qualifications of seeking prey—gaining their bread and butter. The divine declaration, "man shall not live by bread alone," obtains as forcibly in human individual and social relations, as it does in the domain of the spiritual.

I was pale and weakly for years. Miller's Compound Iron Pills brought about a change. Wm. Madill, druggist.

NEW ASSURANCE COMPANY AGENCY.

Mr. James T. Anderson, District Manager of The Traveller's Life Assurance Company of Canada, Montreal, has opened up an office in the Bank of Commerce Building, Room 12, and has taken up residence in Peterborough. Mr. Anderson will represent the five immediate adjoining counties, Peterborough, Victoria, Haliburton, Northumberland and Durham, with headquarters at Peterborough.

The General Manager of the Company, Mr. George H. Allen, was formerly a resident of Peterborough. His friends in Peterborough will be glad to see that he has risen to the Managing Directorship of what, no doubt, will be an important Assurance Company in the near future, as Mr. Allen is one of the best insurance men in Canada.

The Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, is President of the Company.

No doubt Mr. Anderson, district agent, will receive a fair share of the business of the assurance world. The Company is starting under the most favourable auspices, has a special board of directors, and we have no doubt but that any business entrusted to Mr. Anderson will have his prompt and most careful attention.

Mr. Allen, Managing Director of the Company, is expected to be in Peterborough a few days this week.

We recommend Ferrovim, the invigorating tonic, to elderly people, and who suffer frequently from attacks of sudden exhaustion, chilliness, weak heart action, etc. Ferrovim contains fresh lean beef, citrate of iron, and pure old Spanish Sherry Wine. $1.00 per bottle at druggists.

To Whom it may concern:

My attention has been called to the Neal Treatment for the cure of the drink habit, that did cure in three days, elicited my personal investigation, and so it became necessary for me to send one of my people to the Neal Institute to be treated. This I did and I am pleased to say that he was cured perfectly and the patient assured me with great fervidness that he never had the least inclination to drink and that all desire, craving and liking for drink had been taken away. # THE PILLAR OF LIGHT

"No, dear. Jack has not written. I have found out the cause. His mother expresses the hope that he will be the first to convey her good wishes. So I think he meant to try and bring the rope himself. Dad knew it and Mr. Pyne. That is why they did not tell us."

Constance gathered her letters in a heap. The tiny pang of jealousy which thrilled her had gone.

"Eighty-one hungry months expect to be filled to repletion to-night," she said. "No more gossip. What curious creatures women are! Our own affairs are sufficiently engrossing without endeavouring to pry into Mr. Pyne's."

"Connie, don't press your lips so tightly. You are just dying to know what upset him. But mark my words it had nothing to do with any other woman."

Wherein Enid was completely mistaken; she would never commit a greater error of judgment during the rest of her days.

When Pyne quitted the kitchen his intent was to reach Brand without delay. As he passed Mrs. Vansittart's bedroom he paused. Something had delighted him immeasurably once the first shock of the intelligence had passed.

He seemed to be irresolute in his mind, for he waited some time on the landing before he knocked at the door. As he passed Mrs. Vansittart's would come and speak to him.

"Are you alone," she demanded, remaining invisible.

"Yes," he said.

Then she appeared, with that borrowed shawl still closely wrapped over head and face.

"What is it?" she said wearily.

"You have had a letter from my uncle?"

"Yes, a charming letter, but I cannot understand it. He says that some very important and amazing event will detain him in Penzance after we reach the place. He goes on—but I will read it to you. I am quite bewildered."

She took a letter from her pocket and searched through its contents until she found a paragraph. She was about to read it aloud when some one came down the stairs. It was one of the officers, yet Mrs. Vansittart was so flurried that she dropped the sheet of paper and bent to pick it up before Pyne could intervene.

"Oh, bother!" she cried. "I am dreadfully nervous, even now that we are in no further peril. This is what I wish you to hear."

And she read:

"Nothing but the most amazing and unlooked-for circumstances would cause me to ask you to postpone the date of our marriage for at least a month after you reach shore. This is not the time, nor are your present surroundings the place for telling you why I make this request. Suffice it to say that I think, indeed, I am sure, a great happiness has come into my life, a happiness which you, as my wife soon to be, will share."

The American, whilst Mrs. Vansittart was intent on her excerpts from his uncle's letter, studied all that was visible of her face. That which he saw there puzzled him. She had suffered no more than others, so he wondered why she wore such an air of settled melancholy. Throughout the lighthouse gloom was dispelled. The sick became well, the lethargic became lively. Even the tipplers of methylated spirits, deadly ill before, had worked like Trojans at the rope, as eager to rehabilitate their shattered character as to land the much-needed stores.

What trouble had befallen this woman, so gracious, so facile, so worshipful in her charm and manner and utterance during the years he had known her, that she remained listless when all about her was life and joyance, she, the cynosure of many eyes by her costumes and graceful carriage, cowering from recognition? Here was a mystery, though she had repudiated the word, and a mystery which, thus far, defeated his sub-conscious efforts at solution.

She lifted her eyes to his. Her expression was forlorn, compelling pity by its utter desolation.

"What does he mean?" she asked, plaintively. "Why has he not spoken clearly? Can you tell me what it is, this great happiness, which has entered, so strangely, into his life and mine?"

"I have never met any man who knew exactly what he meant to say, and exactly how to say it, better than Cyrus J.", said Pyne.

"But he has written to you, surely. Does he give no hint?"

"His letter is a very short one. To be candid, I have hardly made myself acquainted with its contents as yet."

"You are fencing with me. You know, and you will not tell."

Her mood changed so rapidly that Pyne was not wholly prepared for the attack.

"It is a good rule," he said, "never to pretend you can handle another man's affairs better than he can handle them himself."

He met her kindling glance firmly. The anger that scintillated in her eyes almost found utterance. But this clever woman of the world felt that nothing would be gained, perhaps a great deal lost, by any open display of temper.

She laughed scornfully.

"Mr. Traill is certainly the best judge of those worthy of his confidence. Excuse me if I spoke heatedly. Let matters remain where they were."

"Just a word, Mrs. Vansittart. My uncle has written you fairly and squarely. He has not denied you his confidence. If I understood you, he has promised it to the fullest extent."

"Yes, that is true."

"Then what are we quarrelling about?"

He laughed in his careless way, to put her at her ease. She frowned meditatively. She, who could smile in such a dazzling fashion, had lost her art of late.

"You are right," she said slowly. "I am just a hysterical woman, starting at shadows, making mountains out of molehills. Forgive me."

As Pyne went up the stairs his reflections took this shape:

"The old man shied at telling her outright. I wonder why. He is chock full of tact, the smoothest old boy I ever fell up against. He thinks there may have been little troubles here, perhaps. Well, I guess he's right."

In the service-room Brand cleaning a lamp calmly and methodically. All the stores had been carried down stairs, and the store-room key given over to the purser.

"I am glad you have turned up," said the lighthouse keeper. "Oblige me by opening that locker and taking back the articles I purloined recently. If the purser asks for an explanation, tell him the truth, and say I am willing to eat this stuff now for my sins."

Pyne noticed that Brand's own letters lay in a small pile on the writing desk. With two exceptions, they were unopened. As a matter of fact, he had glanced at the superscriptions, saw that they were nearly all from strangers, and laid them aside until night fell and the lighting of the lamps would give him a spare moment.

"I'll do that with pleasure," said the American, "but there's one thing I want to discuss with you whilst there is a chance of being alone. My uncle says he has written to you."

"To me?"

"Yes. It deals with an important matter, too. It concerns Enid."

"Mr. Traill has written to me about Enid?" repeated Brand, stopping his industrious polishing to see if Pyne were joking with him.

"That's so. See, here is his letter. It will tell its own story. Guess you'd better read it right away."

The young man picked up one of the sealed letters on the table and handed it to the other.

Setting aside a glass chimney and a wash-leather, Brand lost no time in reading Mr. Traill's communication.

Save that his lips tightened, and his face paled slightly, there was no outward indication of the tumult the written words must have created in his soul, for that is what met his astonished vision:

"Dear Mr. Brand—I hope soon to make your acquaintance. It will be an honour to meet a man who has done so much for those near and dear to me, but there is one reason why I am anxious to grasp your hand which is so utterly beyond your present knowledge that I deem it a duty to tell you the facts, to prepare you, in a word.

(To be continued).

It Reports a Remarkable Cure of Kidney and Bladder Disease From Belleville, Ont.

Also Recalls Mr. D. M. Waters' First Purchase of Dr. A. W. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment a Quarter of a Century Ago.

When you read this letter you will readily understand why it is of special interest to us, for the druggist who sold the pills in this case gave his first order in 1885.

For twenty-five years Mrs. Waters has watched the growth in popularity of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and other medicines and can now point to hundreds of cures in Belleville and vicinity resulting from his recommendations of these well-known medicines.

If you are tired of experimenting, why not use a medicine which has proven its undoubted control over diseases of the kidneys and liver? Let this letter convince you or send to us for records of hundreds of other cases.

Mr. Mark Ottrey, Bay Side, Ont., writes: "I purchased two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills from my druggist, D. M. Waters, Belleville, Ont., and the amount of satisfaction my wife obtained from their use has led me to ask my druggist to send you this letter.

Mrs. Ottrey suffered considerably with kidney and bladder trouble, causing great pain at times. The urine was very heavy and of a bad colour. After taking a few doses of these pills she felt better and when she had used the two boxes she was entirely well." # HAD MONEY HIDDEN

Samuel Oliver, Who Goes to Kingston Penitentiary For Seven Years Had $100 Concealed Under His House

DUG IT UP YESTERDAY

The suspicions of High Constable Cochrane that Samuel Oliver, who was sentenced to seven years in Kingston penitentiary yesterday by Magistrate Edmison, had a sum of money concealed away somewhere, was verified after the trial yesterday, when Oliver, after being repeatedly questioned by the officer, finally confessed that Mr. Cochrane's impression was true. Oliver was taken to his home after being sentenced, by High Constable Cochrane and, taking a shovel, dug into the ground about two feet below the surface of the cellar and produced three tubes made of lead-pipe hammered tight at the ends. Just outside the house were buried two more such receptacles, and the five contained about $100 in silver coins, which Oliver had saved and planted. The prisoner made an order that $15 of the money should be devoted to paying his counsel and the balance should go to the Children's Aid Society to help pay the maintenance of his children, who have been taken charge of by the Society, and are now in the Shelter.

Remarkable Showing in the St. John's Chimes Fund

Fifty-three men belonging to the Wm. Hamilton Co. yesterday gave donations to the Chimes' Fund, totalling $19.00. The visitor to this big iron plant cannot but be impressed by the large operations of this company. Its complete reorganization is a decided credit to the present management, and a great advantage to the city. A full report has come in from the girls of the Quaker Oats Co., through Miss M. Godfrey, showing seventy-eight subscribers and $12.75 in cash. Eighteen employes of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons send in $5.50, through Miss Daisy Kingdon. This is the second appreciated instalment from this up-to-date factory. The total number of individual contributions in the returns lately made is the best possible testimony to the public interest in this big city project. At noon to-day the fund stood at $4,468.95.

Demand Always Increasing

Because "Fruit-a-tives" Cures

The real value of any article may be judged by the demand for it. Steadily increasing sales are the surest indication of intrinsic merit. This applies to a medicine as well as to a breakfast food.

First introduced to the public in Ottawa, the fame of "Fruit-a-tives" quickly spread until to-day these fruit juice tablets are known and used in every section of the Dominion.

The only reason for this extraordinary demand is that "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit, and is the only remedy that will positively cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Backache, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Bladder and Kidney Troubles. One has only to read the testimonials given to "Fruit-a-tives" by some of the best known and most highly esteemed people of Canada, to appreciate the wonderful amount of good that this grand fruit medicine has done and is doing for the sick and suffering.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

The eternal length of a rainy Sunday spent with a crowd of people who were comparative strangers to each other, impels me to a few remarks on the art of general conversation.

If you want to be welcome on rainy Sundays and similar occasions when conversation is the chief amusement, let me suggest that before you start to tell any anecdote you ask yourself: "Is it intrinsically interesting? That is, if it has no connection with myself or my friends, will it still be worth telling?" And if you can't say, "yes," don't tell it.

I've often heard a bore defined as a person who talks about himself continually, but I don't think that's right. I know people who talk about themselves perpetually, but who are nevertheless very delightful companions. The point is they have had such interesting lives that what they tell about themselves is intrinsically interesting, that is, would be so even if it had no personal connection.

Try also to lose the idea that a bare statement, that you or some of your friends have been to some particular place or done some special thing, is a good conversational coin.

For instance, if a bright story about newspaper life is told, there is always someone to pipe up: "I have a friend who was a newspaper man once. He wrote the political news," or, if a picture of some beautiful spot is being admired the same variety of bore volunteers the absorbing information. "I was near there once when I was traveling for a shoe factory, but it was our busy season and I couldn't get the time to go over."

Remarks like that go well enough with people who have reason to be interested in you and your friends, and where you have or haven't been; but a general conversation with comparative strangers—well, they're certainly counterfeit currency, which only the obligation of politeness ever makes people accept as the real thing.

Stories involving for their comprehension much knowledge of any sort of some business or sport, or locality, for instance—and told to people who do not possess that knowledge, are another variety of bad conversational coin. No one except a conversational genius can give brief explanations that really explain, and many a story or incident that is perfectly good when told to the right person, becomes an unmitigated bore when loaded down with explanations and foisted off on people who haven't the ghost of an idea what it all means, but who smile and say, "Yes, yes, I understand," just to get the agony over with.

There is plenty of mutual ground on which even complete strangers, if they have average intelligence, can meet.

There are enough personal anecdotes in most of our lives that are intrinsically interesting enough to be told even to strangers.

There is almost always some special common interest that only two or three people can find to talk about.

If people would realize these possibilities and limitations, and try to live up to them, and within them, it seems to me there would be far fewer bores in the world.

FIXED ASSESSMENT FOR THE LOCK COMPANY

Will Be Assessed at $25,000 for Ten Years at the Recommendation of Manufacturers' Committee---Company is Expending $40,000 in Improvements and Extensions and is Increasing Number of Employees.

The Manufacturers' committee of the city council met last night to recommend to the council that a by-law be passed giving the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company a fixed assessment of $25,000 for a period of ten years.

Ald. Gillespie, chairman of the committee, presided at last night's meeting and the members present were Ald. Bradburn, Duffus and the Mayor.

Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. Thos. Fortye were present on behalf of the Lock Company. Mr. Stratton in explaining the matter to the committee stated that the company was arranging for the expenditure of at least $40,000. Some of the expenditures were taking place during the present year, the balance would be expended in the spring or early summer of next year. The company during the past year had increased the number of its employees by 40, and expected to make still further increase by this number and to triple their output. The Lock Company had felt that the ratepayers would be better satisfied if they saw the expenditure was being made, so that they had waited until the work had been commenced before asking for a fixed assessment. They were not asking for anything unreasonable, but felt that they should receive assistance. It was pointed out that the present assessment of the company was about $25,000.

Ald. Buller said that although he was not a member of the committee, he wished to express his opinion to the effect that he was heartily in sympathy with the request of the Lock Company, which was one of the city's most stable industries and should be supported.

Ald. Bradburn echoed this opinion, saying that the request was satisfactory to him.

Ald. Bradburn moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the committee recommend to the Council that the assessment of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company be fixed at $25,000 for a term of ten years.—Carried unanimously.

A letter was read from Messrs. B. F. Ackerman, Son and Company, in regard to the C.P.R. crossing Dalhousie street, to provide them with a siding, and on motion it was decided that the city should consent to the work being done on the usual terms.

HONOURED BY THE MEMBERS OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE

Mr. Arthur Rosborough Was Presented With a Suit Case and Eulogistic Address by the Fairview Young People.

AN ENJOYABLE EVENT

An enjoyable event took place at the residence of Mr. Samuel Rosborough, Smith, on Thursday evening last, when the members of the Epworth League of the Fairview Methodist church gathered together to say farewell to Mr. Arthur Rosborough, who is now attending Toronto University. Mr. Rosborough was presented with a handsome suitcase( and also a brush and comb, while the following address was presented:

Dear Fellow Worker,—It is with sincere regret that we learn of your intended departure from among us, but we congratulate you on the success which has attended your studies and made this more possible, althoug we are awaare it has been achieved by diligent study and perseverance.

During the time you have been among us as an active Christian worker your energy and sincerity have been the means of helping to uplift many of your associates. We realize it has not always been easy for you to take the stand you have. The discouragements and difficulties have been many, and the encouragements, we fear, have not been what you deserved; but through it all, by your zeal and faithfulness, you might well have put to shame some of us, who have carelessly ignored many opportunities to help some one. When we remember how faithfully and regularly you have attended the Sunday and mid-week service and how carefully and efficiently you have performed the duties which fell to your lot, and then remember some of the flimsy excuses we have given for staying at home, we feel we are about to lose a valued worker.

We believe, however, that although we cannot always have you with us a larger field of labour is opening to you ,and we trust your influence may be a power for good among your associates.

And now we feel we cannot permit you to leave us without showing you some mark of our appreciation. Therefore, we ask you to accept this little gift as a token of our regard for you and as you make use of it in future years, think of those whose wish it is that you may make many staunch friends, whose acquaintance will prove of mutual benefit.

Signed on behalf of Fairview Epworth League and Sunday School.

J. Elliott,
Cecil Graham,
Harold Bell.

Mr. Rosborough made a suitable reply.

One does not buy a bedstead. For buying means to incur expense; and a bedstead is an investment—a lifelong one. So the bed good enough for your home should be all a bed can be. It is, when this trademark is on its footrail.

Look for that trademark. You may need to pay a trifle more to have it on the bed you buy. But it is worth that little more when it is "Ideal" quality.

Worth more, because the snow-white enamel remains white (does not turn dingy gray, or yellowish). Worth more, because that "Ideal" trademark guarantees the buyer a metal bed that will not rattle, nor become wobbly, nor ever look cheap. Worth far more than the little extra price—perhaps forty cents—for forty technical reasons.

We who make and guarantee "Ideal" Metal Beds believe many people think buttermess is valuable when it affects sleep.

For those people we have printed a little booklet called "The Philosophy of Sleep." Your copy is to be sent quite free for your name and the name of your dealer if you ask for Booklet No. 125. 6

MAGISTRATE'S JUDGMENT IN OLIVER CASE

Man Who Was Sentenced to Seven Years in Kingston Penitentiary for Fiendish Crime—Magistrate's Scathing Condemnation of the Prisoner

A HORRIBLE OFFENCE

Owing to the lateness of the hour at which Samuel Oliver received his sentence yesterday afternoon, the Examiner was unable to publish the judgment of Magistrate Edmison in full, and below it is given in detail:

The Judgment.

"On the twentieth day of September 1910, at the Court House in the City of Peterborough the prisoner was brought before me, charged with having at the Township of Smith in the County of Peterborough on or about the month of June 1908, then being the father of one Jessie Oliver had criminal relations with the said Jessie Oliver, his daughter, and did thereby commit incest contrary to the provisions of the Criminal Code.

R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, appeared on behalf of the Crown to prosecute, and Mr. Kerr appeared for and on behalf of the prisoner, and the charge having been read over by me to the prisoner I explained to him that he might with his own consent be tried by me and that if he desired to be tried by a jury he was entitled to be so tried, and after consultation with his counsel he consented to be tried by me and stated that he did not wish to be tried by a jury. I then again read over the said charge to him and asked him to plead thereto, and he then pleaded guilty, and was convicted on his own confession, and was remanded for sentence until to-day, and before pronouncing sentence, I now ask the prisoner if he has anything to say why sentence should not now be pronounced, and as no good cause is shown I pass sentence as follows:

You, Samuel Oliver, now stand convicted on your own confession of the abominable crime of incest with your own daughter, Jessie Oliver, who at the time was only between fifteen and sixteen years of age and from all the information I have been able to obtain regarding her, it appears that she was not a girl of strong mind or will, but scarcely competent to take care of herself, and one liable to be led astray by any evil minded companion, and instead of watching over and protecting her, as it was your duty as her father, you in order to gratify your own beastly lust took advantage of her weakness and debauched and led her to ruin, and she has borne a child of which you admit you are the father. The very thought of such a thing is enough to cause one to shudder. The unfortunate child, through no fault of its own, but owing to close relationship of its parents, can scarcely be expected to be otherwise than defective in body or in mind, and you have made no provision for the care or maintenance of this unfortunate child which is now, and likely will be as long as it lives, a burden upon the general public to be cared for and maintained, and by your conduct you have not only hopelessly ruined your daughter, but have also brought disgrace upon your wife and your other children, and I am advised that your wife for a time was so stricken with grief over your conduct that she actually went insane and had to be cared for in an asylum for some time. Fortunately, however, she has recovered, and for all this horrible state of affairs you, and you alone, are properly being held responsible and it is now my very unpleasant duty to pronounce such sentence against you as the law demands for this horrible crime you have committed. The maximum penalty fixed by the Criminal Code for such offence is fourteen years' imprisonment, and also to be whipped, but fortunately for you the law gives me a discretionary power, if I think it right to exercise it, to reduce this penalty, and although there appear few, if any, extenuating circumstances, I have in the exercise of my discretion, determined to reduce the maximum period of imprisonment by one-half. The sentence of this Court, therefore, is that you are to be imprisoned in the Provincial Penitentiary at Kingston at hard labour for the term of seven years, and that besides such imprisonment you are to receive 30 strokes with the cat-o-nine-tails, fifteen of such strokes to be administered sometime during the first three months of the first year and the other fifteen sometime during the first three months of the second year of your said imprisonment."

Dated this 27th day of September, 1910.

GEO. EDMISON,
Police Magistrate, County Peterborough.

SCOW WITH LOAD OF WOOD SINKS AT THE WHARF

One of the Fuel & Cartage Company's barges, loaded with about 35 cords of wood, sank at the Wolfe St. wharf last night, as a result of a leak. The scow has been tied up at the wharf for the past week and has been steadily sinking until yesterday, when one end rested on the bottom. As the scow was endways to the wharf, the end caught on the wharf, and the weight of the wood broke the scow in two. The work of unloading will commence at once and the scow will be hauled out and rebuilt. The loss will not be extensive, although the scow is sinking deeper, and has gone down considerably since this morning.

THE Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN---WHAT IS BEING ACCOMPLISHED

If the Campaign for 500 new members which has been the talk of the city for the past two weeks has done nothing else it has done a big thing in the way it has enlisted the services of a dozen of the young men of the city in an effort worth while. It has been stated frequently in these columns that the men are working. And that means that these men are being developed in executive ability. It means more than that, in the fact that these young men feel that they have a part in a great enterprise. And that they are responsible for this very important part of the life of Peterborough.

The reception to-morrow evening promises to be a very pleasing part of the Campaign. Arrangements are now all but completed for this event. The Physical work will be of unusual interest, for besides the regular class work there will be a fast game of Basket Ball, Potato races and a host of other things in the Gymnasium. The Swimming will be in charge of the Association Swimming Instructor and a fine new springboard has just been installed by Mr. Thompson. An exhibition of Life Saving will be on the Programme which ought to be seen by every young man who ever takes a young lady out in a canoe.

Mr. Gray is again in charge of the Bowling Alleys and will see that the Bowlers are well looked after. Those who have played on the Alleys say that they are in first-class shape.

The applicants for the Educational Classes are now being enrolled. Any young man who would like to take up Mechanical Drawing or Shop Arithmetic should get his name in right now. There is also a chance of a class in Electricity being formed and taught by a competent teacher. Get your name in to the Secretary at once if you would like to get into that class.

There is no doubt that the Debating Club will be a huge success this season. The men who are interested in this Department are extremely enthusiastic about it.

The new members are still rolling in, but there will have to be some hustling if the 500 mark is to be reached.

Young men, keep in mind the Reception on Thursday night. You can drop in at any time in the evening and go out when you please. You will be made welcome and you will not be worried. Neither will you be patronized. You will be treated as a man by as manly a body of men as you will find in Peterborough.

A CLEVER MUSICIAN

Has Taken Up Residence in Peterborough in the Person of Mr. F. H. Puttenham

Mr. F. H. Puttenham, who has recently arrived in this city and has taken up residence here, has held several musical positions of considerable importance in England and Canada. Kindred piano and voice culture at the Liege conservatory, Belgium and Paris, France. He has had wide experience in training both small and large choral associations. The organ is his specialty, and his recitals in St. John, N.B., and Montreal, were always well supported. He has travelled and lived extensively in Belgium, France, Holland, Germany and Italy, and is somewhat of a linguist. The French language might almost be considered his mother tongue. He is an exponent of the most successful method of teaching languages known as the Berlitz method, and uses this in teaching French.

Mr. Puttenham is preparing to receive pupils at his residence, 571 Aylmer street, where he can be interviewed.

CANADIAN CORDAGE EMPLOYEES' FAREWELL TO SUPERINTENDENT

Mr. Jas. Lawrinson Recipient of a Presentation on the Occasion of His Departure From the City.

WAS A BIG SURPRISE

Mr. Jas. Lawrinson, superintendent of the Canadian Cordage Co., upon his retirement, was presented with a handsome suit case by the employees of the mill. The address given below was read by Mr. Jackson, master mechanic, while the presentation was made by Mr. McCurdy, foreman of the spinning department.

Mr. Lawrinson in a well chosen remarks, thanked the employees for their kindness.

The address was as follows:

Dear Mr. Lawrinson,—Knowing that you are about to leave the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Co., Ltd., we, the employees, who have been associated with you during the time you have been superintendent of the mill, beg to express our deep regret at having to part with you.

We can say that during the time we were associated with you, in connection with the Company, our intercourse has been of a very pleasant nature. We appreciate very much your attitude towards the employees of the mill, and can only again express our regret at your leaving, and express the hope that wherever you and Mrs. Lawrinson go, you will meet with friends and happiness.

Please accept this little token of our remembrance, not for its intrinsic value, but as a memento of the pleasant time we have had together.

ABORN COMPANY HERE READY FOR TO-NIGHT'S GREAT ATTRACTION

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company, which presents Balfe's masterpiece, "The Bohemian Girl," at the Grand to-night, arrived in the city this morning, after playing to a most enthusiastic audience at Kingston last night, where the laurels already won on the Canadian tour were added to. They are guaranteed a bumper audience this evening, as the plan has sold out rapidly. The Aborn Company, with its huge cast and splendid orchestra, is proving an attraction of the very first magnitude, and a magnificent treat is assured the theatre goers of Peterborough this evening. The management of the Grand announce that the gallery will open at 7.30 o'clock for rush seats at 25c each. Seats reserved will be held only until 7.30 o'clock, a fact which patrons are asked to bear in mind.

Death Of Gov. Fraser

Widely-Known Maritime Lawyer, Judge and Politician, Who Has Been Ill All Summer, Passes Away With His Son at His Bedside—He Had Had an Active Career In Legislature.

Halifax, Sept. 28.- Lieutenant-Governor D. C. Fraser, who has been at his summer home at Guysboro all summer, took a turn for the worse Monday, and died yesterday morning. His son, Allister Fraser, was summoned from Halifax, and was at the bedside.

Duncan Cameron Fraser, D.C.L., LL.D., was born in New Glasgow, N.S., on Oct. 1, 1845. He was the son of Alexander Fraser and his wife, Ann Chisholm, whose parents came to Pictou County from Inverness-shire, Scotland. Duncan was educated in the public and normal schools in Truro, and was for some years a school teacher. He left teaching to enter Dalhousie University, where he graduated B.A. in 1872. In the following year he was called to the Bar of Nova Scotia. He afterwards entered municipal politics and was mayor of New Glasgow for two terms.

In February, 1878, he was called to the Legislative Council of the province, and became a member of the Cabinet, but he resigned his seat in the council the same year to run for a seat in the Assembly. Ten years later he was again called to the Legislative Council and to a seat in the Cabinet, becoming Government leader in the Upper Chamber. Three years later he once more resigned his seat in the council, having an ambition to enter Dominion politics, and contested Guysboro at the Federal general elections of 1891. He was elected, and was also returned at the general elections of 1896 and 1900.

In 1904 he resigned his seat in the Ottawa House on his appointment as a judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia. He held the position a little over two years, and on March 27, 1906, he was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia.

A Masterly Document.

London, Sept. 28.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A. E. Ashinwall, secretary of the West India committee, says the report of the West Indies' Commission is a masterly document, and generally speaking is decidedly favorable. Indeed, many of the suggestions made have been embodied in a memorandum which the committee has submitted to the royal commission, and has now been adopted.

The Globe hopes its evidence and conclusions will not be quietly pigeon-holed but thoroughly debated and acted upon.

The Westminster Gazette says if at the end of it all the Canadian Government does seriously mean not to continue its preference unless it gets reciprocity on revenue tariff, the report of the commission makes the best of a bad job, and does so with the least possible disturbance of existing system.

Presbyterian Missions.

Toronto, Sept. 28.—At a meeting of the executive of the home mission committee of the Presbyterian Church, Dr. Sommerville reported that the expenditure since April 1, including the payment of claims, which alone had aggregated $40,057, amounted to $117,426, and the receipts $28,355, leaving the fund in debt $89,070. The revenue last year was $208,000, an advance on contributions of the previous year of $51,000, of which amount $37,000 was raised by special convass, and, accordingly the increase from ordinary sources amounted only to $14,000.

The estimated expenditure for the current year was $214,000. In order to meet its obligations next spring, the committee will require from ordinary sources about $77,000 more than was provided last year. The committee recommended that these facts should be brought to the notice of all congregations.

Suicided In Public Gardens.

Halifax, Sept. 28.—Jas. A. Gruves, aged 32, a commercial traveler from Chicago, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in the public gardens. A box of strychnine tablets was found in his pockets, with two missing, and a note addressed to the American consul, asking that his remains be sent to his home in Chicago, where he has a wife and two children.

"Too Much Learning."

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 28.—Christopher Royce, son of Prof. Josiah Royce of Harvard, said to be possessed of the most perfectly train mind in America, died Monday at the Danvers' Insane Asylum, a victim of overstudy.

New Bank President.

Montreal, Sept. 28.—Hon. J. D. Rolland, M.L.C., was elected yesterday president of the Bank of Hochelaga, replacing the late Dr. F. X. St. Charles. The new president is a well-known paper manufacturer and a past president of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association.

DOCTORS TELL HOW "CUTICURA" CURED SKIN DISEASES

One says, "I have Great Faith in Cuticura Remedies." Another, "They Always Bring Results."

"I wish to let you know of a couple of recent cures which I have made by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. Last August, Mr. ——— of this city came to my office, troubled with a severe skin eruption. At first I could not understand the nature of the case. I finally traced it to his occupation, as he was a painter and decorator. It was dermatitis in its worst form. It started with a slight eruption and would affect most parts of his body—thighs, elbows, chest, back and abdomen—and would terminate in little pustules. The itching and burning was dreadful and he would almost tear his skin apart, trying to get relief. I recommended all the various treatments I could think of and he spent about fifteen dollars on prescriptions but nothing seemed to help him.

"In the meantime my wife who was continually suffering with a slight skin trouble and who had been trying different prescriptions and methods with my assistance, told me she was going to get some of the Cuticura Remedies. But as I did not know much about Cuticura at that time I was doubtful whether it would help her. Her skin would thicken, break and bleed, especially on the fingers, wrists and arms. I could do nothing to relieve her permanently. When she first applied the warm baths of Cuticura Soap and applications of Cuticura Ointment she saw a decided improvement and in a few days she was completely cured.

"I lost no time in recommending the Cuticura Remedies to Mr. ———, and this was two months ago. I told him to wash with warm baths of the Cuticura Soap and to apply the Cuticura Ointment generously. Believe me, from the very first day's use of the Cuticura Remedies he was greatly relieved and to-day he is completely cured through their use. I have great faith in the Cuticura Remedies and shall always have a good word for them now that I am convinced of their wonderful merits." (Signed) B. L. Whitehead, M.D., 108 Dartmouth St., Boston, Mass., July 22, 1910.

As though in confirmation of this most convincing statement, G. M. Fisher, M.D., Big Pool, Md., writes: "My face was afflicted with eczema in the year 1897. I used the Cuticura Remedies and was entirely cured. I am a practicing physician and very often prescribe Cuticura Remedies in cases of eczema, and they have cured where other formulas have failed. I am not in the habit of endorsing patent medicines, but when I find remedies possessing true merit, such as the Cuticura Remedies do, I am broad-minded enough to proclaim their virtues to the world. I have been practicing medicine for twenty years, and must say I find your Remedies A No. 1. I still find the Cuticura Remedies as good as ever. They always bring results."

Cuticura Remedies are sold by druggists everywhere. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Mailed free, on request, latest 32-page Cuticura Book on the speedy treatment of skin diseases.

Mary Dolan Is Guilty

Girl Tells How Former Tavern-keeper Instigated the Murder of Her Child—He Kept Her In a Stable In Orillia, She Says, From October. Until February—He Must Now Face a Charge of Murder.

Barrie, Sept. 28.—Probably never in the history of Canadian courts has a more pitiful story been unfolded than was brought out yesterday during the trial of Mary Dolan, charged with the murder of her infant child. Although the jury returned a verdict of murder against her, it was accompanied by a strong recommendation to mercy, which Justice Britton said would be respected.

In outlining the case to the jury, G. Tate Blackstock, K.C., crown prosecutor, said the girl was more sinned against than sinning. Mary Dolan, 24 years of age, came of respectable family. Some years ago she formed an intimacy with Thomas McNulty, a tavern-keeper at Uptergrove who was married, with two children. Three years ago a child was born, which Mary Dolan placed in charge of friends. Her intimacy with McNulty was resumed, and in July, 1909, another child was born in Toronto. On March 26 last the woman left Toronto with the child, took a train to Hawkestone, and was seen walking along the track in the direction of Orillia. She strangled her babe with a cord, placed the body in a valise until reaching the Narrows, when she dropped it in the water.

Giving evidence in her own behalf the young woman said the crime had been done at the instigation of McNulty, by whom she had been kept in the stable loft of the Grand Central Hotel, Orillia, from October until February, except for two weeks, while she was in a delicate state of health. There she lived alone, never going out, and the only food she obtained was carried to her by McNulty. There was no furniture, and no stove in the loft, and it was bitterly cold, snow coming in through the roof. McNulty refused to give her money to board out. Her bed was two horse blankets.

Several times the prisoner broke down, and once she sobbed aloud "My heart is broken." The painful impression in the court was intensified by the fainting of Constable Wright in the witness-box.

When the jury retired, McNulty was also placed on trial accused of murder.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Inquest Is Opened

Their Stories of the Movements of Ed. Jardine on the Night of Murder Are Contradictory—Witnesses Are Sure They Saw Lizzie Anderson at 10 o'Clock on Night of Her Disappearance From Home.

Goderich, Sept. 28. An inquest was opened last night by Coroner Holmes into the death of 16-year-old Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body with throat cut, was found in the basement of an unoccupied house Sunday morning, after she had been missing several days. Nine witnesses were heard, including the parents, brother and sister of the dead girl, Mrs. Jardine and her four sons, Edward, Albert, Charles and Thomas; and Mamy Spatore, the Italian who boards at the Anderson home.

The evidence of the Jardine family was contradictory as to Ed's movements on the fatal Tuesday night. His mother insisted that he and his brothers had slept in a tent outside the house that night; the boys said that they had slept in the house; Ed. and Thomas agreed that they at least had also, after arising, gone to the tent for another rest, while Charles said he didn't think they had. Mrs. Jardine and Charles said Ed. had had supper at home that night, while Ed. insisted he had lunched at the fair ground with Charles.

Adjournment was made at a late hour until Oct. 5.

No other headway toward solution of the mystery was made yesterday, beyond it being practically proven from persons who had seen her at the fair grounds, that she was alive at 10 o'clock the night she disappeared, while Mrs. Donald Buchanan and her mother, Mrs. Milton, who live only a short distance from the scene of the tragedy, state that they heard screams that night between 11 and 12 o'clock. They twice heard screams about five minutes apart.

Wesley Anderson, father of the victim, was the first witness. The last time he saw Lizzie was Tuesday morning. He was at home when the son arrived, about 10 p.m., without her, and went up town to see if she was with her sister at the Colborne Hotel, where the latter worked. When he returned he asked one of the Italian boarders if he had seen her and was told that he had about 8 o'clock, when he asked her what time she was going home, telling her to wait a few minutes and he would go home with her. She had promised to wait, but he could not find her when he returned. Witness did not think his daughter allowed any improper attentions, and did not think the girl would go with strangers. Lizzie was subject to fits, the last being last winter. She used always to fall down when taken with a fit.

Rubena Anderson, eldest sister, employed at the Colborne Hotel, said that Albert Jardine came Monday to the Anderson home and said he was very sorry about the tragedy. Albert had been there at previous times, and had visited her also at the hotel. Spatore had taken Lizzie and Ethel Devine for a drive once, but Lizzie had never gone for a drive with any other young man.

Willie Anderson said that when he saw his sister last, she was watching the races and said she was going home about 9 o'clock, that Ed. Jardine was going to meet her at the corner near the collegiate institute and take her home. Lizzie had promised to wait for him (witness), and he had watched at the main entrance until all the people had come out, and also looked through the grounds before starting for home without her. He heard the clock strike 10 before he reached home. Her father went up town in search of the girl about 11, returning about midnight, and witness and father and mother went out about one hour later as told in the father's evidence.

Mrs. Jardine said that Ed. had come home about 8 o'clock, and that he and Albert went out to their sleeping tent, but later came in and slept in the house on account of the cold. She admitted having told Inspector Greer and Crown Attorney Seager previously that the boys had spent the night in the tent, and when pressed for the truth, she said that neither of the boys slept in the house that night, that after Ed. came home, he mentioned having seen the girl standing at the fence about 7 o'clock and had given her 15 cents to get her supper, also that he had seen her about 7.30 at the chicken house, standing with a man dressed in a dark brown suit with a fedora hat, in which was a red ticket. When Mr. Anderson called in the morning, asking about Ed., witness had told him he was sleeping in the tent.

Two Men Arrested.

London, Sept. 28.—Two vagrant characters, giving their names as Horsey and Stevens, are held by the police, charged with burglary, but who are also suspected as having possible knowledge of the Lizzie Anderson murder at Goderich.

Horsey, who is about 33 years of age and claims to belong to Baltimore, Md., had an old diary in which was the vague entry: "Good-bye, dear, I killed——." Also, he has some 30 pictures of young girls, not obscene, but just portraits, that would indicate that he is "girl crazy." In view of the suspicion entertained that the murder was committed by two men, the police will make a thorough enquiry. The men admit having been up in the district of late, and say they were in Clinton, which is twelve miles from Goderich.

PANDORA RANGE

for Coal or Wood

Its Long Life

THE Pandora Range is for those who desire to make a permanent investment. The high quality of the materials and the superior method of construction assure long life.

The Body of the Pandora is very heavy. The Rods and Bolts are on the outside where they cannot burn or rust out. The Expansion Rings of the cooking section provide ample allowance for extreme expansion and contraction and eliminate the possibility of the metal cracking.

The Cooking Top is Burnished which toughens the surface of the metal and increases its strength. McClary Oil Cement is used between the joints. Unlike cheap, ordinary cement, it will not dry out and need replacing. The Nickelling will not tarnish and is many times more durable than the single coat of nickel on ordinary ranges.

The Semi-Steel Fire Box Linings are twenty per cent. heavier than cast or gray iron linings. Sulphur fumes, so destructive to cast iron, cannot penetrate the hard, smooth as glass surface of Semi-Steel. The Grates have Three Faces, which allows the wear to be distributed on three sides, insuring triple durability.

If you want a range of guaranteed quality get the Pandora. It's built to give you lasting service.

After La Grippe

"I had suffered several weeks with LaGrippe and pains in my head and ... It felt as though there was a heavy weight on the top of my head, until it seemed that my brain would burst. I was so nervous that I could not rest or sleep. When I dozed off I would awake with a sudden jerking of my whole body. Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Remedy and New Life Pills cured me. A number of friends have since realized the same benefits."

MRS. ALVIN LOCKS, ... Brook, N. H.

The after effects of LaGrippe are often more serious than the disease, as it leaves the system in a weakened condition that invites more serious troubles, such as pneumonia, etc.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine should be taken in time to thoroughly restore nerve strength.

Price $1.00 at your druggist. He should supply you. If he does not, send price to us, we forward it.

MONTREAL, SEPT. 28.—The Montreal Horse Show has attracted a brilliant phalanx of high-class horses. The class for pairs over 15.2 brought out some teams that would be hard to beat any where, and some very clever and pretty driving was shown as the drivers brought the horses round sharp curves at different gaits. Hon J. R. Stratton, with a pair of chestnut geldings, was awarded first prize, with "My Pride" and "Premier." The second prize went to "Duke of Marlborough," from the King Edward Park stables, Bouchervile. Mr. Geo. Pepper, Toronto, scored third with chestnut geldings, "Amerigo" and "Navigo."

Ban Johnson Says The Athletics Will Win So Did Madame Rea

By Ban Johnson, President National League. The Athletics will whip the Cubs in the world's series. It has been my belief that the National League prolonged its schedule in order to get out of playing the world's series. But the series will be played.

The Athletics will beat the Cubs for the world's pennant. I think it is time for our league to win the highest honours in baseball. There was considerable feeling in our own organization against Detroit because of its three successive failings to win the world's championship. For that reason most of the Cubs will be glad to see Connie Mack's great team make the fight against the National League champions.

Mack has a staff of great pitchers, Coombs, Morgan, Plank and Bender are all fully capable of holding their own against the crack pitchers of the National League. Morgan, who didn't show much in St. Louis, is one of the greatest pitchers in the profession.

Connie Mack is a great field general. Frank Chance, if his team wins the National League pennant, will more than find his equal in Mack. Chance is a great playing first baseman and good field strategist, but Mack knows all that he knows, and more. I think Mack is one of the greatest baseball men of the time. If he goes into the world's championship fight with his team in good condition he will win the series.

By Thomas J. Lynch, President National League: I believe, on account of my official position as President of the National League, that I should offer no comment at this time on the outcome of the world's series.

Looks Like Larry Lajoie For The Gasoline Buggy

Ty Cobb will have to play in all of the remaining games to pass Lajoie in the race for batting honours in the American League, and even then it is doubtful if he can beat out the Cleveland man. Lajoie has an average of .393, and Cobb has .358. Experts figure that Lajoie, by averaging two hits a day, cannot be deposed. The big Frenchman made three doubles in four times at bat yesterday.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE

Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

WHISTLES MUST STOP

Legal Committee of Council Decide That Railway Companies Must Do Away With Noise in City Limits

MANY COMPLAINTS

The whistling of locomotives in the city will have to stop.

The Legal committee of the City Council decided at a meeting last night to pass a by-law prohibiting whistling within the city limits.

A letter was read from Mr. E. H. D. Hall, on behalf of the tenants of Fleming Place, calling attention to the nuisance and annoyance caused by the whistling of locomotives on the Grand Trunk. It was not so much the whistling of trains coming in that was objected to, but there were strenuous complaints against the unnecessary and frequent whistling when switching is being done. Mr. Clarkson wrote to the Council along the same lines.

Ald. Buller suggested writing to the Grand Trunk about the matter.

Other aldermen thought that this would be no use, as it had been done several times with no apparent result.

Mayor Morrow asked if the city would be liable in case of accident if a by-law prohibiting whistling was passed.

City Solicitor Hall answered in the negative. "The by-law is in force in all but the villages now. We are getting above the village stage now."

On motion of Ald. Duffus, chairman of the committee, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, it was decided to recommend that a by-law be passed prohibiting the whistling of locomotives.

The Mayor stated that there had been a complaint from some of the residents of East City in regard to the electric bell signal recently set up by the C.P.R. One lady complained that the bell rang for an hour one night recently.

The City Solicitor explained that the Council could do nothing in this matter.

On the advice of the Solicitor no action was taken concerning a petition signed by F. R. J. Mitchell and others complaining of the saw mill on Dorgal street as a nuisance.

Mr. Hall pointed out that this was a matter concerning only a few individuals and not for the mass of citizens.

Mrs. C. Warner, 668 Harvey street, wrote informing the Council that she had fallen and injured herself through a loose plank on Smith street east of Harvey street, on August 14th, and asking for some monetary assistance from the city. She made no legal claim, but asked for help. A report from Street Commissioner Kane was read in connection with the case, and it was decided to recommend to the Charity Board that Mrs. Warner be given assistance.

THE PLATFORM

Special Wire to the Examiner.

SARATOGA N.Y., SEPT. 28.—A continuation of the aggressive campaign against graft and enthusiastic endorsation of Taft administration at Washington, were the two principal features in the Roosevelt platform, adopted by the Republican Convention to-day. Roosevelt, the newly-elected chairman, took his place to-day, amid the thundering plaudits of his followers and the groanings of the Sherman faction.

FIREMAN BADLY HURT

NEW YORK, SEPT. 27.—When an alarm of fire sounded last night at 7.10 o'clock in the house of Hook and Ladder Company No. 9, at No. 209 Elizabeth Street, the majority of the firemen were on the floor immediately above.

The firemen rushed to the brass pole which runs from the sleeping quarters to the lower floor through a well in the flooring of the second storey. Firemen followed one another rapidly in a blurred moving picture effect. When William Wickum of No. 109 Fifteenth Avenue, Astoria, began the sliding descent he lost his hold and fell to the cement flooring, luckily well away from the truck upon which his companions were mounting.

Wickum did not move, but nevertheless his comrades could not wait, and the truck rushed off. After it had cleared the floor the firemen on the house had time to see to Wickum. He was unconscious and was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. There the doctors said his skull was fractured and that he might not live.

The fire which Wickum mi ed was in a cigar factory at No. 27 West Third Street. It caused a loss of but $300.

Members of No. 9 company were especially active at the fire in their desire to get back to their house and learn of young Wickum's condition.

GOOD-BYE TO BEAUTY

It is good-bie to beauty when kidney derangements set in. The skin becomes hard and dry and the form wastes away and becomes emaciated. One cannot be too watchful and the safest way is to keep the kidneys, as well as the liver and bowels, healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. This ensures pure blood and a healthy digestive system

NOT YET FORMED

The Examiner last evening, in referring to the proposal to establish a creche or day nursery at the Y. W. C. A. was in error when it stated that the Associated Charities was organized last Friday. As a matter of fact the organization has not yet been completed, but has only been discussed by those who are working enthusiastically to establish the project here along lines that have proved highly successful in other cities. Mayor Morrow will be asked to call a public meeting, probably next week, to discuss the matter, and the Associated Charities, it is hoped, will be then organized.

Though there is practically no such thing as really pure water, the adults of the family need not do without a beverage that benefits. Regal Lager's absolute purity is its maker's pride; and this delicious brew is also a healthhelper.

WAS BURNED

Mr. Sidney Butler, an employee of the C.G.E., who boards at 488 Bolivar street, received severe burns to his hands, while at work this morning. He was taken to his boarding house in an ambulance, where he is now nursing his injuries.

The burns, while pretty serious, are not considered dangerous, and it is anticipated that the young man will be able to work in a few days. Only yesterday, two other brother workers in the test department were injured in a similar manner. They have returned to work.

THE INTERNATIONAL PEDESTRIAN TRIP

NEW YORK, SEPT. 25.—Germany joined the international go-as-you-please pedestrian trip across the United States yesterday, when two Teutons started from the City Hall at noon to walk to San Francisco. Three Italians started on the same trip fourteen days ago, and since Weston made his record from coast to coast there have been any number of willing walkers starting from here for the Pacific on foot.

The two Germans who got away yesterday are Bernhard and August Andersen, brothers. They are fond of walking, and while they intend to get to San Francisco without riding on trolley, train or wagon, they do not intend to try for a new record, as the Italians do. The Germans are making the trip for enjoyment and exercise, and believe their experiences on the road will well repay them for their efforts.

Yesterday the two men got away from the City Hall quietly. There was a fair crowd to see them off, as it does not take long for a crowd to gather in City Hall Park. The men carried with them a letter from Acting Mayor Mitchell to Mayor McCarthy of San Francisco. They will follow the Weston route closely on their trip across the continent.

The Andersen brothers are stalwart young men, seemingly in the best of physical condition. Bernhard Andersen is only twenty-eight years old, his brother is thirty-three. They have lived in this country for two years but have seen little outside of New York since their arrival from the Fatherland. Most of their heavy walking heretofore was done in South America. They made one pedestrian trip from Buenos Ayres to Rio, and a second trip from Rio to Valparaiso. The walk they started on yesterday is the biggest feat they have attempted.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE AFFAIR AT O. A. COLLEGE

Reports of The Hazing of Freshmen as Sent Out in Press Despatch Are Denied by College Authorities---Nothing More nor Less Than Annual Freshmen--Sophomore Struggle-

The Examiner on Saturday published a despatch from Toronto in regard to a story that some of the freshmen at the O. A. college were forced to dance in their night apparel in front of the girls' residence. This report is absolutely denied as the following despatch indicates:

GUELPH, SEPT. 25.—The story emanating from Toronto, to the effect that some of the freshmen at the O. A. College were painted black and then dragged in their night apparel to Macdonald Hall and forced to dance in front of the girls' residence is emphatically denied at the College. None of the students have heard of the perpetration of so grotesque a trick, and the authorities are equally in the dark. President Creelman instituted an inquiry, and was able to unreservedly deny the story. "As a matter of fact," said one of the College officials, "there is a singular absence of hazing, in the accepted sense of the word, at the College. The boys, of course, have their regular initiation ceremonies, but the fun never goes too far, and the idea of the sophomores forcing the freshmen to a midnight salome dance is ridiculous.

A Guelph exchange gives the following account of the battle between the Sophomores and the freshmen:

A great battle was fought last night on the camps of the Ontario Agricultural College. It was a short, sharp battle in which about 240 fine strapping young men, many of them the stalwart sons of Ontario farmers, but some from foreign climes, were engaged. The battle was the usual argument between the first and second year students, the gentle means employed by them of getting acquainted with each other, and discerning the strength of each others heads and arms, and the pulling qualities of each other's hair.

The battle began at eight o'clock sharp, when the freshmen gathered around their flag and gave first year yell in approved freshman style. There were 140 of them, forming a formidable human barrier around the flag staff, and there were only ninety second year men to rush them, so it looked easy enough for the freshies. But strategy in this, as in great battles of history, played an important part, and the second year men had brains to make up for their smaller numbers. Rushing their opponents under the pretext of trying to get the flag, they succeeded in capturing about forty of the freshmen and taking them away from the rest. They bound the prisoners before the eyes of the rest of the freshmen who though anxious to avenge them dared not leave the standard unprotected and come to their rescue. So while forty of the freshies securely bound, the second year men had a more equal proposition to face. They had 45 minutes in which to capture the flag, if they tore it from the mast in that space of time victory was theirs, but if the freshmen could defend it for that length of time they would be the winners.

Rushed Continually.

The manner of attack adopted by the second year men was to keep up a persistent series of one man rushes; they would buck the line of the freshies continually and at the same time send man after man over their heads in attempts to reach the flag pole. The men would invariably be pulled down by the first year men, but in falling would try to take a couple of freshies with them. Thus a human mast was finally piled up reaching from the outside of the crowd right to the pole. And then when the pile was high enough one second year man, a Jap, by the name of Koyono, succeeded in running up it to the pole and shinning up it to the flag and tearing it from its place. Thus the battle ended. It had lasted exactly 19 minutes so that the Sophomores won the victory with sixteen minutes left to their credit.

Though the fight was a desperate one, it was at the same time good natured and as far as could be seen none of the young men lost their tempers, nor were there any serious injuries sustained.

EDWARD JOBE ARRESTED LAST NIGHT ON CHARGE OF COMMITTING SERIES OF THEFTS

Had Been Away Across the Line But Came Back to Peterborough and Was Apprehended by Officer Meagher Last Night.

PLEADED GUILTY

Edward Jobe, who is alleged to have committed a series of robberies in this city last July, and who pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing shoes from Mr. Hickey's store, blew into the city on Tuesday last on a freight train. He had been away down south in the state of Ohio, and other points south, and when he arrived on Tuesday, the news of his arrival spread far more rapidly than he was aware of. Since he came to the city, he has been in the habit of meeting his brother at certain appointed places; and yesterday he had made arrangements with his brother to meet him on Stewart street about 8 o'clock. Unfortunately for the prisoner, the news of the intended meeting and the appointed place, as well as the time, leaked out, and the police department got wise. Officers Meagher and Newhall attired in plain clothes, were sent down to the south end of the city a little after 7 o'clock. They waited until nearly 9 o'clock and then Newhall returned to the station. Shortly after P. C. Meagher was on his way to the station, coming up Stewart street, when he came up with his man, and made the arrest.

Jobe was lodged in the cells last night and this morning he appeared before Magistrate Dumble in the police court. He was charged with breaking into the store of Patrick J. Hickey on Charlotte street and stealing three pairs of boots last July. He pleaded guilty to the charge, at the same time electing to be tried by a jury. His reason for wanting to be tried by a jury after pleading guilty, is not quite understood, but he was remanded for a week, when he will again appear. It is supposed that about six other charges will be brought against him.

During his trip south, he states that he has only worked about fourteen days. He stated that he had succeeded in selling the stolen goods.

McNulty Trial At Barrie Is Continued

Prisoner Hangs Head

Special Wire to the Examiner.

BARRIE, SEPT. 29.—Thomas McNulty, a married man, being tried for complicity in the murder of a child of which Mary Dolan has already been convicted, hung his head, apparently seeing and hearing nothing, as the girl, between sobs and fits of hysterics, continued her story in the witness box to-day. She denied that she had ever tried to put a child in the orphanage at another man's expense. John McGregor, a school teacher, told of a conversation with the girl in which she said the child featured another man in town, not McNulty. The judge prevented the lawyer putting questions to male witnesses dealing with their relations with the girl.

FIERCE RIOTING IN THE GERMAN STRIKE

Examiner Special.

BERLIN, GERMANY, SEPT. 29.—The fighting between police and strikers, and the ravaging and burning of houses and factories continued last night and scores of persons were seriously hurt, some fatally. The newspapers are all out this morning, with editorials demanding more drastic measures to suppress the trouble, one saying that "sabres having proved ineffective, try bullets." Police Commissioner Von Jagow intimates that repetitions of rioting to-night will bring orders to the twelve hundred police to fire into the mob. Kaiser been convicted, hung his head, appealing for the order.

"STILL MYSTIFIED" IN GODERICH MURDER

Special to The Examiner.

GODERICH, SEPT. 29—"We are mystified," said Detective Greer this afternoon when, with local police chief he returned from scouring the country for the murderer of Lizzie Anderson. The funeral of the dead girl this morning to Dungannon cemetery, was very largely attended. Her parents are prostrated.

STRATHORMOND STABLES STILL KEEP WINNING CLIP

MONTREAL, SEPT. 29.—The Montreal horse show is a splendid combination of social display and exhibition of horse flesh. The arena is a magnificent place, its decorations are superb and it is the centre of attraction for the finest women and the finest horses in Canada. Peterborough will be interested in the results of Wednesday afternoon and evening contests, in which Peterborough took a prominent and creditable part. The following events are to be noted:

Hackney Mares in Harness, 15.2 and under, eleven entries—First "Loch Ryan Princess," Stratton, Peterborough; fourth, "Lady Navarre," Stratton, Peterborough.

Pairs, 15.2 and under, six entries—First, "Loch Ryan" and Perfect Dream," Stratton, Peterborough.

Single horse in harness, high steppers, ten entries — First, "Perfect Dream," Stratton, Peterborough; second, "Yapham Fashion," Beith, Bowmanville; third, Mrs. Meredith's entry; fourth, "Latest News," Stratton, Peterborough.

Home Rule In Relation To T. P. O'Connor's Visit

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—To-morrow night in Massey Hall, Toronto, T. P. O'Connor, the distinguished Irish Nationalist leader and journalist, will plead the cause of Home Rule for Ireland. Mr. O'Connor comes to a country that is growing rich and prosperous under home government to enlist our sympathy in the century-old struggle to win a similar boon for his native land. And it goes without saying that he will not appeal in vain to the free citizens of Canada. When he returns to continue the fight in the British House of Commons he will do so with the knowledge that behind him is arrayed the material and moral support of the Dominion. The justice of Ireland's demand is self evident. The greatest English statesmen have admitted it. And it looks as if in the near future Englishmen of both parties will unite in conceding Ireland's inalienable right. Government by the people, for the people is the foundation of all democracy. Under the present system the people of Ireland have no more control over the administration of their affairs than they have over the destinies of Kores. Dublin Castle—a system of irresponsible Boards entirely out of sympathy with the people—rules the country. All Ireland asks, to quote the historic words of the Unionists, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, now Governor General Lord Dudley, of Australia, is the power to "govern Ireland according to Irish ideas." By Home Rule he means a parliament in Dublin to deal with all purely Irish affairs. He does not ask an Independent Parliament. He would merely rule Ireland in the interests of Ireland, leaving all Imperial questions to the Imperial parliament. What Ireland asks has been conceded to Canada, Australia and South Africa. Has that led to the dismemberment of the Empire? Why should it do so in Ireland? Has not Ireland contributed her share, and more than her share, to the making of the Empire? Why should she seek to destroy it? The day that sees the opening of a Home Rule Parliament in Dublin will be the best day the Empire has seen since Waterloo. England has failed in Ireland because she has ever gone counter to the wishes of the people. May it be that saner counsels will even now prevail! Then indeed we will have a united Empire, loyal to the core. Ireland expects your moral sympathy. She also asks your material support. Montreal has raised $10,000. How much will Peterborough be good for?

Yours, etc.,
"GAEL".

CHICAGO, ILL., SEPT. 29.—Dying yesterday of dread consumption, George W. Patten, grain operator, brother of James Patten, left five million dollars, largely to charities, including a very large legacy to organizations for fighting tuberculosis.

A NEW PLEA

Plea Made For Release of Prisoner Because She Was Brought by Woman Bailiff.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, ONT., SEPT. 29.—Because she was brought here by Mrs. Johnston, a woman bailiff, Alice O'Brien's lawyer appealed at Osgoode Hall for her release under habeas corpus on the plea that the law does not recognize women as court officials.

BAD, VERY BAD.

The authorities of the Toronto Health Department showed more zeal than morality, or humanity, in helping the National Exhibition. During the two weeks' run of the Exhibition the Department is said to have issued bulletins, certifying that the city water, for drinking and domestic purposes, was, for purity, in the same class as Cæsar's wife; whereas, as we are informed, these bulletins were false and misleading, and the water thus recommended to the visitor to the Fair was, during the two weeks mentioned, in a very dangerous condition, heavily laden with colon bacilli, the kind that generates disease. If the city water was bad at the time of the Exhibition, one way would be to have said nothing about it, but even that would be questionable morality; there are circumstances when suppression of the truth would be as wicked, and do as much harm as direct misstatement, such as consisted in issuing pure, wholesome water bulletins over the head of dirty disease-breeding water for the consumption of the city's guests. What adds to the gravity of the matter is that the object was pure economical greed—the desire to encourage attendance and cause money to be spent in Toronto. This action justifies the critics of Toronto in referring to that enterprising—too enterprising sometimes—borough as Hog-town. A city that will risk poisoning the public of the province in order to make money to meet the demands of inordinate greed, should—well—know better. In the first place advertising filthy water as pure, was not needed. The exhibition, in itself, has a drawing power, on its merits, sufficient to satisfy legitimate desires for profit. Inviting the risk of life for money-making purposes may differ in method, but is not very far removed in principle, from the action of the footpad, who fells his victim to get his purse.

HOUSEHOLD PRICES.

The struggle to keep soul and body together, strenuous as it is now in the face of high prices, promises to be more so in some respects. The housewife will have to "hustle" to keep her table provided with fruits and vegetables, especially the hand-to-mouth housekeeper who, like the grasshopper of the fable spends the whole summer in pleasure, and fails to lay up a supply for winter. Summer pleasures are all right, in the abstract, but in some cases they represent burning the candle at both ends—the cost of a month more or less, of summer pleasures eats into the income in its own way, and they involve the failure to lay in a supply of food for winter, for few women can dance the can-can of pleasure through the summer months and can the fruits that are necessary for a well-spread family table during the winter months. And the unprovident housewife will this year have to pay for her table delicacies. The local wholesale grocery houses have their quotations to hand for the winter season and nearly all prices show a sharp advance. Canned fruits and vegetables will be considerably dearer; some that sold last year at "three for a quarter," such as peas and tomatoes, will have to be sold this year "two for a quarter, and canned corn will be "ten cents straight." Raisins and currants that were in the three or four-for-a-quarter class last year, will this year, it is said, command ten cents singly; shelled walnuts—sold last year for 40 cents per pound—will this year advance to 50 cents. This advance in price, vouched for as correct by a reliable dealer, will have something of tenor for the listless housewife, but less for the housewife, the "wise woman" who according to the seven hundred-wived proverbial philosopher, "buildeth her own house" and has laid in a good store of pickles and preserves, peaches, plums, raspberries and all fruits in their season; but according to the same authority, "the foolish woman" who "plucketh down her house" by failing to make proper provision for its' winter needs, will, as the political stump speaker would say, "have to pay through the nose" for her canned goods.

INTENSIVE ADMINISTRATION

The Property Committee of the City Council and representing the Council, showed an inclination to intensive administration at their meeting a night or two ago, when they made a star chamber matter of the pillars, or pilasters, supporting, or ornamenting the pediment of the front of the new Public Library building. The pillars are declared unsightly, in that the diameter is sharply reduced from a point within a few feet of where they join the capitals. This may not be desirable, but, as the reduction in diameter is symmetrical and common to all the pillars, the effect is not noticable to any but acute observers, having, perhaps, some object in pointing out and emphasizing the peculiarity, and showing a solicitude similar to that of a woman in respect of having her hat on straight. It is safe to say that thousands have passed the building many times without having their eyes offended. If the construction and treatment of the pillars are a variation from the plans, as approved by the building committee then, in strictness, the plans should have been followed out, or the pillars be yet made to conform to the plans.

But, are the Property Committee, as a part of the City Council, consistent? They are moving heaven and earth, or, rather, the library building pillars, but they forget that these same pillars, even were they knock-kneed and bow-legged, in turn, are good enough to correspond with Central Park, upon which they look down with frowns of amazement and disgust over the condition to which it has been brought, and in which it is kept by combined civic and military neglect. It is an easy matter to come down upon the architects, like the thousand of bricks that went up wrong—it only needs a few words,—a cheap commodity. But the neglected condition of Central Park needs a good deal of the watchfulness and care, with neglect of which the City Committee charges the architects in respect of the pillars.

Something should be done, some systematic plan of improvement should be applied to Central Park. There is nothing like plan at present. Just fancy! one of the numerous fingers in the park pie, suggests that a granolithic walk should be laid upon the park—something that, it is safe to say, cannot be found in any plot of ground devoted to prak purposes any where on the continent. Besides, this harsh, hard, hot, unbending proposed substitute for a good, comfortable and befitting loam, or gravel walk, or walks, is unnecessary. The objection that in the spring depressed walks are not comfortable for use on account of slush and water, is weakened by the fact that the park is not intended as a highway or thoroughfare. There are good walks all around it, which the public can use, as has to be done in other parts of the city. In any other city square the buildings prevent the public from taking "short cuts" and the walks around Central Park can be used by one part of our citizens as well as similar walks elsewhere by another. Victoria Park is closed during the winter and early spring, and the public does not, and has no reason to complain, because they have at these times to use the street sidewalk.

Something should be done to Central Park, as well as to the library pillars. The park presents itself as a more important object of civic solicitude than an insignificant batter in the brick work at the top of the library building pillars. A woman devoting her whole soul, before a mirror, to the cant of her hat, while her house burning unnoticed and neglected, is not an unjust similitude of the action of the city authorities in barking loudly over a slight defect in the Library pillars, which nobody, or very few, notices, and complacently ignoring the indifference and neglect of a public park, which is thrust into the eyes of the public ten thousand times a week.

The Principles And Objects Of Associated Charities

In view of the local effort to amalgamate the various charitable movements and organizations in Peterborough into an association, the following copy of the constitution of the Toronto organization will be read with interest and instruction:

(1) The "Associated Charities of Toronto" is a federation of the charitable societies and institutions of the city.

(2) It is organized in the interests of no one institution or charity, and has no power over the organizations which constitute its membership beyond that of suggestion and sympathy. Therefore, no institution or charity voting to co-operate with it shall be liable to be interfered with in respect to its own unity, independence or method of work, or be committed to any principle or method of any other society or to any act or utterance of this organization beyond compliance with the terms of this Constitution.

(3) The organization shall not give relief from its own funds except for emergency or special cases pending investigation, or from funds specially donated and placed at the disposal of the above Charity, but may hold and apply any property or money received by it for general relief or specified purposes. It may assist from its own funds, in the form of temporary loans or advances, all suitable cases for which adequate assistance cannot be obtained from other sources, and to reduce and prevent vagrancy by making employment the basis of relief.

(4) (a.) To bring into harmonious co-operation the public and private charities, institutions, agencies, benevolent societies, churches and charitably disposed citizens of the City of Toronto, thus preventing overlapping indiscriminate giving, fraud, needless waste and the consequent growth of pauperism.

(b.) To secure prompt, thorough and sympathetic investigation of all applicants for relief, to keep records of the same, and to furnish the information thus obtained, as it may be required, to such as have legitimate interest therein.

(c.) To obtain through the proper charitable agencies, charitably disposed citizens, employers or relatives of those requiring assistance, adequate relief for needy cases.

(d.) To promote the general welfare of the poor by educational and sanitary reforms; inculcate habits of thrift and self-dependency and encourage the establishment and maintenance of industrial institutions, agencies or bureaus to these ends.

(e.) To educate the citizens in the principles of scientific charity by advocating through investigation, adequate supervision and registration of all cases.

(f.) To obtain knowledge of the benevolent resources of the community, and to supply information to the philanthropic public by means of addresses, circulars, reports and press articles.

(g.) To ascertain the causes of poverty and the best methods by which these causes can be removed or remedied.

(5). The following shall be considered members of the organization:

(a.) Patrons elected by the Board of Management.

(b.) All members of institutions, church societies or organizations doing charitable work that have joined this federation by their own vote, with the approval of the Executive Committee of the Associated Charities.

(c.) Such persons as may be elected by this Association.

(d.) Ex-officio, the Mayor, one other member of the Board of Control, the City Relief Officer of the City of Toronto, and the Inspector of Charities and Correction of the Province of Ontario.

(6). (a.) The officers shall be—an Honorary President, a President, two or more Vice-Presidents and a Treasurer, who with the patrons, ex-officio members and one representative from each of the federated institutions, church societies and organizations doing charitable work, shall constitute a Board of Management, these only having a right to vote at the annual quarterly and all special meetings.

(b.) The officers of this Board of Management shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting and shall hold office for one year or until their successors are elected.

(c.) The Board of Management shall elect from their number an Executive Committee, which shall consist of the officers mentioned in section "A," and five members of the Board of Management, who shall be elected at the first meeting of the Board of Management following the annual meeting.

(d.) The Board of Management shall appoint a Secretary and such other officials as they shall deem necessary for the proper conduct of the work of the organization. They shall fix the remuneration and define the duties and functions of such officials as may be appointed.

(e.) Should any vacancy occur through resignation or death of any officer or member of the Executive Committee, the said Committee shall have power to fill such vacancy during the year.

(7) (a.) The annual meeting of the organization shall be held on the last Tuesday in November of each year. If, for any reason, it is impracticable to hold a meeting on that day, the Executive Committee may fix another date.

(b.) Meetings of the Board of Management shall be held quarterly, when a full report shall be made by the Executive Committee upon all matters connected with the organization which have been dealt with since the last meeting of the Board of Management.

(c.) The Executive Committee shall meet monthly or at such times as shall be set by its members.

(d.) Special meetings of the Board of Management or the Executive Committee may be called at any time by the President, or in the absence of the President, by one of the Vice-Presidents, or on the requisition in writing of two members of the Executive Committee, or five members of the Board of Management, three days' notice of such meeting to be given to all members.

(e.) Ten members of the Board of Management, and three members of the Executive Committee, shall form a quorum.

(f.) The Board of Management or Executive Committee shall have power to call special meetings of the organization at any time, to which may be invited all citizens interested in charitable work.

(g.) Standing committees and special committees may be appointed by the Board of Management or Executive Committee at any time, and these committees shall report and act in accordance with the instructions given from time to time by the Executive Committee.

(h.) The President and Secretary shall be ex-officio members of all committees.

ECZEMA NOT A SKIN DISEASE

Eczema is a disease of the skin and not of the blood. For this reason internal medicines have never been a success in curing Eczema. Whatever the cause local application is necessary to heal the sores and restore the skin to a healthful, natural condition. For this reason Dr. Chase's Ointment has a world wide reputation as being without a rival as a cure for Eczema.

IS SUCCESSFUL

Newly Organized Inventors' Manufacturing Company is Flourishing.

Mr. Allan McCarthy, formerly of Peterborough, and Mr. S. B. Duffield, both connected with the Inventors Patent Mfg. Company, of Toronto, have been in the city on business. Mr. McCarthy in speaking to the Examiner about the new enterprise, states that it has been meeting with phenomenal success. The objects of the Inventors Patent Mfg. Co. are to encourage invention and promote the interests of inventors and patentees, etc., to acquire and take over the business of other companies to act as general financial agents, etc. Their office is 207 Manning Chambers, Toronto and their factory at 12 Alice street, in the same city.

PLENTY OF TRUANTS

High County Constable Cochrane, who is also the truant officer, states that there are plenty of truants these days. He has been kept busy chasing them up. Ap parently these beautiful September days are too much of a temptation for the school boys, and they would sooner hie away to some field and play than take to the books of learning.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracey, (Copyrighted)

"Circumstances have thrown me into the company of Lieutenant Stanhope. We had a kindred inspiration. He, I understand, is in effect, if not in actual recorded fact, the accepted suitor of your adopted daughter, known as Miss Enid Trevillion. I, although an older man, can share his feelings, because I am engaged to be married to Mrs. Vansittart, a lady whom you have, by God's help, rescued. Hence, Mr. Stanhope and I have almost lived together, ashore and afloat, during these troubled days. Naturally, he spoke of the girl he loves and told me something of her history. He described the brooch found on her clothing, and a Mr. Jones, retired from the lighthouse service, who was present when you saved the child from speedy death, informs me that her linen was marked 'E.T.'

"These facts, combined with the date and Mr. Jones' description of the damaged boat, lead me to believe that the girl is my own daughter, Edith Traill, whom you have mercifully preserved to gladden the eyes of a father who mourned her death, and the death of her mother, for nineteen years.

"I can say no more at present. I am not making inferences not justified in other ways. Nor am I setting up a father's claim to rob you of the affections of a beautiful and accomplished daughter. I will be content, more than content, if she can give to me a tithe of the love she owes to you, for, indeed, in Mr. Stanhope, and in all others who know you, you have eloquent witnesses.

"Yours most sincerely,

"CYRUS J. TRAILL."

"P. S.—Let me add, as an afterthought, that only my nephew and you have received this information. The agonized suspense which the ladies must have endured on the rock is a trial more than sufficient to tax their powers. If, as I expect, Mr. Stanhope meets you first, he will be guided wholly by your advice as to whether or not the matter shall be made known to your Enid—to my Edith—before she lands."

Brand dropped the letter and placed his hands over his face. He yielded for an instant to the stupor of the intelligence.

Pyne, as Constance had done, came near to him and said, with an odd despondency in his voice:

"Say, you feel bad about this. Guess you'll hate our family in future."

"Why should I hate any one who brings rank and fortune to one of my little girls?"

"Well," went on Pyne, anxiously, "she'll be Mrs. Stanhope, anyhow, before she's much older."

"That appears to be settled. All things have worked out for the best. Most certainly your excellent uncle and I shall not fall out about Enid. If it comes to that, we must share her as a daughter."

Pyne brightened considerably as he learnt how Brand had taken the blow.

"Oh, bully!" he cried. "That's a clear way out. Do you know, I was beginning to feel scared. I didn't count a little bit on my respected uncle setting up a title to Enid!"

CHAPTER XVI.

STEPHEN BRAND EXPLAINS

They were interrupted. Elsie, with her golden hair and big blue eyes, pink cheeks and parted lips, appeared on the stairs. All that was visible was her head. She looked like one of Murillo's angels.

"Please, can Mamie 'n' me see the man?" she asked, a trifle awed. She did not expect to encounter a stern-faced official in uniform.

"What man, dearie?" he said, and instantly the child gained confidence with that prompt abandonment to a favourable first impression which marks the exceeding wisdom of children and dogs.

She directed an encouraging gotto voce down the stairs:

"Come right' long, Mamie."

Then she answered, clasping the hand Pyne extended to her, but eyeing Brand the while:

"The man who brought the milk."

She wondered why they laughed, but the lighthouse keeper caught her up in his arms.

"He has gone away, sweetheart," he said, "but when he comes in the morning I shall send for you and you will see him. You are the little girl who was injured, eh? Are you getting better?"

Elsie, having seen Mamie safely extracted from the stairway, became voluble.

"My elbow is stiff, but it doesn't hurt. I was feelin' pretty bad 'fore the milk came, but Mamie 'n' me had a lovely lot, an' some beautiful jelly. Fine, wasn't it, Mmmie?"

"I think I'd like being here if there was more room" said the child. "An' why isn't there any washin'? Mamie 'n' me is always bein' washed 'cept when we're here.

"Surely you have not kept your face as clean as it is now ever since you left the ship?"

"Oh, no," put in Mamie. "We've just been rubbed with a hanky.'

"And sent out to pay a call?"

"Not 'zactly," said truthful Mamie. "Mr. Pyne told us to wait near the door—"

"That's an old story now," intervened Pyne quickly. "Climb up on my shoulder and have a look at the sea. Perhaps there may be a ship, too."

"What did Mr. Pyne tell you?" whispered Brand, pretending to make a secret of it with Elsie.

"There didn't seem to be 'nuff to eat," she explained, seriously, "so Mr. Pyne kep' a bit of biscuit in his pocket, an' Mamie 'n' me had a chews every time we saw him."

"H'm," murmured the man, glancing up at his young friend as he walked around the trimming-stage with the delighted Mamie. "I suppose he asked you not to tell anybody?"

"We wasn't to tell Miss Constance or Miss Enid. An' they tole us we wasn't to tell him about the sweet stuff they put in our tea. That is all. Funny, isn't it?"

Brand knew that these little ones were motherless. His eyes dimmed somewhat. Like all self-contained men, he detested any exhibition of sentiment.

"I say," he cried huskily to Pyne, "you must escort your friends back to their quarters. No more idling, please."

"An' you will really send for us tomorrow to see the milkman?" said Elsie. Notwithstanding his sudden gruffness, she was not afraid of him. She looked longingly at the great lamp and the twinkling diamonds of the dioptric lens.

"Yes, I will not forget. Good-bye, now, dearie."

The visit of the children had given him a timely reminder. As these two were now so had his own loved ones been in years that might not be recalled.

The nest would soon be empty, the young birds flown. He realized that he would not be many days ashore before the young American to whom he had taken such a liking would come to him and put forward a more enduring claim to Constance than Mr. Traill made with regard to Enid. Well, he must resign himself to these things, though no man ever lost two daughters under stranger conditions.

When Pyne returned, Brand was ready for him. The struggle was sharp, but it had ended.

"I would like you to read your uncle's letter," he said. "I am clear in my own mind as to the right course to adopt. If Mr. Traill wishes to win Enid's affections he will not take her by surprise. Indeed, he himself recognizes this element in the situation. You will not rush away from Penzance at once, I take it?"

"No, sir," said Pyne, with a delightful certainty of negation that caused a smile to brighten his hearer's face.

"I may not get clear of the rock for several days. There is much to place in order here. When the relief comes, I must help the men to make things ship-shape. Meanwhile, Stanhope—or Constance, whom you can take into your confidence, will smooth the way—"

"No, sir," interrupted Pyne, even more emphatically. "When you come to know my uncle you will find that he plays the game all the time. If Enid is to be given a new parent the old one will make the gift. And that's a fact."

Brand waived the point.

"The girls have plenty to endure here without having this surprise sprung on them," he said. "I will write to Mr. Traill, and leave events ashore in his hands."

So, for a night and the better part of a day, the pillar locked in its recesses some new doubts and cogitations. As between the two men a stronger bond of sympathy was created. Pyne, in those restless hours, was admirably tactful. He talked a great deal of his uncle. Soon, not only Brand, but the two girls, seemed to be well acquainted with a man they had never met.

With the morning tide the anarchy of the waves ceased. The children were brought to the lantern to witness a more majestic sight than the arrival of the "milkman". With the dawn the sun appeared, and the sea seemed to sink into long-deferred slumber under his potency.

The flood tide of the afternoon brought the unfailing tug, towing the Penzance life-boat. The crane was swung out and Jack Stanhope, as was his right, was first to be hoisted to the entrance and to exchange a hearty hand grip with Brand.

Behind the lighthouse keeper were ranged many faces, but not that which the sailor sought.

"Where is Enid?" he asked, after the first words of congratulations were spoken. "Have you told her?"

"No. Here is Mr. Pyne. He will take you to the girls and tell you what we have decided."

The two young men looked at each other with frank friendliness.

"When we have a minute to spare you must take me to the gallery and explain just how you worked that trick," said Stanhope. "Brand's semaphore was to the point, but it omitted details."

"That is where I have the pull of you," responded Pyne with equal cordiality. "I don't require any telling about your work yesterday."

"Oh, people make such a fuss. What is there remarkable in guiding a boat through a rough sea?"

"I may be wrong, but it looks a head harder than swarming up a pole."

In such wise did young Britain and young America pooh-pooh the idea that they had done aught heroic.

Indeed, their brief talk dealt next with Enid, and Lieutenant Stanhope, R.N., did not think he was outraging conventionality when he found Enid in the kitchen, and took her in his arms and kissed her.

Constance and Pyne discovered that the tug as seen through the window was a very interesting object.

"You don't feel at all lonesome?" he murmured to her.

"Not in the least."

"It must do a fellow a heap of good to meet his best girl under such circumstances."

"Mr. Stanhope and my sister have been the greatest of friends for years."

"Is it possible to catch up? The last few days on the rock ought to figure high in averages."

SLEEP WAS IMPOSSIBLE

ALMOST DRIVEN TO DESPAIR UNTIL CURED WITH USE OF

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

No symptom of nervous prostration is more to be dreaded than the inability to sleep. Man can exist for considerable time without food, but without sleep, and the restoration which it brings, he soon becomes a mental and physical wreck.

When you cannot sleep and rest look to the nervous system and remember that lasting cure can only be obtained from such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which naturally and gradually restores the exhausted nerves to health and vigour.

Mr. Wm. Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes: "My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and we had two of the best doctors we could get, but neither of them did her any good. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was almost giving up in despair when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box my wife used we noticed an improvement and after using six boxes she is completely cured and as well as she ever was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine for I believe my wife owes her life to its use."

Every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to the formation of so much rich, red blood and is therefore certain to do you good.

Citizen Toyed Too Long With the Cup That Cheers and Likewise Inebriates

Several cases were up in the police court at this morning's session. The first case was that of a well-known citizen. He pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk in a public place, and was fined $5.75. He was unable to pay the fine in court and as it had to be paid forthwith, he was forced to take the alternative and was conducted down to a cell.

The next case was that of a man named Michael Ryan. He was charged with vagrancy. It was stated that for the past few weeks he has been hanging around the streets and sleeping in cars in the railway yards, having no visible means of support or no home. Last night he was found drunk on the street and landed in the cell at the police station. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of vagrancy and was remanded for a week until further evidence can be brought against him.

ANIMALS DESERTED

Summer Residents Leave Pets on the Islands To Die

PORTLAND, MAINE, SEPT. 28.—Now that the summer season is over, the Animal Refuge in this city is beginning its Fall work of rescuing the household pets deserted on the islands. Men in motor boats are sent among the islands of the bay and coast to search for animals abandoned by summer residents when they closed their cottages. The number collected is very large.

Persons who know these islands only in summer can hardly realize what they become in winter. They are then ice-coated ledges, swept by sleet storms. The native animals are under ground, sleeping the winter away, but the creatures left there by summer visitors are wholly shelterless, for the mouth to every hole or burrow is covered deep under the snow. Nature intended that only hibernating animals should spend the winter here, as the food supply is practically at the zero point.

Naturally, the cat is the household pet deserted in largest numbers. Unfortunately, too, of all animals left on the islands it is least fitted to cope with the conditions. The cat in the snow is awkward, slow of foot and insecure. Its natural resources of food are gone. Starvation faces it. Now and then a hardy cat survives the winter, but one with a family dependent on her has only the slightest chance. Many tragic little family histories are discovered by those who search the islands.

WAITED FOR END

Pentecostals Finally Give Up and Leave Ark in Springfield, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, SEPT. 27.—After awaiting the end of the world for twelve long weeks in the home of M. M. Goodell at 144 Buckingham Street, which is commonly known as the "Ark," the dozen or so of Pentecostals, including the Goodell family, have departed to attend the convention of Pentecostals at Duxbury, apparently in the belief that they will be given sufficient time to indulge in the meetings and return to their sanctuary before the world reaches its termination.

The first signs of their intended departure occurred some days ago, when the chosen few went to the worldly task of house cleaning. Carpets were vigorously beaten in the yard and the dust from the sweeping in the interior of the "Ark" was construed by the worldly living nearby that the saintly ones were about to go to other parts.

Just when the Duxbury convention will end is not known, as it is said the followers of the faith adjourn their gatherings only at the bidding of the Lord, but some of the neighbors, who boast that they have succeeded in gaining the confidence of the local sect, assert that the Goodell home will never be again used as an "ark."

THISTLES AND DANDRUFF.

An Interesting Parallel and a Valuable Deduction Therefrom.

Cutting down thistles no more relieves the land of thistles than does scouring the scalp cure dandruff. In each case permanent relief can only come from eradicating permanently the cause. A germ that plows up the scalp in searching for the hair root where it saps the vitality, causes dandruff, falling hair, and baldness. If you kill that germ, you'll have no dandruff but a luxuriant suit of hair. Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation in the world that cures dandruff and falling hair by killing the germ. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

For sale by McDermid and Jury, druggists; also Payne's drug store. $1 bottles guaranteed.

SMALL BLAZE

At Bradshaw's Grocery, Caused by Electric Wiring

The fire brigade made a quick run to Bradshaw's grocery store, corner of Park and Downie streets, last night about 7.53. The call was sent in from Box 35. There was no damage done except what may have been caused by the smoke. The electric wiring was the cause of the trouble. It was not found necessary to turn on the water.

UNTIL CHRISTMAS

Pittsburg Chief of Police Says Straw Hats Must Be Protected

PITTSBURG, SEPT. 28.—There were more than a score of prisoners in the police stations this morning charged with disorderly conduct, their offences consisting in breaking straw hats of other persons yesterday. The magistrate thought the privilege supposed to go with "straw hat day" had been grossly abused, and gave salty fines and sentences to all.

Chief of Police McQuaid to-day advised persons who had been mistreated last night that they had recourse to law. Said McQuaid: "Knocking a man's hat off in the street is disorderly conduct, plain and simple. I don't care whether it be done September 15 or December 15. Any man who had his straw hat torn from his head has full authority and should sue larceny of the hat.

"I purpose to see that a law-abiding Pittsburger can wear his straw hat until Christmas, if he wants to, the same as they do in Europe."

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Go MAKE thy garden as fair as thou canst,
Thou workest never alone,
For perchance he whose plot is next to thine
Shall see, and mend his own."

Every day when I go to town, I pass a tiny house between which and the street, is a plot of ground about eight by ten feet—maybe less.

In that plot there have blossomed during the past season, crocuses, lilies of the valley, nasturtiums, pansies, poppies, golden glow and baby sunflower. Two feet of earth where the sun comes so seldom that nothing else would flourish, produce the penetrating sweetness of heliotrope.

On either side of the tiny house are larger houses set somewhat back from the street and having respectably large garden plots.

In neither of these plots is there anything like the variety or the profusion of flowers that makes that little eight-by-ten—or maybe less—plot of ground a source of pleasure, not only to its owner, but to every casual beholder.

I suppose you just about know what I'm going to say next.

However, I'm going to say it just the same.

The two middle-sized houses with their carelessly cultivated areas of garden opportunity, and the tiny house with its charming little garden, wrested from an eight-by-ten—maybe less—patch of ground that most people wouldn't have thought worth planting at all are a parable of people to me.

The big houses stand for the folks who, though they have plenty of opportunities and abilities, and could make most wonderful gardens of their lives, seem to lack the ambition or the desire to cultivate more than a few feet out of the big plot that is theirs.

And the little house stands for the men and women who out of lesser ability and opportunity, by intensive and patient and persistent cultivation of every foot of their eight-by-ten—or maybe less—patch of ground create life gardens that are a pleasure, not only to themselves, but to all who live near them, and even to every casual passerby.

Which class do you belong to?

Are you cultivating every foot of ground, every ability, every opportunity, every pleasant characteristic that you own?

Or, are you allowing half of your ground, half of your opportunities, and abilities ,and possibilities, to lie fallow?

Which?

"THE MAN BEHIND THE HAT"

AN ESSAY WRITTEN BY

"THE WOMAN UNDER THE HAT"

From the time of Adam down to the present, man has been laying blame on woman, and seems as incapable as ever of understanding her. His latest grievance against her is because she chooses to wear a huge hat.

The woman under the large hat has been assailed from the pulpit and through the press. She has been accused of such things as "barricading the way to heaven by hats," "Not being in the spirit," and "Woman will follow the fashions to the warm source from which they emanate." What effect have these accusations upon her; simply this: She pursues the even tenor of her way and the hats she once wore which were compared with "wash-basins" and "peach baskets" are now replaced by others, which are compared with "beer kegs" and "hay mows."

Man's latest objection to the hat is that he cannot see the parson's face in church. Surely the parson must feel flattered. If man had ever worn one of those hats and the necessary hair to hold it in place, he surely could find a more weighty argument against it.

Why are we not treated to a lecture by our health inspector on the importance of keeping "rats," "pads" and "curls" free from germs, also the danger that lies in over heating the head. But no, his grievance is that he cannot see the parson's face.

Think of the expense of those hats! Men toil early and late in badly ventilated offices at the risk of losing their health and then allow their money to be spent on such perishable dry goods. Still he would not complain if he could see the "parson's face."

Such an array of head-gear as can be seen at a Women's Missionary meeting. It would do justice to a "dog feast" or Indian pow-wow. Yet the most skeptical would not doubt that women are "in the spirit" when he hears the learned discussion that takes place over the ignorant and benighted state of the poor heathen. He would surely be impressed by the earnest desire to send the Christian religion to them which is sure to bring intelligence and refinement to all who accept it.

In the blasts of oratory over the hat we hear a faint mention of the "sensible woman." Perhaps if she were often referred to by men, more women would follow her example. I conclude that I am a sensible woman, or at least, "fairly sensible," from the fact that my husband trusts the health and guidance of our family to my care. But in the choice of a hat I fear the milliner would declare I have no sense at all.

The huge hat is said to be an invention of the "evil one." Who knows but it is an inspiration from a better source sent to teach us a lesson. Look over a church congregation and observe the hideous effect of colours and shapes. This is the work of humanity. Go out into the woods and fields and see the harmony of the most gorgeous display of nature and you feel soothed and at peace with the whole world. This is the work of the Creator.

When the feeling of profanity comes over a man in church, how does he know that it is not the effect of the impure air he breathes instead of the hats.

Judging by the small attendance of men at church we would think they should feel grateful to women for providing them with a good excuse of staying away. Since this is not the case the only remedy seems to be to let them occupy the front pews or have the pastor suspended from the ceiling.

Women are on perfectly safe ground, even if they worship the huge hats—any person will agree that the hats are not made in the likeness of anything in heaven above or on the earth beneath, or in the waters under the earth.

GREAT Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN TORONTO

Two Thousand Delegates Are Expected at the Big Gathering to Take Place Oct. 28-31.

CANADA'S SHARE IN IT

One of the great conventions to be held in Canada during 1910, will be the Thirty-Seventh International Convention of the Young's Men's Christian Associations of North America, which wil gather in Toronto from October 28 to 31, 1910.

Every Canadian city possessing a Y.M.C.A. or looking forward to having one will not only be interested in the Convention, but will in all probability send large delegations to it.

Over two thousand delegates are expected from every part of the Dominion, every State of the United States, and many from foreign lands. It will thus be a remarkable and representative gathering of men closely connected with an institution that has been called one of the great religio-civic organizations of the century. It is expected that fifty visitors from the British Isles will be among the number, while several of the European countries will send representatives. In addition, all the great countries of the Orient will have delegates present, through their Y.M.C.A. secretaries or otherwise.

The last convention of the Y.M.C.A. of America, held in Canada was away back in 1876. Wonderful has been the growth of the Association since that time, until to-day there are nearly one million members in 6,000 Associations in fifty countries, of five continents.

The meetings will be held in Massey Hall, and the themes to be discussed will be of practical moment to the higher life of the nation. The programme will, moreover, exemplify the widespread nature of the Association's activities as they touch the young manhood of the land, in city, town and country, in the shop and school, and home; as they relate themselves to the soldier, sailor or emigrant; to the industrial worker, the lumberman and miner, the railway navvy, all sorts and conditions of men come within the purview of this man-making institution.

The Convention, therefore, bids fair to be a highly important one, and its conclusion will be followed with deep interest.

OVER TWO THOUSAND PEOPLE TOOK IN THE LAKEFIELD FAIR YESTERDAY

Annual Event Was a Great Success —Splendid Weather Conditions Brought Many People From the Surrounding Country—A Large Number of Entries.

GOOD HORSE RACES

LAKEFIELD, SEPT. 29.—The term, an unqualified success, can well be supplied to the annual Fall Fair held at Lakefield yesterday. Over two thousand people were in attendance and in the opinion of the directors, the exhibition this year exceeds anything previously held. The weather conditions were most favorable to a successful fair and this coupled with the enterprise of the president, Mr. T. Braden, and his able assistants tended to make the exhibition rank among the highest in competition with places of the same size. Although the weather was very threatening in the morning of yesterday and although on the opening day the rain fell in torrents, the sun came out yesterday at noon and the clouds cleared away, making the day an ideal one and all that could be desired by the most sanguine supporter. With the appearance of the sun came also the people, and from the village and all the surrounding district came hundreds of people. Many attended from the city, all making one of the largest crowds that ever assembled on the grounds.

In point of entries the showing this year was away ahead of last year. Among the cattle shown were some of the finest in the surrounding townships, and in the main building no better specimens of fruit, grain or vegetables would one care to see. The display of ladies' work is also deserving of the highest praise, and many were the words of admiration spoken by visitors as they went to and fro through the building inspecting the various exhibits. The grounds of the Lakefield Agricultural Society are well situated, and in addition to having a splendid main building, have a fine grand stand. The race track, too, is a good one. Of course the most attractive feature of the fair yesterday was the speeding in the ring. The horse races, each one, had a good field, and the various heats were keenly contested, and were followed with unabated interest by the immense crowd. The Free-for-all race was undoubtedly the best one of the day, although in the green race there were five heats, Mr. George Fitzgerald's horse winning out. Mr. H. C. Winch, of Peterborough, proved to be an excellent starter, and succeeded in getting the horses away to a good start in every instance. Two other events that created a great deal of amusement were the novelty and potato races, in both of which there was a large number of entries. The Citizens' Band of Lakefield was in attendance and rendered an excellent programme of popular music throughout the afternoon.

The Horse Races.

The green race was the first to be started. There were five entries in this and some close heats were run off. The first two were won by "Topsy Hal," R. Elmhirst's horse, but in the third one an accident was encountered, resulting in him losing the race. The next three heats were won by Mr. George Fitzgerald's "Nellie Direct." The summary of the event is as follows:

|---|---|
| Nellie Direct (owned by G. Fitzgerald) | 2 2 1 1 1 |
| Billy Barlow (owned by R. Hull) | 3 3 2 2 2 |
| Mac., (owned by Geo. Rose-borough) | 4 4 3 3 3 |
| Topsy Hal (owned by D. Elmhirst | 1 1 5 4 4 |
| Nellie Keswick (owned by B. White) | 5 5 4 0 0 |

The Free-for-all.

The summary in the Free-for-all is as follows:

|---|---|
| Harry Direct (owned by Dr. Johnston) | 1 1 1 |
| Quen's Baron (owned by Dr. Johnston) | 2 2 2 |
| May Sphinx (owned by Dr. Pulkinghorn) | 3 3 3 |

Named Race.

The result of the named race is as follows:

|---|---|
| May Sphinx (owned by Dr. Pulkinghorn) | 1 1 1 |
| Molly O., (owned by W. Northey) | 3 2 2 |
| Darkey (owned by Gordon Nicholls) | 2 3 3 |
| Nellie B (owned by J. J. Bickell) | 4 4 4 |

In the Pony class Mr. Arthur Johnston's little pony carried off the first honours and Rev. Mr. Mackenzie of the Grove School, Lakefield, got the second prize. In the Novelty race, Mr. Reg. Hendren, of Lakefield, got first prize, Marcus Dean, of Selwyn, got second, and Wilbert Roseborough, third.

SUMMER RESORTS

Are Responsible For Divorce Evil, Says Chicago Divine.

CHICAGO, ILL., SEPT. 28.—"If the true life story of the 16,388 Chicagoans divorced in the last ten years were written it would be found that the first station which led towards divorce courts was frequently a romantic flirtation at amusement parks of fashionable summer resorts."

This was one of the introductory comments made this evening by the Rev. Percival H. Barker in a sermon on "The Pace That Kills," at the First Congregational Church, Maywood.

"Flirting is a potent cause of that coarseness and bestial vulgarity which is doing so much at present to impair the beauty and diminish the power of American home life, degrading marriage to the low level of a convenience and to the still lower level of sensuality.

"Flirtations foster the social evil," he continued.

ALL YOUR STOMACH TROUBLES VANISH

No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Pape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fulness or heavy feeling in the stomach. Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

SALINA, KAN., SEPT. 27.—A mail order bride and bridegroom is the latest development in society circles in Hoxie, Kan. Miss Effie Newland, one of the wealthy young women of Hoxie, was married to a Mr Lopez, a sailor of Key West, Fla., who is said to be wealthy. Lopez plighted his troth by mail more than a year ago. # TWO-YEAR-OLD BOY FALLS FOUR STORIES AND IS UNHURT

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 28.—Two year-old Paul Cronin is considered by his mother too little to play with boys in front of his home at No 331 East Thirty-ninth Street, but until yesterday she saw no objection to letting him amuse himself on the fire escape at the rear of the Cronin flat on the fourth floor. He was playing by himself there yesterday afternoon when he tumbled through the opening in the fire escape.

He struck the balcony at the third floor, bounced away from it, shot down against clotheslines, caromed off these and struck the flagging of the yard.

His mother had looked toward the fire escape just in time to see the little fellow disappear. Neighbours who beheld him falling ran with her to the yard.

WOMAN OUTWITS AND TH[illegible] SLAYS A [illegible]GE BEAR

Examiner Special.

NORWAY, ME., SEPT. 24.—The bravest woman in Stoneham, near Norway, is Mrs. Weston Adams, who has lain low the biggest bear seen hereabout for many years.

Alone, blueberrying on Spreckland Mountain, Mrs. Adams, a frail but courageous woman of thirty years, ran across Bruin in a startling manner. She had nearly filled her pail with berries when she heard an angry growl and looking up saw a huge black bear standing on a ledge less than twenty feet away.

Mrs. Adams stood her ground. She knew that to run would be a signal for the bear to attack. The beast growled ferociously and Mrs. Adams tried to drive it away by shaking her pail of berries at it.

Fearing that the bear would attack her [illegible] but the brave little woman did [illegible] quick thinking. # Splendid Programme For To-morrow's Band Concert

The popular concert to be given by the 57th Regimental Band in the armouries to-morrow night promises to be the premier musical offering of the season and will undoubtedly attract a very large crowd. The concert will be featured by the appearance of Miss Lavina Halliban, Peterborough's well known soprano, and will be in the nature of a farewell to her as she is leaving in a few days for New York. Miss Halliban will be heard in two numbers and her selections will be eagerly looked forward to.

The band will in addition, be assisted by Miss Kel[illegible] Leary, reader and the Ark Quar[illegible] In the programme published [illegible] selection has been omitted, a [illegible] number, introducing the tubul[illegible]. ## REV. MR. HENDERSON DEALS WITH GENERAL CONFERENCE

Tells His Congregation of the Features of the Great Gathering of Methodists on the Coast---The Famous "Foot-Note" and the Attitude of the Conference Towards It.

A unique and interesting event took place in the Charlotte Street Methodist church last evening.

In response to an invitation from the pastor, Rev. G. W. Henderson, a large number of the members and adherents assembled in the church at 8 o'clock.

The meeting opened with devotional exercises. The choir furnished some excellent music and the pastor made some brief references to the recent General Conference held in Victoria, the beautiful, beginning August 14th and continuing for nearly three weeks.

The General Conference meets quadrennially. It is composed of an equal number of ministers and laymen elected by the several annual conferences. There were 322 members of which nearly all represented the different sections of the church throughout the Dominion, Newfoundland, the Bermudas, Japan and China.

The speaker referred to the marvellous growth of Methodism during the last four years. There are now twelve annual conferences and provision was made for five additional ones in China and four in the North West.

The spirit of God was manifestly present throughout the session. The missionary work was enthusiastic. As never before we were impressed with the church's privilege and responsibility.

The Committees on the Itinerancy recommended an extension of the pastoral term to eight years at the Conference next year, to the term remains four years. Considerable discussion on the question of the Jackson controversy," the resolutions were adopted almost unanimously. The first provides for a court of trial for any professor in our colleges, charged with heterodoxy, and the second reaffirms the faith of the church in the fundamental doctrines of the proper deity of Christ, His infallibility as a teacher, and the inspiration and authority of the Holy Scriptures.

The question of the proposed union of the Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian churches received most careful thought. By a vote of 220 to 35 the Conference declared in favour of the acceptance of the basis formulated by the Joint Unin Committee, and pending final action by the General Conference, ordered that all the documents be handed down to the Annual Conferences, District Meetings, Quarterly Boards, and to the membership of the church for their information, discussion, and endorsation, or otherwise.

Referring to the attitude of the General Conference on the question of amusements, the pastor read the original "foot note," and the one that has ben sustained therefor. He explained the points in which they differ. He brought out the fact that the "foot note" was not in Wesley's Rules but was introduced by the General Conference of 1886, as an interpretation of them.

He declared that the General Conference, as a body, stood solidly on the ground that the modern dance, with its indiscriminate mingling of the sexes, the card table, with its trend towards the gambling den, the modern theatre, not the exceptional play, not what the theatre might become, but the theatre, as we know it are inimical to the spiritual life, and that our people should be constantly and earnestly admonished to refrain from these, with all other amusements and practices that do not tend to Godliness.

But that the Conference was strong in the conviction that you cannot make a Christian, that you cannot develop a strong character by means of rules, prohibitions and restrictions.

The church does believe in a Christ that can fully satisfy the trusting heart, and in the Divine Spirit, Who can and does guide the honest seeker into all the truth. Hence the action of the Conference.

After the address, which occupied nearly an hour, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson were "at home" to the congregation in the school room, and a most pleasant and profitable hour was spent. An informal musical programme, light refreshments, the singing of "Blest Be the Tie," etc., and the Doxology, followed by the Apostolic Benediction, the meeting was brought to a close at 10.30.

THE "BIG NOISE" IN THE WRONG PLACE

Dear Sir,—In no way is the provincialism and "buyweed"-iness of some persons in this city displayed so prominently as in their attitude to high class Opera House productions. We sometimes hear "cat calls" from "the gods," but it comes as a surprise to hear them from some occupants of the orcestra chairs. If lack of appreciation of the play or opera suggests dissent, good taste and good manners also suggest that others who are enjoying the performance should not be subjected to annoyance. I state these things as a general principle, knowing neither the names nor identity of anybody that practises what I have pointed out. Whoever is hit, will, I hope, refrain from similar forms of public offence in future.

Yours truly,
BALFITE.

HOME STEADING IN ALBERTA ANOTHER INTERESTING LETTER

Former Peterborough Resident Describes the Method of Locating One's Property—How Surveying is Done.

ABOUT THE SHACKS

Following is another in the series of articles on Alberta, written for the Examiner by a former well known resident of Peterborough:

One of the first things a homesteader does on arriving at his destination is to locate his own land. This is not very easy to a man not acquainted with the survey system in vogue here although it is a first-class system and very simple. The province is laid out or surveyed in ranges of 6 miles wide, numbered from east to west, on the 4th meridian, 1 to 28. And laid out into townships 6 miles square from the south or American line, numbered one to twenty, so that a settler knowing his location, would look for his range number and then his township. The townships are again laid out into 36 sections, each 1 mile square, with road allowances every mile east and west and every two miles north and south. These 36 sections are marked by survy stakes and monuments at the north-east corner of every section. They consist of four pits, three feet square and eighteen inches deep and about five feet apart. In the centre of these four pits an iron stake about 3-4 inches square and about thirty inches long is driven down, about 12 inches being left above ground, and on the south-west face of this stake is marked with a chisel in Roman numerals the section, township and range number. I have given this detail because there are so many people who do not quite understand the system. I heard of a case in point recently, of where a man bought some land and hired a man to drive him out to see it, and on the strength of the land the man showed him, closed the deal, but when he went to locate on his land found it was two days' drive farther north than the land he had been shown, but to return to the setter. When he has located on his half section, or whatever he has, he puts up his tent, and then if he has his lumber with him, he looks over the land to find the best place to put up his shack. But a man wants to be very careful how he puts up his tent, so as to make it secure against the very strong winds we have in this country, as they will blow almost anything down. I know a man who left a water pail outside his tent and a month after he found it a mile away to the north-east. A tent is the usual thing for the settler for the first few weeks, then the shack. These are of various shapes and sizes, according to the pocket or ambition of the builder. Some build it eight by ten feet, some ten by twelve feet, some larger and some smaller. Some have a sloping or shed roof, some with a car shaped roof, and a few with a pitch roof. There is usually a small cellar dug out for the coal and sometimes for the feed grain for the horses.

There is also the sod shack, which is very popular. I was in one today with sod walls three feet thick, board floor, with 6 inch boards on the roof and sod laid on top of that. It seemed very snug. From where I am writing this I can see several and some of them are quite a size. I can see one in particular, owned by a man from Dakota, who is well fixed, but has not taken time to put up a better place as yet. It is about thirty feet by twelve or fourteen He has a family of six, besides himself and wife.

In the next letter this question of shacks will be continued. T.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

(Toronto Saturday Night.)

Mr. Weedon Grossmith, the celebrated English comedian and his entire London company, direct from a two years' run in Mr. R. C. Carton's delightful comedy, "Mr. Preedy and the Countess," at the Criterion theatre, will arrive in Montreal on Thursday ,Sept. 29th on the S. S. Tunisian. Mr. Grossmith will open his season at the Princess Theatre, Montreal, on October 3rd, with the same splendid cast and production that he had in London. He will afterwards make a brief tour of the principal Canadian cities before opening in New York city at a Broadway theatre. The Messrs. Shubert and D. V. Arthur are his American managers. Miss Charlotte Granville, is Mr. Grossmith's leading woman. The London production intact will be imported for the American and Canadian towns.

Mr. Grossmith will appear here on Oct. 13th, 1910.

THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.

The Aborn English Grand Opera Company paid their first visit to Peterborough last night and established themselves upon a firm footing with the music lovers of the city by the splendid interpretation they gave of Balfe's masterpiece, "The Bohemian Girl," in which they delighted a very large audience at the Grand. The company proved well balanced and most capable; the principals sang their roles in masterly fashion and they were supported by a strong singing chorus and a splendid orchestra, whose playing was a feature. The scenic investure and costuming were on a level with the superiority of the other departments of the offering and altogether the presentation was most pleasing. "The Bohemian Girl" is too well known to theatre-goers to require any comment either as to its action or to the musical nature of its music. The familiar music, however, took on a newer, fresher charm because of the excellent manner in which it was presented by the Aborn Company.

The men of the cast probably carried off the chief laurels, the individual honours falling to Mr. William Schuster, who sang the role of Count Arnheim and who displayed a magnificent deep baritone of beautiful tone and volume, and whose singing of the solo, "With hearts bowed down," was probably the gem of the production. George Shields, as Devilshoof, chief of the gypsies, had a powerful, well-controlled bass, which he used to advantage. Miss Paula Braendle, in the title role, presented a pleasing soprano, and sang clearly and with expression, her number, "I dreamt I dwelt in marble walls," winning her much applause. Miss Hattie Belle Ladd made the role of the gypsy queen a realistic portrayal and her singing met with favour. Paul Bleydem, the tenor of the company, seemed to be suffering from a bad cold, and his work was handicapped on that account, but was pleasing nevertheless.

WEDDING BELLS

MOFFATT—LANCASTER.

HAVELOCK, SEPT. 29. — A very pretty wedding took place in St. John's Anglican church this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, when Miss Eva Roberta Lancaster, of town, became the wife of Mr. Jack Moffatt, of Belleville, Rev C. H. Holdsworth officiating. At the hour appointed the groom and his best man, Mr. Earl Lancaster, took their places to await the arrival of the bride and bridesmaid. As the wedding march, played by Miss Lillian Webb pealed forth, the bridesmaid, Miss Verna Coe, of Sudbury, entered the church, daintily attired in a mauve satin coteil dress, white beaver hat with mauve trimming, and carrying white 'mums. Then followed the dainty little bride, leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Percival Lancaster, and charmingly gowned in an ivory duchess messaline satin robe, trimmed with bands of silver cloth and embroidered in seed pearls and wearing the customary veil caught up with orange blossoms and carrying a white kid prayer book, with ribbon markers.

At the conclusion of the ceremony, and while the register was being signed, the choir sang, "The voice that breathed o'er Eden," after which the bridal party and guests drove to the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, on Oak street, where the happy couple received the congratulations standing under an arch of smilax, interwoven with flowers. The bride and groom then led the way to the dining room, where an elaborate dinner awaited them. The tables were very prettily decorated with white ribbons extending from the chandelier and masses of cut flowers in abundance, with 'mums, asters and smilax, making a charming picture. The bride's health was proposed by Rev. Mr. Holdsworth and responded to by the groom. Mr. T. P. Lancaster proposed the bridesmaid, which was responded to by the groomsman. The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful mink muff, to the bridesmaid a signet ring, and to the groomsman cuff links.

Among the beautiful gifts received was a piano from the bride's brother, Mr. T. P. Lancaster, a quartered oak dining room set from the groom's parents, and a hall mirror from St. John's congregation. The young couple left on the 3.40 train amid a shower of confetti for their home in Belleville, the bride travelling in a navy blue suit, with brown beaver hat and mink furs. The out-of-town guests were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald and son, Master Gordon, Mrs. Armsby and little daughter, Miss Margaret, Mrs. John Moffatt, Misses Gertrude and Velma Moffatt, and Mrs. A. Boyce, of Toronto; Miss K. Mahoney, Rochester, N.Y.

WOOD—EDMONDSON.

The marriage took place on Wednesday, September 28th, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mr. Henry Edmondson 566 Weller street, of their daughter Mary Ethel, to Hy Wood, son of Mr. James Wood, Rubidge street, Rev. T. Couch, pastor of George street Methodist church, officiating, and only immediate friends and relatives were present. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a dress of blue silk and carried a shower bouquet. The bride and groom were unattended. The wedding march was played by Miss Grace Edmondson, sister of the bride. After the ceremony, the guests sat down to a sumptuous supper prepared by the bride's mother. The house was tastefully decorated with chrysanthemums and asters and the ceremony took place under an arch of autumn leaves, beautifully illuminated. The gifts were numerous and included substantial cheques from the bride's brother and the parents of the groom. The young couple were received at their home by the guests, who greeted them with a house warming. Mr. and Mrs. Wood will reside at 310 Margaret avenue.

AN APPEAL TO REASON

TWELVE months ago, after prolonged investigation and experiment, we pinned our faith to the Knight motor as the greatest improvement of the decade in automobile construction.

Many believed us, bought cars and are to-day congratulating themselves on their judgment.

There were croakers then, perhaps there are to-day, but we hear less of them.

THEY SAID—The engine was an experiment forgetting that it had stood the greatest engine test on record before the Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and Ireland.

THEY SAID—It will not stand up on Canadian roads; although they knew a challenge of $1,250 was open to anyone who wished to measure his motor against the Knight for reliability.

THEY SAID—That it would not be taken up in Europe, and that the Daimler Company were about to discard it. We knew at the time and anyone can verify it now that the leading concerns in six of the countries of Europe have adopted the Knight motor.

THEY SAID—No one in the United States would take it up. We know that over twenty of the largest concerns in the United States have from time to time applied for consideration in the American rights. And we know to-day that leading United States firms will announce 1912 models with Knight motors in another twelve months, despite the fact that the agents of some of these concerns profess great skepticism about the Knight motor to-day.

We seldom refer to or bother about the suggestions of interested opponents. We want, however, to repeat our conviction formed a year ago, and confirmed by twelve months' of experience in the factory, on the road, and in the users' hands.

That the Knight motor far surpasses the old valve type, and that it is only a question of time before it entirely supersedes it in all high grade cars. Get a car that will be up-to-date the longest.

Our 1911 model is out, but our 1910 users can smile, for their car is up-to-date still. 1911 is only a refinement in details on 1910.

The same motor. The same body lines, with high front doors, now pretty universally copied.

Is not this the type of car to buy?

INDIGNATION RUNS HIGH

Citizens of Barrie Are Heated Over the Treatment of Girl by Her Lover Which Resulted In Murder of Her Baby — She Gives Way After Four Hours In Witness Box and Has to Be Carried Out.

Barrie, Sept. 29.—Little new evidence was brought forward yesterday in the trial of Thomas McNulty for having advised Mary Dolan to strangle her child, the same witnesses who gave evidence in regard to the girl repeating their stories. Mary Dolan, who is being used as the chief witness against McNulty, was in the box four hours, while being put through a rigid cross-examination. Counsel for the defence endeavored to show that McNulty was not the only one who had had intimated relations with the girl. Instances of other men being cited but this the girl denied.

Her story was practically a repetition of what she told Tuesday, with some details added.

McNulty wrote telling her to take the child to Hawkstone, and to strangle it between there and Orillia, he enclosed $5 with the letter.

When she informed McNulty of what she had done, he advised her not to worry, but warned her not to say anything to anybody, adding: "They cannot do anything to me, as I never saw the child." After the baby's body was found in July, McNulty urged her not to give him away.

The witness said she would not have killed the child if she had not been told to do so by McNulty.

At an allusion to the killing, she became incoherent, and the proceedings were frequently checked by her cries.

Lucy Lamb, who visited at the Dolans, swore she slept with Mary one night in the same bed, and woke up towards morning in time to see McNulty leaving by the window.

The girl's father swore he did not know she was a mother until she was arrested. He vehemently declared he did not turn her away from home.

After four hours, the witness broke down completely and screamed aloud: "Oh my darling baby; my darling baby, McNulty killed him; he did, he did." She had to be carried from the court house, which rang with her cries.

An effort was made to resume her examination at 5 o'clock, but the distressing scene of the morning was repeated. Her jaws were rigid and had to be forced to administer an opiate.

Feeling against McNulty and sympathy for the girl runs high.

McNulty's indifference to the girl's condition has continued. A number of letters from him, containing the terms of endearment: "Dear sweetheart," "Dear Mary," were read, in which he continually begs her to meet him secretly, and continue their illicit interests.

In reference to the girl's condition Justice Britton said no one was responsible, it growing out of the necessary steps of those in charge of the case.

The trial will be continued to-day

Canada's Morals Good.

London, Sept. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the church congress at Cambridge Canon E. A. Welch, formerly of Toronto, in the course of a discussion on Christian unity, speaking from a Canadian viewpoint, testified to the amount of co-operation for moral and social reform among the religious denominations of Canada in consequence of which the general morality, at least in some respects, was better than in England. He referred to the snobbishness which some times characterized relations between the church and nonconformity here. It rarely happened in the case of Canadian Methodist or Baptist that a substantial increase bank balance gave birth to convictions of the truly apostolic character of the Anglican Church. Intemperance in Canada was an almost negligible factor. There was no divorce court and the Lord's Day was observed far better than in England.

No Coal, But Iron Ore.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—Prof. M. B. Baker, professor of geology in Queen's University, has returned to the city after spending the summer in a geological examination of the alleged "coal finds" of New Ontario for the Bureau of Mines, Toronto. They are non-existent. Prof. Baker reports, however, that about twenty miles farther down the Metagami, at Grand Rapids, a promising area of limonite iron ore is found. This red or brown iron ore is of excellent quality, being free from sulphur and with only the smallest traces of phosphorous.

Want Electric Franchise.

Kingston, Sept. 29.—The Seymour Power & Electric Co. wants a franchise to sell power in Kingston. It proposes that the city shall supply all customers using less than 25 horsepower, the company to supply those who take over that amount. There will be opposition to giving any franchise at all to the company. The members of the City Council favor receiving the power from the company at the city's switchboard, the city to do all the distributing.

One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam Buk's favour is Mr. C. E. Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S. Mr. Sanford is a Justice of the Peace for the County, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also Deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected. Here is his opinion of Zam-Buk. He says:—

"I never used anything that gave me such satisfaction as Zam-Buk. I had a patch of Eczema on my ankle which had been there for over 20 years. Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had applied various ointments and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike everything else I had tried, proved highly satisfactory and cured the ailment.

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother men, and if the publication of my opinion of the healing value of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the relief of suffering caused by Piles or Skin Diseases I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures ulcers, abscesses, blood-poison, ring-worm, festering or running sores, bad leg, varicose ulcers, salt rheum, prairie itch, cuts, burns, bruises, baby's sores, etc. Purely herbal, 50c box, druggists and stores. Refuse imitations.

Bloodstained Lap-Robe Is Found, But the Man Who Had the Buggy Tells a Story Which Exonerates Him—Physicians Will Have a Sensation to Spring When the Inquest Opens Again.

Goderich, Sept. 29.—There is a lack of sensation in the Anderson murder mystery to-day. The police are working quietly on some clue of their own, and expect to have someone to answer to the startling evidence that is promised by the physicians who made the postmortem examination when the inquest meets again next week. They are agreed that the girl was first stunned by a blow on the forehead, while the stains on the clothing show the throat was cut before the garments were removed. The clothing was cut away with a knife. The doctors are reasonably certain that the murderer did not accomplish the evident purpose of his crime.

What seemed yesterday to be preliminary to sensational developments, is declared by Crown Attorney Seagar to have flattened out. This was the discovery of a blood-stained robe in a buggy, which had been hired at a livery at 10.30 from the night of the crime, and was not returned until 3 a.m. A barrister in the town, who returned the rig, while unable to explain the presence of the bloodstains, told a straight story of what had happened. He and a showman, manager of a troupe of actors at the fair, had met a couple of young women, who had suggested a drive about town. At midnight the actor and one of the women had gotten out at the hotel, while the lawyer and his companion went for another drive.

The crown attorney telephoned to Seaforth yesterday about a tramp who had been seen around there with a scratched-up face. Nothing resulted from that investigation, however.

It is learned that the missing Frank Smith has been in Seaforth and worked there till Saturday night when he left. There is nothing doing in that direction, said Mr. Seagar. There was a report that the body of Smith had been found in the lake at Port Albert, but this is wrong.

The girl's body was taken from the undertaking rooms to her home in Saltford last night. The funeral took place to Dungannon this morning.

BLOW TO OLD GUARD

Appointment of Henry L. Stimson as Candidate of the New York Republican Convention for Governor of the State Is Another Victory for Teddy — Democrats Oppose Him and "New Nationalism."

Saratoga, N.Y., Sept. 29.—The Republican State Convention last evening nominated Henry L. Stimson, New York, as its candidate for governor. The nomination of Mr. Stimson was one more victory for Theodore Roosevelt, who personally led the fight for the nomination of his candidate.

The rest of the ticket folows: For lieutenant-governor, Edw. Shoenock, Syracuse; secretary of state, Samuel S. Koonig, New York (re-nominated), state comptroller, James Thompson, Valley Falls, Rensselaer County; state treasurer, Thomas F. Fennell, Elmira; state engineer, Frank M. Williams, Oneida (re-nominated); attorney-general, Edw. R. O'Malley, Buffalo (re-nominated); associate judge of the Court of Appeals, Irving G. Vann, Syracuse (re-nominated).

The vote for governor: Henry L. Stimson, 684; Wm. S. Bennet, 242; Thos. B. Dunn, 38; James B. McEwan, 28; Scattering, 23.

The slate, as made up yesterday morning by Col. Roosevelt, Senator Root and their advisers, went through without a hitch. Except for governor and comptroller, there were contests. Representative Bennet, who conducted the only open campaign for the nomination for governor, kept up the fight to the end, and his persistency and his strength with the New York delegation threatened yesterday afternoon to break up the slate.

It is understood that Roosevelt will stump the state for the ticket. He is reported to have said yesterday that he would.

At the close of the convention, Jas. W. Wadsworth, jr., speaker of the assembly, announced his withdrawal from the Legislature.

Democrats After Roosevelt.

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 29.—E. W. Shepard of New York, James S. Havens of Rochester, and Herman Ridder of New York are the three names being mentioned most to-day as candidates for first place on the ticket which the Democratic state convention will name Friday. And their relative chances appear to rank in the order in which their names are mentioned.

The most important planks in the platform will have to do with direct nominations, tariff reform and a denunciation of Rooseveltism, or what is called the "New Nationalism". It looks as if the Democratic platform builders were determined to go the Republicans one better so far as the direct nomination question is concerned. Forecasts of the platform declare that the direct nominations' clause will be about as radical as language can make it.

Hebrews Choose Protestant Schools.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—The difficulties of educating the Protestant population here was shown strongly yesterday, when twenty children were refused admittance to Rosemount school because they did not know their alphabet. The accommodation is so small, according to the number of children, that this rule has to be put into force to have some basis of selection. The reason of the congestion is largely that the Hebrew population of 30,000, very many of whom are children, have the right to say which schools they will pay their taxes to, and the whole colony voted Protestant.

Safe Roads for Inebriates.

Montreal, Sept. 29.—Whether a man is drunk or sober, the municipality is bound to provide him with a safe road, is in effect the decision of the Court of Appeal yesterday in the case of Dame Ostigney of St. Hubert, who sued the municipality for $15,000 damages for the death of her husband. The council pleaded that the man was drunk. The woman lost in the lower court, but the Court of Appeal reversed the judgment on the above grounds.

Sure, It's Dead Easy.

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 29.—Sitting as a board of strategy on the problems of a trans-Atlantic journey by airship, Walter Wellman, Melvin Vanimanna and Murray Simon went over the chances for disaster. They concluded the chances of escaping alive in case of an accident were more than 90 in 100, and the chances of successfully getting across more than 4 in 5. They decided on a 20-knot gait.

Hunters May Be Lost.

Kenora, Sept. 28.—Charles Jones, foreman in the Canadian Pacific, and a young companion named McCannon left last Tuesday in the latter's launch for a hunting trip down the lake. They were due back on Friday, but not returning, a search party was sent out. The party found their launch, containing Jones' coat, and provisions almost untouched, at Rich Bay, 25 miles down the lake.

Two Drowned In Gull Lake.

Port Arthur, Sept. 29.—W. M. Coleman of Renfrew, and Albert Dixon of Saskatoon are reported as having been drowned in Gull Lake, 150 miles north of Sioux Lookout, on the G.T.P., on Saturday. The sole survivor of the drowning was Nick Ellwood, who clung eight hours to the upturned canoe, and then walked sixty miles without food to report the fatality to Sioux Lookout. The three men were going to Rat Lake to trap for the winter.

Joint Service to Jamaica.

London, Sept. 29.—The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. and the Quebec Steamship Co. have mutually agreed to a joint service between New York and Bermuda.

Librarian of Militia Dead.

Ottawa, Sept. 29.—After a brief illness the death occurred yesterday at his residence, 55 Metcalfe street, of Henry D. J. Lane, librarian of the Militia Department. The deceased, who was 61 years of age, was a son of the late C. H. Lane, deputy registrar of Canada.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

ALL THE NEWS ALL THE TIME

Can Cy Young Last To Pitch In 1000 Games?

Can Cy Young pitch 1,000 games in his big league career? This is the question, since Cy has won his five hundredth game and bids fair to continue winning as frequently as do the majority of good pitchers in the American League.

In his twenty-two years Cy has pitched 800 games, or about that number. To pitch in 1,000, to use round gures, Cy must work in 200 more contests. Give him an average of fifty games a season, which the old boy can stand well, and it will take four years to finish the mark.

When one says four years' more work for Cy, hammers come out, and the chorus comes out, "He can't do it," and every time they yell Cy can't come back he blooms into fame, shutting out a team without a hit or run.

Once he did not allow the Athletics to toe the canvas which holds the sand at first base. With his habits, Cy may be able to squeeze through 200 more games. He has lived a clean life and his big, husky frame is quite right to stand the strain.

By the time Young has pitched 1,000 games, if he can average twenty-five games a season, he will have performed a feat unequalled in the annals of baseball.

Pair Of Athletics Are On The Hospital List

CHICAGO, SEPT 27.—Crippled by a wrenched back that refuses to respond to the ordinary treatment, Ira Thomas, the big backstop of the Athletics, is now in Philadelphia, undergoing an examination and treatment by a specialist to locate the source of his trouble and to cure the ailment as speedily as possible.

Ira's injury was sustained in the last trip around the eastern circuit at Boston. Ira had doubled and in sliding back to second, in an unnecessary manner made a quick turn and wrenched his back. He endeavored to continue, but found that he was unable to do so. In order to speedily effect a recovery he left the team and went home. Ira believed that the ordinary treatment under such conditions would suffice to heal the injury.

However, since that time he has grown worse if anything and his condition became so alarming that Connie Mack ordered him to return, and he treated by the specialist.

Ira feels gloomy over the outlook, but hopes that he will be able to round into shape and catch the remaining home games of the schedule.

His absence from the world's series would leave a yawning gap in the Mack strength, as Ira knows each batter on the Cubs' team, having caught against them for Detroit. However, no such untoward circumstance as his absence from the line-up is expected to transpire. Thomas is expected to be in his usual condition when the team returned from its Western trip.

Eddie Collins is also on the crippled squad, although he refuses to seek the bench. Eddie has a bad knee which he received in Detroit, and the maimed member is constantly swelling, though Doc Chadwick is massaging the wounded joint as often as possible. If the first game against the Tigers when Willetts was pitching the big Bengal twirler hit Edward in the leg with one of his fast shoots.

Collins limped to first, but he speedily forgot all about the assault until now when the leg began paining to such an extent that Edward is forced to walk about with a perceptible limp. However, the game little sacker says that he will not quit the game for a minute. Instead he means to remain through the schedule and hopes that Trainer Chadwick will get him around again all right.

These two are the only members of the regular squad who have suffered injuries, although several of the lads are toting around loads of hay fever and several full-grown colds.

LAJOIE CAN HIT ANY VARIETY OF TWIRLING

The absence of left-handed hitters from the Nap line-up has not added to the chances for Lajoie to cop the big auto. Larry can murder the southpaw pitching, but the Naps have had so few offside batters this season that other managers have not cared to risk their sidewheelers against them.

There is no telling just how much difference more left-handed pitching would have made in the big fellow's mark for the season, but that race is liable to be so close that even a point will decide it.

Managers don't figure the Naps very strong, but just the same they never miss any chances to use their best twirlers against them. Every time Addie Joss was in the game the Naps had to bat against some pitcher ranked among the best in the league, and Cy Young never gets any very soft proposition. Russell Ford, who is good enough to win a big majority of his games, has worked his share against the Naps, and every time they play the Athletics Connie Mack saw fit to use Bender. Coombs and Morgan as often as he could. Johnson, Mullin, Willett, Donovan, Walsh, and the other leaders have also done a lot of work against the Cleveland club.

On account of getting his drives safe on an average of more than once in every three times up, Larry has been called upon to make the hit-and-run play more than any other player on the club. With this play on he has to hit a lot of bad balls, for he was compelled to swing with the runner on the go, and could not wait for the ball that suited him.

Bulk Not Required To Be A Good Batter

The average layman—the fan who is unacquainted with the inner and outer conditions of the game, but loves to see it played—is of the natural opinion that a champion batsman, a slugger of vast and virile vigor, must be a Hercules, the personification of muscled masculinity. A heavy hitter, the man who drives out the triples and the home runs, so it would logically seem, should be of gigantic sinew, able to perform feats of weight lifting and hammer throwing, and a thin or weakly player should not even be considered as a batting responsibility.

And yet, strange as it may seem, some of the burliest, huskiest, most muscular ball-tossers in the land are puerile marks at bat, utterly unable to get their names in the elite circle of the 300 hitters, while others, slim and almost girlish in their lack of corded sinews, are tremendous sluggers men who stand near the top of the batting records year after year. Wherefore such freakish defiance of the laws, governing natural strength and the survival of the fittest? How can such things be?

A keen-sighted eye and a quick command of movement are superior to all the elephantine muscles that were ever assembled on a burly frame. Of course, when a Hercules, such, for example, as Hans Wagner, is also blessed with an accurate eye and a lightning sweep of arm, that man becomes a batting king, but there is nothing more ridiculous in baseball than to see a player with the strength of Sandow making huge swipes athwart the breeze while the ball goes whizzing by, and finally walking ponderously back to the bench without even rolling out a grounder.

Wagner is a big man and massively strong. So were Anson, Connor, Brouthers and many others of the noble slugging tribe. In these cases, however, the sheer strength of these giants was guided and controlled by keen eyes and natural judgment as to the location of the ball.

In contrast to these bulky men was Pete Browning, very tall, but with a skinny, bony frame not specially strong in muscle. Pete Browning could not have held his own against Anson in a wrestling match of forty seconds, but he was Uncle's worthy batting rival, year after year. The old gladiator could not only pick out the ball to swing on, and smash against it with unerring judgment, but could so neatly concentrate what power he had that the longest sort of drives went whirring off his bat just as Anson and the other giant whales could bring them.

Willie Keeler was a little bit of a man, and not a specially strong one, either. But this midget could chop them out, time after time, and, when he swung instead of bunting, could belt two-baggers as neatly as men fifty pounds his weight-superiors.

The only Cobb, idol of the Tiger fans, is not a big man. He is of good stature, but rather slender, with soft long muscles, not hard or corded ones. Cobb is far inferior, physically to Wagner or Lajoie but how Ty Cobb can drive that ball! The perfection of the eye, the accuracy of the swing, the concentration of the effort these qualities, united and harmoniously brought into play, make Cobb the champion batsman of the American League, and make him the master of the men who could mop him all over the floor in man-to-man encounter.

Great are muscles, and most pleasing things to have, but the frail man who wants to play baseball need not worry nor fear that his fragile frame will bar him from renown. For the eye is keener than the hand, and quickness of motion far surpasses bulky sinew. A queer game is baseball, and this, perhaps, is one of the oddest features of the game.

OPEN MEETING AT THE Y. M. C. A. TO-NIGHT

The prospects are that the Y. M. C. A. building will be taxed to its utmost capacity to-night, when the men of Peterborough will inspect the work.

There will be something doing right from the drop of the hat and there will not be a dull moment from start to finish. Yet, there will be no hard and fast programme. The men will move about at their own pleasure. There will be members everywhere to explain and show and to make the men feel at home.

There will be music, both in the gymnasium and in the front part of the building. It will be an opportunity for a host of men to spend a very pleasant and profitable evening.

Mr. Thompson has assured us that the gymnasium will contribute enough interesting programme to keep the men in that part of the building all evening. But it will pay the visitor to make inquiry about the other departments. The Educational work is worth looking into. Few men realize that it is possible for them to get enough education in the Y. M. C. A. in the evenings to fit them to pass their matriculation and to enter College. What a boon to the fellow who feels reticent about going to the Collegiate because he is too old to go among the small boys and girls. And every year makes it that much harder to study. Young man, get in right now. Then there is the fellow who is being held back in his work in the shop, because he can't draw a piece of work to scale. He sees the other men doing it, and they are the men who are going ahead of him. The Association lits in here again. A man will be in charge of that class who can give you just what you need because he is right up against it every day at his own work. The Secretary would like to hear from all the men who want to take up this work. The classes should be going now, and would be, if he knew the men who want to take up this class of work.

Mr. Gilchrist would like, too, to hear of any men who would like to take up the study of Electricity. There are a few men who want this subject, but it would not do to take it up unless there were six, at least. If you want this study let him know.

The campaign is still jogging along. The office was kept busy last night taking in new members. One of the campaigners passed the remark last night that the people are just now waking up to the fact that the Y. M. C. A. is running a campaign. Some of the new men are more enthusiastic than some of the older ones and are bringing them in couples.

Only two days left, but they can be the biggest days yet if good hard work is put on them.

Let there be a good crowd of men at the Y. M. C. A. to-night.

SPLENDID SINGER

Will be Heard in The Princess Theatre For The Balance of The Week.

The Princess Theatre has a special attraction for the balance of the week that will undoubtedly be appreciated. Miss Gertrude Ogden, an operatic soprano singer will be heard in a repertoire of high-class songs. She has a magnificent soprano voice and made a most favourable impression in Toronto from which city she comes to the Princess for a three-days' engagement. She will undoubtedly be greeted with crowded houses during her Peterborough appearance.

HORNED MEN

Have Been Discovered by California Scientists.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., SEPT 28.—The "horned men of Topango" have been discovered—that is, they are almost horned, and of a physiognomy so strange that the scientists who unearthed them are almost persuaded that the existence in the long ago of a hitherto undreamed of race of aborigines has been demonstrated.

Professor J. R. Pendleton of the geological department of Stanford University, with a party of Stanford students, has just returned from the mountains near Santa Monica, in southern California.

In the Topango canyon in the heart of a district long known to have been the home of Indian tribes now extinct, the excavators found one mound containing the bones of thirty-four aborigines.

From flint arrow heads imbedded in the skulls and from the crushed skull bones, that bore every evidence of having been beaten in by war clubs, Professor Pendleton says it is plain that the ancients died in battle.

But of more scientic interest is the amazing countenances conjured up by the skulls found by the scientists. The brow is almost totally lacking, rising from the line of the eyebrows only three-quarters of an inch, and the top of the head being almost flat. The nose projects horisontally, horn-like, and with no resemblance to the human nose.

Retiring Sale

Having become connected with a large manufacturing firm in Toronto, and as I am required to take charge the 1st of November, I am disposing of my whole stock of drygoods, millinery, boys' and men's clothing, etc., amounting to about $12,000, at the earliest possible date. From now on the price is no object, as every article on the premises, including fixtures, will have to be disposed of. The stock is well assorted with new fall goods, and if ever the citizens of Peterborough had a chance of saving money, it is JUST NOW at this sale. See bills for prices.

I have also a house and store to rent, and fixtures for sale; as well as two houses on Parnell street—best investment in the city. One house has a stable. If necessary easy terms of payment.

Itching Scalp Ceases After One Application

Wm. Madill Is Willing to Guarantee Parisian Sage Because He Knows It Gives Satisfaction to All who Use It.

Most druggists know that there is no hair preparation that gives so much satisfaction as Parisian Sage which is now on sale all over Canada.

The reasons are many.

A large, generous bottle for 50 cents.

The only hair tonic that is sure to kill the dandruff germs.

A rigid guarantee to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Keeps the scalp cool in summer and free from unpleasant odours.

Will make any woman's hair bewitchingly charming in one week.

Grows hair and makes it soft, brilliant and luxuriant.

And here's more proof:

"Some fourteen years ago I had typhoid fever. It caused my hair to nearly all fall out. I have since used and tried several hair tonics and renewers, but nothing ever made my hair grow until I tried a bottle of Parisian Sage. The use of Parisian Sage cooled and cleansed the scalp, removed all the dandruff, and left my hair silky and glossy in appearance, besides making the new hair grow in. Today I have an abundance of hair, hardly any gray hairs, and no dandruff.

Is it any wonder that I praise Parisian Sage?"—Mrs Ann E. Mosely, 1906 Bainbridge St., Manchester, Va., April 2, '09.

Leading druggists everywhere sell Parisian Sage. Wm. Madill sells it in Peterborough for 50 cents, on the money-back plan. The girl with the auburn hair is on every package. Mail orders filled by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian makers.

ON THE SIDE

The other day a customer asked me why we were always recommending Sword Neckwear. He wanted to know if we made more on it than other Neckwear.

On the contrary we pay more for Sword Neckwear than most of the other makes.

Naturally the majority of Men's Wear Houses try to see how cheaply they can buy their Neckwear, not caring whether the customer gets value so long as he makes a good profit on his sale.

We are paying a higher price now for Neckwear than ever before, yet we are satisfied to pay it as our customers, old and new have shown their appreciation of

Is Guilty Of Murder

Jurors Bring In the Same Rider to Verdict as In the Case of the Girl, But Judge Makes No Comment This Time—One of the Most Remarkable Cases In Ontario's History Will End To-day.

Barrie, Sept. 30.—Thomas McNulty of Orillia was yesterday found guilty of murdering the unnamed infant of Mary Dolan, which he had never seen. The jury was out three and a half hours. Mary Dolan was found guilty of the same crime on Tuesday. The sentences will in all likelihood be pronounced by Justice Britton at the resumption of the assises to-day.

It was one of the wildest emotional scenes that have ever been enacted in an Ontario court-room when the foreman pronounced the word "guilty!"

McNulty's wife, who had frequently interrupted the court with her crying, broke into ill-repressed shrieks.

Then, as the verdict was repeated, McNulty burst out crying, and his wife, leaning over the side of the dock, wrapped her arms around him. Thus they continued, moaning loudly, while the 12 jurors were polled, and their cries were supplemented by sobs from McNulty's sister-in-law and the whines of his dog, which somehow had pushed its way through the crowded aisles just as the foreman announced his finding.

As the constable tore the man from his wife's arms, she cried "My poor husband, and my poor little baby!" She had to be firmly escorted from the court-room. Outside, her screams could be heard, louder than before, while she poured forth a tirade of condemnation on the convicted girl.

"She was a bad, bad girl," she shrieked. "She went around the country ruining every home she could!"

Throughout the whole case Mrs. McNulty sat as close to the prisoners' dock as she could squeeze. Several times Crown Prosecutor Blackstock had to halt in his scathing arraignment of the prisoner because of her cries of protest, but when they tried to remove her, she stolidly refused to leave his side.

"No, he has not," she broke in when Mr. Blackstock informed the jurors that the man was not on trial for seduction, nor for wrecking the life of his wife. Again, when crown counsel was reading McNulty's ardent avowals of love in his letters to Miss Dolan, she hissed, "And to think I let the sneak stay in my house, and she was there all the time when I was having my baby!"

The case all through has been remarkable for its emotional scenes. The convicted Dolan girl had three frightful nervous spasms Wednesday, and every few minutes, while giving evidence yesterday, had to be restored by a physician. Constable Wright fainted in the witness-box on Tuesday.

The case will also go down in history as the first in Ontario at least, where the alleged father of an illegitimate child had been convicted of murder for counseling or procuring its death. Justice Britton charged the jury with the importance of this aspect. He also made reference to the "astounding prevalence of infantile murder."

A. E. Creswicke, K.C., for the defence, put in four or five young men witnesses in an endeavor to show that Miss Dolan had illicit relations with others besides the prisoner, to which Mr. Blackstock objected, and the judge ruled it out as evidence.

To Mr. Creswicke, Miss Dolan admitted she was infatuated with McNulty, and when asked why she didn't cease her relations with him, said he told her his wife wasn't going to live long, and he would marry her.

In a re-examination by Mr. Blackstock she told of McNulty having implored her not to give him away, when they were in the jail cells.

His final question to her was, "It is true that McNulty wrote you a letter telling you to strangle this child?"

"Yes," faltered the girl.

Mr. Creswicke asked the judge for a reserved case, as he intends to appeal. In the case of both Miss Dolan and McNulty the verdicts included recommendations to mercy.

In the former his lordship assured consideration, in the latter he made no comment.

Books Were Badly Muddled.

Woodstock, Sept. 30.—A. McNeil, ex-secretary-treasurer of the Embro School Board, charged with embezzlement, was yesterday afternoon committed for speedy trial in Woodstock. The auditors, Porter and Sloan, were called and questioned regarding the state of the books for 1908 and 1909, but said that these were in such a muddle that an expert would have to examine them to get the truth.

Chinese Consul Resigns.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—Announcement is made that Dr. Kung, Chinese consul to Canada, has tendered his resignation, and will leave at the end of next month for China. He has not been in good health for some time, and desires a change. His successor will be Mr. Wong, who has been consul at Nagasaki.

Raid On Brokers

This Is the Charge Brought Against B. H. Scheftels & Co., a Big Company of Curb Brokers—They Are Charged With Having Circulated Worthless Money to the Amount of Five Millions.

New York, Sept. 30.—Following one of the most sensational raids ever engineered by federal authorities in this city, directed yesterday against the firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., curb brokers in Broad street, a number of members of the company, including B. H. Scheftels, its president, were held in heavy bail by U. S. Commissioner Shields, for hearing on Oct. 5, on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

Last night search was being made by the police and by Government inspectors, for George Graham Rice, whose real name is said to be Simon Horzig, who is declared to be the real head of the concern.

Simultaneously with the raid here, warrants were served on the managers of the company's branch offices in Boston, Providence, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee. According to agents of the Department of Justice, the Scheftels' company had been engaged in promoting the sale of mining securities of doubtful value in all parts of the country. Estimates of the firm's dealings are placed as high as $5,000,000.

The seven arraigned here are: B. H. Scheftels, Charles F. Belser, secretary of the company; George T. Sullivan, Clarence McCormack, John Delaney, William T. Seagrave and Charles B. Stone. Warrants for 16 men had been issued, but the others, including Rice and Charles S. Persey, eluded the raiders. Scheftels, Seagraves, Stone and Delaney secured bail, but Belser, McCormack and Sullivan were committed to the Tombs, as the sureties were not forthcoming.

While the hearing was set for Oct. 6, it is expected that the federal grand jury will have taken action before that time.

The firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co. was organized about two years ago, and had conducted a large business, mainly through an extensive advertising propaganda. Mining securities were its chief offering to investors. A weekly newspaper was published, to reach clients, and a corps of 35 stenographers is said to have been required to attend to its correspondence. After the arrest yesterday two patrol wagonloads of papers, books and memoranda were seized by the inspectors for examination.

The raid was made while the curb market was in full swing, and attracted great attention. Thousands rushed to the scene, and police reserves had to be called out to clear a path for the patrol wagons.

Another Boxer Rising.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Advices have been received here from American officials in the Orient to the effect that a critical situation exists in China, and that an outbreak similar to the boxer rebellion of several years ago would not surprise the close observers of the recent trend of events.

Diplomatic officials in China have been instructed to maintain a close watch on internal conditions and to submit quick telegraphic reports as the occasion warrants.

The advices thus far received indicate that the unrest in China is so great that only a leader is needed to put the spark of life into an open rebellion.

The United States army and navy forces in the Philippines and in Asiatic waters, it was stated here yesterday, are prepared for any emergency. Four cruisers and six gunboats are available, and all of the vessels are within reach somewhere between China and the Philippines.

Roosevelt Home Again.

Oyster Bay, Sept. 30.—Theodore Roosevelt returned early last evening from Saratoga with the scalp of the Republican old guard of New York State added to his big collection of trophies. He has placed his services at the disposal of the Republican state committee, and hopes to make at least one speech in every county in the state. He will try to inject into the fight all the fire and vigor of his personality and make the campaign one of the liveliest which New York state has seen in many a year.

Brantford Growing Fast.

Brantford, Sept. 30.—The figures issued by the assessors yesterday morning show Brantford's population to be 21,304, an increase of more than 1,300 over last year. The increase in the total assessment is $956,000, but this includes about $200,000 in exemptions on new public buildings and churches. Taking in the suburbs adjacent to the city, which will come in in a short time, the population would reach 25,000.

Montreal to Welcome T. P.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—Preparations have been going on here for some time to fitly welcome T. P. O'Connor, who will speak at the Monument National on Thursday evening, Oct. 6. Mayor Guerin will preside, if his worship gets back in time from New York, where he will attend the consecration of St. Patrick's Cathedral, and the Irish envoy will be introduced by C. J. Doherty, M.P. for St. Anns.

Will Appeal Moving Picture Case.

Montreal, Sept. 30.—The moving picture proprietors will carry the Sundays opening case to the Supreme Court, the highest provincial court, having decided against them. In the meantime, they propose to operate their shows on Sunday.

Raid On Brokers

His Doctors Have Ordered Hon. Mr. Fielding to Take a Complete Rest, and This May Give a Setback to the Tariff Negotiations—Paralysis of the Left Side of the Face Has Caused Much Trouble.

Ottawa, Sept. 30.—As a result of the fact that the doctors have ordered Hon. Mr. Fielding to take a rest after his summer trip, there is a possibility that Parliament may not meet in November, as predicted.

Disturbing questions, which will involve statesmanship of the highest order, are to be dealt with. There is the tariff, also the naval question, the elevators, and the multitude of promises made by the Premier on his western tour. No work has been done by the Cabinet yet, in the way of preparation for next session.

Hon. W. S. Fielding arrived in the city yesterday. The Minister of Finance seemed to be in a cheerful mood, but it was very evident that the paralysis of the left side of the face, which attacked him a few days ago, has taken a good deal out of him. His step lacked the brisk buoyancy that has always been one of his characteristics. His left eye was protected by a guard, which covered also a portion of his cheek, but his face was drawn, and he looked years older than when he left here for England last June.

It is stated that Mr. Fielding's condition is not serious, "The doctors' reports are very reassuring," is the statement made to-day. It is added that Mr. Fielding will have to take a complete rest.

Just how successful the Minister of Finance will be in overcoming the restless energy of his nature, may be forcasted by his failure to obey doctors instructions already. In spite of his illness, he paid a visit to his office in the eastern block yesterday afternoon, and insisted upon looking into some matters of importance which have been awaiting his return. "He simply can't rest," was the remark of an official of the Department.

A despatch from Washington states that the U. S. Department of State, under the President's direction, has made preparations to act as soon as word is received from Ottawa indicating the intention of the Dominion Government concerning the proposed reciprocity negotiations.

It is understood in Ottawa that any move towards negotiations may be delayed until the Minister of Finance has had that rest which has been rendered necessary by his illness.

Fishing a Failure.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 30.—Owing to the almost complete failure of the shore fishing, it is feared that the privations of the Labrador fishermen will be particularly severe during the coming winter. The season's catch is believed to be the smallest in the annals of the organized fisheries. It was estimated yesterday that the total fish export from Labrador will not reach 50,000 quintals, while last year, which was itself an exceptionally poor one for fishermen, the exports amounted to 100,000 quintals.

Must Improve Service.

Chatham, Sept. 30.—Mr. Dixon of the Railway Commission was in the city yesterday in consultation with city and county officials in reference to the train service on the Pere Marquette, as a result of which that company will be compelled to arrange their schedule to provide better accommodation, and the C.P.R. also may be asked to install gates at all of their city crossings, with watchmen to guard over them.

May Be Frank Hobbs.

Toronto, Sept. 30.—The police have learned that the accident insurance slip found upon the body of the mangled body picked up beside the tracks near Eastern Avenue was issued at Ottawa to Frank George Hobbs, a C.P.R. dining-car waiter from Montreal.

"THE PILLAR OF LIGHT"

By Louis Tracy, (Copyrighted)

"Jack," cried Constance, finding this direct attack somewhat disconcerting, "did my father say that any arrangements were to be made for landing?"

"Yes, miss," interposed a sailor at the door. "The skipper's orders are 'Women an' children to muster on the lower deck.'"

Then began a joyous yet strangely pathetic procession, headed by Elsie and Mamie, who were carried downstairs by the newly arrived lighthouse men. The children cried and refused to be comforted until Pyne descended with them to the life-boat. The women followed, in terrible plight, notwithstanding the wraps sent them on the previous day. Each, as they passed Stephen Brand, bade him farewell and tearfully asked the Lord to bless him and his.

Among them came Mrs. Vansittart. Her features were veiled more closely than ever. Whilst she stood behind the others in the entrance, her glance was fixed immovably on Brand's face. No Sybilline prophetess could have striven more eagerly to wrest the secrets of his soul from his lineaments. Nevertheless, when he turned to her with his pleasant smile and parting words of comfort, she averted her eyes, uttered an incoherent phrase of thanks for his kindness, and seemed to be unduly terrified by the idea that she must be swung into the lifeboat by the crane.

She held out her hand. It was cold and trembling.

"Don't be afraid," he said gently, patting her on the shoulder as one might reassure a timid child. "Sit down and hold the rope. The basket cannot possibly be overturned."

Pyne, helping to unload the tremulous passengers beneath, noted the lady's attitude, and added a fresh memorandum to the stock he had already accumulated.

"Who is that?" asked Brand from the purser, who stood beside him.

"Mrs. Vansittart."

Brand experienced a momentary surprise.

"She seemed to avoid him, he thought, but the incident did not linger in his mind.

The life-boat, rising and falling on the strong and partly broken swell, required the most expert management if the weary people on the rock were to be taken off in safety.

When Constance and Enid, followed by Stanhope, reached the boat after giving Brand a farewell hug, there was no more room. The crew pulled off towards the waiting vessel, and here a specially prepared gang-way rendered the work of transhipment easy.

Mr. Traill was leaning over the bulwark as the life-boat ranged alongside. He singled out Pyne at once, and gave a cheery cry of recognition. At first he could not distinguish Mrs. Vansittart, and, indeed, it must be confessed that he was striving most earnestly to descry one face which had come back to him out of the distant years.

When his glance fell on Enid, his nephew, who was thinking how best to act under the circumstances, was assured that the father saw in the girl the living embodiment of her mother.

He thought it would be so. His own recollection of his aunt's portraits had already helped him to this conclusion and how much more startling must a flesh and blood creation be than the effort of an artist to place on canvas the fugitive expression which constitutes the greatest charm of a mobile countenance.

Enid, having heard so much about Mr. Pyne's uncle, was innocently curious to meet him. At first she was vaguely bewildered. The sunken eyes were fixed on hers with an intensity that gave her a momentary sense of embarrassment. Luckily the exigencies of the hour offered slight scope to emotion. All things were unreal, out of drawing with previous experiences of her well-ordered life. The irregular swaying of the boat and the tug seemed to typify the new phase.

Pyne swung himself to the steamer's deck before the gangway was made fast, thereby provoking a loud outcry from the deserted children.

Grasping his uncle's hand he said:

"Wait until you read Brand's letter. No one else knows."

So, Mr. Traill, with fine self-control, greeted Mrs. Vansittart affectionately, and handed her over to a stewardess, who took her to a cabin specially prepared for her. Her low-spoken words were not quite what he expected.

"Don't kiss me," she murmured, "and please don't look at me. In my present condition I cannot bear it."

Relatives of the shipwrecked passengers and crew, many of whom were waiting in Penzance, were not allowed on board. This arrangement was made by Mr. Traill after consulting a local committee organized to help the unfortunates who needed help so greatly. The unanimous opinion was expressed that a few lady members of the committee, supplied with an abundance of clothing, etc., would afford prompt relief to the sufferers, whilst the painful scenes which must follow the meeting of survivors with their friends would cause confusion and delay the vessel.

Pyne, watching all things, saw that Mrs. Vansittart did not meet his uncle with the eagerness of a woman restored to the arms of the man she was about to marry.

She was distraught, aloof in her manner, apparently interested only in his eager assurance that she would find an assortment of new garments in the cabin.

The millionaire himself was too flustered to draw nice distinctions between the few words she spoke and what he expected her to say. When she quitted him he walked towards the group of young people. They were laughingly exchanging news and banter as if all that had gone were the events of a lively picnic. At last, he met Enid.

Pyne introduced his uncle, and it was a trying experience for this man to stand face to face with his daughter. In each quick flash of her delighted eyes, in every tone of her sweet voice, in every winsome smile and graceful gesture, he caught and vivified long-dormant memories of his greatly loved wife of nineteen years ago.

Somehow he was glad Mrs. Vansittart had not lingered by his side. The discovery of Enid's identity involved considerations so complex and utterly unforseen that he needed time and anxious thought to arrange his plans for the future.

The animated bustle on deck prevented anything in the nature of sustained conversation. Luckily, Mr. Traill himself, whose open-handed generosity had made matters easy for the reception committee, was in constant demand.

Mrs. Sheppard had sent a portmanteau for Constance and Enid, so they, too, soon scurried below with the others.

The life-boat returned to the rock, where the four lighthouse men sent to relieve Brand were now helping the sailors to carry the injured men downstairs and assisting the sick to reach the entrance.

As soon as this second batch was transferred to the tug, the vessel started for Penzance; the Trinity tender would land the others.

There was a scene of intense enthusiasm when the steamer reached the dock. The vociferous cheering of the townspeople smothered the deep agony of some who waited there, knowing all too well they would search in vain for their loved ones among those whom death had spared.

The two girls modestly escaped at the earliest moment from the shed used as a reception-room. All the inhabitants knew them personally or by sight; they attracted such attention that they gladly relinquished to other hands any further charge of the shipwrecked people. So, after a few words of farewell for the hour, Stanhope piloted them to a waiting carriage and drove away with them.

Mrs. Vansittart did not emerge from her cabin until the deck was deserted. She found Mr. Traill looking for her. In a neat black dress and feather hat she was rehabilitated.

"Why didn't you show up earlier?" he asked in good-humoured surprise. "The breeze on deck was first-rate. It brought the colour into many a pale cheek. And the way in which the crowd let itself go was splendid. Look at those waiting thousands—quivering yet with excitement!"

"I am worn out," she said quietly; "take me to your hotel. You have engaged rooms there I suppose?

"Of course."

"When do you purpose leaving Penzance?"

"Well—er—that is part of the explanation I promised you."

"We can talk matters over in the hotel. Where is your nephew?"

For the first time he marked her air of restraint.

"Believe me, Etta," he said hurriedly, "that what I have to tell you will come as a great surprise, but it should be a very pleasant one."

"Anything that gratifies you will be welcomed by me," she said simply. "You have not said where Charlie is."

"Hiding in that shed. He refused Mr. Stanhope's offer of a rig-out on board. In his present disguise he passes as a stoker, and everybody wants to see the man who saved all of you."

"Have you a closed carriage here?"

"Yes."

"Let us go. Charlie can come with us."

Again he was conscious of a barrier between them, but he attributed her mood to the strain she had undergone.

In the shed they found Pyne; with him were the orphaned children. there was none to meet them. Kind offers were made to care for them until their relations should be forthcoming, but the man to whom they clung would not listen to any such proposal.

"I guess they're happy with me," he said. "I will see them through their present trouble."

Childlike, they had eyes and ears only for the prevalent excitement. At last Elsie asked him:

"Where's mamma? You said she was sick. But the men haven't carried her off the ship, an' she wasn't in the boat."

"Don't you worry, Elsie," he said. "I'm going to take you to a big house where you will find everything fixed just right."

His uncle and Mrs. Vansittart approached. The lady's face was no longer hidden.

"What are you going to do with those children?" she inquired.

"There's none here to claim them," he said. "I can't let them leave me in that haphazard way."

"Let me help you. It is a woman's privilege."

She stooped towards the tiny mites.

"You dear little babes," she said softly, "I can take mother's place for a time."

They knew her quite well of course, and she seemed to be so much kinder and nicer now in her smart clothes than she was in the crowded disorder of the bedroom.

Mamie looked at Elsie, and the self-reliant Elsie said valiantly:

"Mamie 'n' me 'll be glad, if Mr. Pyne comes, too."

Mr. Traill, who had never before seen tears in Mrs. Vansittart's eyes, found a ready excuse for her womanly sympathy.

"It seems to me," he said genially, "we are all of one mind. Come this way, Etta. And mind you stick close to us, Charlie, or the hall porter will throw you out if you attempt to enter the hotel in that costume."

He rattled on, cheerfully, telling them how clothiers and milliners and all the store-keepers in the town if they were needed, would wait on them at the hotel.

"In a couple of hours," he said, "you both can obtain sufficient things to render you presentable for a day or two. Don't forget we dine at eight. We ought to be a jolly party. I have asked Stanhope and his mother and those two girls to join us."

"Oh," cried Mrs. Vansittart, faintly, "you must excuse me. I—"

"Now, Etta, my dear, you will not desert us to-night. Why, it seemed to me to be the only way in which we could all come together at once. I am only too sorry that Brand cannot be present. Surely he might have been spared from further duty at the lighthouse after what he has endured."

"They offered to relieve him at once, but he declined," said Pyne.

He looked out of the window of the carriage in which they were driving to the hotel. Constance had told him of the dinner arrangement, but he wished to ascertain if the definite absence of the lighthouse-keeper would tend to reassure Mrs. Vansittart.

He was not mistaken. She did not reply at once. When she spoke it was with a sigh of relief.

"I will not be very entertaining, I fear, but the young people will have plenty to tell you."

"For goodness sake, Etta, don't class yourself among the old fogies," cried Mr. Traill. "Look at me, fifty-five and lively as a grasshopper."

"Please, is Mamie 'n' me 'vited, too?" whispered Elsie to Pyne.

"You two chicks will be curled up among the feathers at eight o'clock" he told her. "Don't you go and worry 'bout any dinner-parties. The sooner you go to sleep, the quicker you'll wake up in the morning, and then we're going to hunt—for what, do you think?"

"Candies," said Mamie.

"Toys," cried Elsie, going one better.

"We're just going to find two of the loveliest and frilliest and pinkiest cheeked dolls you ever saw. They'll have blue eyes as big as yours, Elsie, and their lips will be as red and round as yours, Mamie. They'll talk and say—and say all sorts of things when you pinch their little waists. So you two hurry up after you've had your supper, say your prayers and close your eyes, and when you open them you'll be able to yell for me to find that doll-store mighty sharp."

"Say, Charlie," cried his uncle, "I never heard you reel off a screw like that before. Now if I didn't know you were a confirmed young bachelor, I would begin to have suspicions. Anyhow, here's the hotel."

Two hours later, when uncle and nephew met in the private sitting-room, where busy waiters were making preparations for dinner, Traill drew the younger man to the privacy of a window recess.

"Charlie," he confided, "affairs are in a tangle. Do you realize that my marriage was fixed for to-day?"

"That's so," was the laconic answer.

"Of course the wedding was postponed by fate, and, to add to my perplexities, there is a new attitude on Mrs. Vansittart's part. It puzzles me. We have been friends for some years, as you know. It seemed to be a perfectly natural outcome of our mutual liking for each other that we should agree to pass our declining years together. She is a very beautiful and accomplished woman, but she makes no secret of her age, and the match was a suitable one in every respect."

"You can see as far through a stone wall as most people."

Pyne knew that his uncle's sharp eyes were regarding him steadily, but he continued to gaze into the street.

There was a moment's hesitation before Mr. Traill growled:

"You young dog, you have seen it, too. Mrs. Vansittart avoids me. Something has happened. She has changed her mind. Do you think she has heard about Edith?"

"Edith! Oh, of course—Enid must be christened afresh. No; that isn't it. It would not be fair to you to say that I think you are mistaken. But, from what I know of the lady, I feel sure she will meet you fairly when the time comes."

Miss Mary Miller attended Lakefield show last week.

Miss Annie McIntyre is visiting friends in Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Plunkett, Havelock, visited relatives in Otonabee last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Runnings of Detroit, Mich., are the guests of Mr. Running's sister, Mrs. Mark Plunkett.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society's annual thank-offering service will be held in the Presbyterian church Sunday, October 9th. Rev. Mr. Keith of Knox Church, Peterborough, will conduct the service, and there wil be a special collection in aid of the schemes of the Missionary Society.

Mr. J. Lowe of Marion, Ohio, who has spent the last week in Keene, left for his home Saturday. While here he was successful in landing eleven fine bunge.

Mrs. Wm. Campbell has returned home after spending a few days in Toronto the guest of her sister, Mrs. Harry Cruikshanks.

The concert committee of the Village Improvement Association are making arrangements for a concert in the town hall on the night of Keene Fair.

Mrs. Marshall Weir is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Comrie.

The Earnest Workers Mission Band will hold their annual thank-offering meeting in the Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon, October 4th. A musical programme will be rendered also an address on Missions will be given by Mrs. (Dr.) Purdy of Cobourg. After the programme refreshments will be served in the basement.

A very successful basket dance was held by the young people of Lang in the town hall there on Monday evening. Owing to the fact that the affair was only planned for a few days ahead, the attendance was somewhat smaller than might have been the case had it been better advertised, but all who attended had a good time. The fact that there were more young men there than ladies made the baskets, which were sold by auction, go at pretty high prices. The proceeds of the dance will be donated to the Lang Village Improvement fund.

A horse belonging to Mr. F. A. Eason, which he purchased a few days ago at Mr. Robert Allen's sale, in Douro, in its attempt to get back to its old home, got mired in the marsh Sunday morning, near Keene bridge, and if it had not been noticed shortly after it got into trouble, might have sunk to its death in the mud. Fortunately, a passerby saw it and gave the alarm, bringing a number of men at once to the scene. Only with a considerable amount of difficulty was the animal extricated and when it was taken out it was found to have cut one foot badly in its struggles.

A gang of men were at work last week on the fair grounds, cutting the grass, grading the race track and straightening things up in preparation for the fall fair, next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Misses Agnes and Jean Campbell left last week for Vancouver, where they will attend the Normal School. Mrs. Campbell accompanied them as far as Toronto.

Sunday, August 25, was Children's Day in the Presbyterian church, and the pastor, Rev. D. D. McDonald, preached a sermon specially to the children. The pupils of both the Methodist and Presbyterian Sabbath schools attended in a body and took up most of the centre aisle of the church.

The death occurred Wednesday morning, September 21st, at the advanced age of eighty three, of Mrs. Stewart, one of the old residents of the township. The deceased has been in ill health for some time, and has had several paralytic strokes lately, and the end was not unexpected. The funeral was held from the family residence, Friday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. W. Johnstone, pastor of the Methodist church, of which the deceased had been a faithful and consistent member, conducted the services at the home and grave. The deceased leaves a family of six, three sons, Alexander, of Otonabee; James, of Keene; and William, of Detroit, Mich., and three daughters—Mrs. Thomas Howson, Otonabee; Miss Eliza, at home; and Mrs. Johnstone of Toronto. Her husband predeceased her.

Mr. Leonard returned to Lakefield on Saturday after spending a few days in Toronto.

PUGILISTIC LEMONS

BALTIMORE, MD., SEPT. 27.—The pugilistic "lemon" market in Baltimore is above par to-day as the result of the fiasco last night between Al. Kaufman and Al Kubiak, the so-called "Michigan Lion." It was the punkiest six-round mill ever seen in Baltimore, and before the men had fiddled around two rounds the spectators were crying to have them removed and disinfected. The Baltimore verdict is that Jack Johnson could whip both men in the ring at once.

NEW COMPANY A GOING CONCERN.

THE PORT ARTHUR WAGON COMPANY, LIMITED, is a new Company, but will commence business under the most favorable auspices, having agreed to take over the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, of Markham, which is a going concern with a production capacity of four thousand wagons per year, and having its entire output for the ensuing year already sold. The intention is to transfer the operations of the Company to a new factory to be erected at Port Arthur.

UNSURPASSED LOCATION OF PLANT.

The location of the new factory is without doubt the finest in Canada, and will be situated on the shore of Thunder Bay at Port Arthur. It is unexcelled for the assembling of materials required in manufacturing wagons and sleighs, and has a commanding position in regard to the facilities for handling its freight by rail and water, which gives the Company a great advantage over its competitors.

CONCESSIONS.

The Company has obtained valuable concessions from the City of Port Arthur, which include a grant of twenty acres of land, a 200-foot dock site, and exemption from taxation for twenty years, except local improvement and school rates. The City of Port Arthur further guarantees bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000.00 at 5% for twenty years.

NEW FACTORY 815 MILES NEARER THE GREAT NORTHWEST MARKET.

The new factory will be fireproof, built in the most modern style, equipped with machinery embodying all the latest improvements, and thoroughly up to date in every detail, with a capacity for turning out 10,000 wagons a year. The advantages derived by the Company in locating at Port Arthur are numerous, the chief one being, perhaps, the enormous saving in freight, Port Arthur being 30 cents per 100 lbs. nearer the market than any other wagon factory in Canada. This alone gives a saving in freight of $3.50 per wagon. Coal can be delivered from the American ports to Port Arthur at a freight rate of 32½ cents per ton as compared with 90 cents per ton to Woodstock and $1.00 to Petrolia.

CONTRACTS.

This Company has a contract with the John Deere Plow Co., Limited, of Winnipeg, for supplying its total requirements of wagons and sleighs. That Company states that its requirements for the year 1911 will be 4,500 wagons and 1,500 sleighs.

The Company has a further contract with the Tudhope, Anderson Company, Ltd., of Winnipeg, to supply it with wagons for a period of five years, with a minimum average of 2,000 wagons per year and a maximum of 5,000 wagons per year.

It is well known that thousands of farmers are annually pouring into the Northwest, and it is confidently estimated that the above requirements will be more than doubled in the near future. Last year an immense number of wagons was imported into Canada and sold in the Northwest, upon which a duty of 25% was paid.

RAW MATERIALS.

This Company will be able to obtain much of its raw material in its immediate vicinity, thereby effecting a saving of many dollars in freight. With all the advantages enumerated, it is certain that within a very short time the plant will be taxed to its full extent.

MANAGEMENT.

The Company has been fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. T. H. Speight as its Manager. He has been associated with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the past eighteen years, and is widely known for his integrity and business ability.

The following certificate has been prepared and certified by Messrs. Jenkins & Hardy, of Toronto, Chartered Accountants:—

15½ Toronto Street,
Toronto, August 11th, 1910.

H. BATEMAN FOX, ESQ.,
Secretary-Treasurer Port Arthur Wagon Co., Limited:

Dear Sir,—We have examined the books of The Speight Wagon Company, Ltd., at Markham, Ont., for the period December 1st, 1909, to July 31st, 1910, and certify that based upon the contract sale prices to the John Deere Plow Company, Limited, the net profit on its sales was 14%.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) JENKINS & HARDY,
Chartered Accountants.

ESTIMATED PROFITS

It is estimated that the sales of wagons, sleighs, wagon parts and trucks for the first year will amount to $378,000. The profit of 14% upon this amount is $52,500.

No estimate has been taken of the saving in freight by reason of manufacturing point being nearer the market, and the closer proximity to points at which lumber can be more advantageously purchased and delivered than at Markham, Petrolia, Woodstock or Chatham, nor of any profits accruing to Company from rentals of dock, etc.

A further saving will also be made by the Company by reason of its freedom from all taxation (except school and local improvement taxes) for a period of twenty years.

(d) The minimum subscription upon which the Directors may proceed to allot shares is a total of five shares. The amount payable upon application is 10%, and upon allotment 15%. (e) The by-laws do not provide for any time or times at which calls may be made upon shares of subscribers. (f) The Company proposes to issue bonds to the extent of $100,000 for twenty years at 5%, guaranteed by the City of Port Arthur. The Company has already allotted 1,500 fully-paid shares of the common stock of the Company for the rights, privileges and franchises agreed to be given by the City of Port Arthur. (g 1) There has been transferred to the Company for the shares above mentioned, all the right, title and interest in and to the following rights, privileges and franchises, namely:—(1) A twenty-acre site within the city limits of Port Arthur, on the waterfront. (2) A 200-foot dock site. (3) The guarantee by the City of Port Arthur of the bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000 at 5%. (4) Freedom from taxation for twenty years, saving and excepting local improvement rates and school rates. (g 2) This Company has also entered into a contract with the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, for the purchase, free from liability, of its real estate, plant, machinery, stock-in-trade, contracts, good-will, patents, and its whole undertaking and assets, except book debts, as a going concern.

The consideration for the transfer of the above assets is seven hundred and fifty shares of the preferred stock of the Port Arthur Wagon Company, and seventy-five thousand dollars in cash, and the Port Arthur Wagon Company, Limited, is also to pay for the actual stock-in-trade of the Speight Wagon Company, Limited, in cash at cost price.

(h) The amount paid or payable as purchase money in shares for the above rights is set out in clause (f) and (g) 1 and 2. No fixed amount has been paid for good-will. (i) The commission paid for subscriptions for stock shall not exceed ten per cent. (j) The estimated amount of preliminary expenses, exclusive of commission, if any, is three thousand dollars. # THE FIFTIETH RICE-HARVEST PICNIC WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Indians at Rice Lake Have a Glorious Repast, Followed by Exciting Sports---Harvest is Nearly Over but the Indians Are Killing Two Birds With One Stone.

Special to The Examiner:

KEENE, SEPT. 28.—The picnic advertised by the Indians as the fiftieth annual rice harvest picnic on Sugar Island was held Friday afternoon, September 23rd, and was, so the Indians say, the best they have ever held. As to this being the fiftieth annual picnic, some of the older men of the band state that this affair was not inaugurated fifty years ago, but was much earlier and that the custom of holding a rice harvest picnic is of much earlier origin. At any rate Friday's celebration was entered into with such enthusiasm that the picnic is still in the prime of its youth and looks good for being continued for a hundred years longer. The steamer "Monarch" brought people to attend the affair from Gore's Landing, Harwood, Keene, Roseneath and Hiawatha.

The crowd was so great that it is a wonder those on the island were able to feed them at all. But they did it and gave the visitors a feast of wild duck soup, black bass, lunge, roast wild duck and wild rice pudding. There were during the afternoon fully three hundred people on the grounds. The Alderville brass band, which is an excellent musical organization, was in attendance and under the direction of Professor Comego discoursed sweet music during the afternoon. An excellent programme of sports was run off, but unfortunately, owing to the delay in getting the sports started, darkness came, and a part of the programme had to be cancelled. Following is a list of the winners of first and second places in the various events.

Senior double canoe race — First Maddon Howard and Alfie Crowe, second Fred Simpson and Johnston Paudash.

Junior double canoe race—First William Smoke and John Smoke, second Ebenezer Blake and Live Smoke.

There were no entries in the ladies' double and single canoe races or in the men's single canoe races.

200 yard dash—First William (Longboat) Smoke, second Smith Comego.

100 yards dash—First Fred Harris, Gore's Landing, second William Smoke, Alderville.

Girls' race—First Lucy Paudash, Hiawatha, second Mary Skipegaw, Alderville.

Putting the shot—First William Smoke, Alderville, second, Alfred Crowe, Hiawatha.

Mr. Fred Simpson, the famous Indian long distance runner, who is camping at the island, ran an exhibition two miles, which was highly appreciated by the many visitors.

Financially, the picnic was a great success as otherwise, and after paying all expenses and donating handsome prizes to the contestants in the various sports, the committee had a handsome surplus.

The steamboat left on the return trip after the sports were over, but a great many of the young people stayed for the dance at night on the "Monarch's" scow, which was left behind, and an enjoyable night's dance was put in. Mr. Arthur Simpson acted as floor manager and Professor Enoch Crowe was fiddler and the dancing was kept up till three o'clock in the morning.

The rice harvest is now nearly over. The rice in the big bed is all done, but in the smaller bed near the shore where it did not ripen so quickly, there is still some to be gathered. None of the Indians have left the island yet, though, as those that are not gathering rice are staying on, putting the grain through the various primitive processes of parching, dancing and windrowing to make it into the marketable article. They are killing two birds with the one stone by working at the rice in the middle of the day and shooting duck in the mornings and evenings in the nearby rice beds.

About the end of next week most of the Indians will likely return to their winter homes.

WOMAN CLIMBS A POLE AND RESCUES LINEMAN

Unconscious Man, Shocked, Hangs by His Safety Belt From One of the Cross Arms.

THRILLING RESCUE

Special to The Examiner.

PUEBLO, COL., SEPT. 28.—The life of James Pfeiffer, a lineman employed by the local traction company, was saved by the quick wit and physical strength of Mrs. James Anderson, a ranch-woman, when he had hung suspended by his safety belt from the crossarm in an unconscious condition supposedly for some hours.

While he was making repairs on a wire which was "dead" the current was turned on at the power station and 2,500 volts passed through Pfeiffer's body, rendering him insensible.

The accident happened sixteen miles from Pfeiffer's lookout station on Turkey Creek.

Mrs. Andersen discovered the unconscious lineman while she passed along the road alone near her home.

Returning to her wagon, she got a hammer, nails and a number of pieces of pine limbs. The limbs she nailed to the pole crosswise and, with a rope over her shoulder, mounted the improvised steps as fast as she nailed them in place. When she arrived at the top the rope was fastened to Pfeiffer's body and thrown over the crossarm of the pole. Mrs. Anderson then lowered Pfeiffer and drove him to his cabin, sixteen miles distant.

A WOMAN WORKS UNDETECTED FOR SIX MONTHS AS A MAN

In Male Apparel She Did the Work of an Undertaker's Assistant —Employer Did Not Discover Her Sex.

HUSBAND DESERTED HER

Examiner Special.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 28.—For six months successfully carrying the disguise of a man, black-eyed twenty-two-yes-old Mrs. Maria Carpita-Cavellar stood last night in Night Court sobbingly admitting her sex.

Wearing a soft, gray felt hat, with a gaudy red band, well fitting coat and trousers and men's shoes, and having her thick black hair neatly and closely clipped, the young woman was arrested about 9 o'clock last night as she got off a Sixth Avenue "L" train at Bleecker Street by Detectives Devoti and Camponensi, who had been awaiting her arrival.

In court she protested that it was no freakishness of mind that had caused her to seek to pass as a man. Necessity, she said, was back of her having put on trousers and applying for employment at man's work. For six months she has been an assistant to John Caingrasso, an undertaker, of No. 169 Sullivan Street.

HELPED LAY OUT DEAD

Her duties were to wash down carriages, feed and groom horses, answer the telephone and occasionally go out with the undertaker and assist him in laying out the dead. Caingrasso said that this part of the work she had never flinched from and that, although he noticed the supposed youth was very soft spoken and that "he" never smoked, chewed tobacco or drank, never once did the employer suspect the sex of his assistant.

The young woman told the detectives that fully six years ago she had married Carlo Cavelli in Italy. He brought her to this country, deserting another sweetheart in Chicago when he married her. There were two children. Cavelli deserted her and the little ones and joined his old sweetheart in Chicago.

And then one night when she was away working her rooms were entered forcibly and her two little children, William, five years old, and Anthony, three, were stolen. She had never been able to get trace of the two boys or of their father since.

PAY SMALL FOR WOMAN'S WORK

She tried to get employment at women's tasks, but did not succeed, or if she did succeed, earned so little as to be unable to support herself. So decided that she could best make a living by working as a man. She got a suit of boy's clothing and sheared off her long, thick, black tresses, afterwards going to a barber in her male attire, who trimmed it neatly without suspecting the sex of his young customer.

Sitting in an Italian restaurant one night she overheard an undertaker telling a friend that he was looking out for a helper. She obtained the man's address and wrote him a letter, using the name of Michael Desposito, applying for the situation. She got it.

In her possession were found two postal card pictures of herself in male attire. In one she wears the uniform of a captain of the Italian artillery. In the other she looks like a young student, since she wears glasses with a black string over one ear and a most studious expression.

She was held for further examination.

HAVELOCK NEWS

Holdsworth.

Fire broke out in the west end of the town on Saturday night about eight o'clock, when Mr. Williard Hubble's residence was burned to the ground. Mr. Hubble had put on a fire in the kitchen stove and had just gone down to one of the stores, when the fire alarm rang out, but before assistance had reached the place, the building was a mass of flames and nothing could be done, but work and save the surrounding buildings. Some of the household goods were saved, but the greater part were lost. He carried an insurance of about $500 on all.

The sad death occurred on Saturday at noon of a highly respected and esteemed citizen in the person of Mrs. Wm. Henshall, who has resided in town for many years, and although she had been ailing for some months past, her death came as a shock to many as her condition was not thought to be so serious. She leaves to mourn the loss of a kind loving wife and mother, her husband and one daughter, Miss Lizzie, to whom the heartfelt sympathy of the whole vicinity is extended in this, their hour of sorrow.

The funeral was private, service being held at the residence, Matheson street on Monday at seven o'clock, p.m., from thence the remains were taken by C.P.R. local train to Toronto Tuesday morning for burial. The floral tributes were many and beautiful, among them being a wreath from the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church, and a cross from the Girl's Guild of St. John's Church, deceased being a lifelong member.

We are glad to report Mr. Allie Rose improving from his recent serious illness.

Miss Adah Holcombe was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Holcombe, at Victoria on Sunday.

Mrs. S. S. Joyce met with a painful accident on Tuesday last, when a horse stepped on her right foot, crushing it badly.

The Southern Jubilee Singers appeared in the Opera House on Monday night before a large audience. The programme was high-class and greatly appreciated by all.

On Friday night of this week the Canadian Jubilee Singers will appear in the Opera House under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. Jack Young of Toronto is spending the week in town.
